Unprecedented Opportunities to Learn About Israel

Beginning on Sunday, March 1st and continuing through Wednesday, March 11th, Savannah will have an extraordinary series of opportunities to hear from a variety of experts about the current situation in Israel and about their experiences in Israel over the years. At this time when Israel is at a critical juncture in its relations with the rest of the world, we have a rare succession of speakers who will address the human, academic and political ramifications of the constantly changing state of affairs in Israel.

On Sunday, March 1st, at 7:30pm, the JEA Speaker Series presents former ABC Television executive Yale Roe, author of I Followed My Heart to Jerusalem. In this candid memoir, Roe recounts the life-changing effects of his decision to make aliyah with his family to Jerusalem. He recounts how he and his family came to terms with the unfamiliar language, laws, and cultural expectations of the modern State of Israel and how their frustrations even verged on trauma during the Yom Kippur War in 1973, when many of Roe's new neighbors and friends lost sons, husbands and fathers. Still, Roe firmly stood by his decision of living in the land of his ancestors.

The next weekend, Congregation Agudath Achim's Scholar-in-Residence program will be held on March 6-8, 2009. This year's guest speaker is renowned Professor Kenneth Stein, Director of the Institute for the Study of Modern Israel at Emory University. Throughout the weekend Professor Stein will be speaking on the following topics: The Essence of Zionism and Israel's Origins (Friday, services at 6pm); the Intellectual Assault on Israel (Saturday morning, services at 9:30am); and Israel and the Obama Administration (Sunday, 10:00am at JEA).

At Emory University in Atlanta, Dr. Stein is the William E. Schatten Professor of Contemporary Middle Eastern History, Political Science and Israeli Studies. Since coming to Emory in 1977, he founded and developed the International Studies Center and was the first director of the Carter Center (1983-1986). Professor Stein is the author of numerous books and articles. Among them are Making Peace Among Arabs and Israelis: Lessons from Fifty Years and continuing...
Faces of Israel
By Maia Koiller

We just hosted a panel of Shlichim in Savannah. The shlichim all came from Florida: Gainesville, Pensacola, and West Palm Beach. We went to a couple of local Universities: Savannah State University, and Georgia Southern University. We met with the GSU Hillel and were very fortunate to meet the Jewish community through programs with the three synagogues. We decided on a name for this panel, calling it “Faces of Israel.” We realized that we are a group of people coming from different backgrounds who share passion for Israel. The purpose of this project was to talk more about the life in Israel, especially its multicultural aspects.

For four days, we woke up, took a lap top and went to different programs. It really felt like we were a delegation. The panels were very well received and people asked us lots of interesting and challenging questions. We spoke about ourselves and the stories of our families. We told how in 1948, when Israel declared independence, there were only about 600,000 Jews, and the importance of immigration to Israel. Of the four of us, I am a first generation Israeli and only one other was more than second generation and only on one side of her family. And we told about how small Israel is – most people didn’t realize that Israel will fit almost 7 times inside of Georgia.

The more we talked, we learned more about our own identity as Israelis, and our thoughts went in new directions and sometimes the points of view were new even to us. At Savannah State University we felt like all the “walls” fell down. We had a genuinely honest conversation with the students and professors. We

“We have different challenges, difficulties, disagreements and problems - but also a lot of achievements. What is beautiful is that at the end of the day, we all hope for a brighter tomorrow together.”

We talked about everything, even topics that are painful in Israeli society and our audience really opened up, and also spoke about the wounds in their lives. At Georgia Southern we enjoyed talking to professors and students, and it was so good to get to know better the members of Hillel there. And off course it is always good to be surrounded by the warmth of the community. Maor (the Shaliach from Pensacola) told Yifat, our supervisor at the Jewish Agency in Israel, that this was the most meaningful experience he had this year. And I was so happy to hear it, because I know it was special to all of us.

It is not an easy time for Israel. We have just learned that Netanyahu from the Likud party will build the coalition of the government, but the “borders” of the political map are far from final. What kind of coalition will there be? What is the best way to handle the security situation? What will be with the ceasefire in the Gaza Strip? What will happen to Gilad Shalit, our soldier that was captured by Hamas? What will happen to our economy, health and education? It is clear that the citizens are asking these questions, though society is not clear about what is the right answer. We had 34 parties running for these elections. Every one wants to be represented.

At the panels with the shlichim, the more we talked between us, with students and with people from the community, the more we learned that the Israeli experience is different for all of us. The important thing is the bond and the love we have for the country, something we always share with the Jewish communities outside of Israel. It is the flame in our hearts. Israel is not a perfect country. It symbolizes different things for different people. We have different challenges, difficulties, disagreements and problems - but also a lot of achievements. What is beautiful is that at the end of the day, we all hope for a bright tomorrow, together. Thanks to all who helped me coordinate these programs and made them into a huge success.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Savannah Jewish Federation,

The Executive Board and staff of EOA Savannah-Chatham County Area, Incorporated would like to thank you for participating in its 37th Martin Luther King, Jr. Program. With your attendance, we accomplished our goal of recognizing citizens of our community for their work in Civil Rights and Human Relations. “IF WE FORGET - WHO WILL REMEMBER?”

Thanks again for your support and we will keep you informed of future EOA activities and programs.

Sincerely,

John H. Finney

To the Editor:

A Palestinian State, even if formed, is unlikely to be economically sustainable. In fact, there are those who argue it would increase Palestinian dependence upon Israel for employment.

More radical Arabs/Muslims seek the destruction of Israel and Israel’s destruction is possible if Iran becomes capable of and seeks to destroy it. Egypt decides to re-arm and renounce its tepid peace agreement and/or the West decides to abandon the idemocracy in the region. The former is a growing existential possibility the second a potential future threat and the last is not unthinkable.

There are also reasons why the above may not come to pass: Israel is strong and unwilling to participate in its own demise, surrounding Arab nations have never really bought into the idea of a Palestinian State and finally abandoning Israel creates a moral dilemma even for reckless relativists.

However, in a world that embraces relativism there is little room, if any, for moral absolutes - politically correct hypocrisy rules. By twisted and amoral logic, the world appears to constantly judge Israel unlike it would/does other nationals.

Radical Islamist propaganda dictates any response by Israel, to wanton attacks, must be proportional and an appeasing world buys into this garbage by demanding Israel cease firing, return its troops to its borders and await another series of unprovoked rocket launches, i.e. pathologically toothless agreements.

The world has constantly pulled atatham by demanding Israel cease firing, return its troops to its borders and await another series of unprovoked rocket launches, i.e. pathologically toothless agreements.

And to what avail? More unwarranted and brutal terrorist attacks perpetrated by a democratically elected thuggish government of haters sworn to Israel’s destruction who act, also, in total disregard of their own citizenry’s welfare. Worse, Palestinian text books are filled with lies designed to hurl their own future generations into more hapless plights.

Hamas has complete control of Gaza and what have they done for their own people - less than nothing. They have devoted resources to rearming, digging tunnels, sending rockets into Israel and to what end? More tragedy for their people and the region.

And what has Egypt done to uphold its commitment to Israel to prevent Hamas re-arming - nothing! Yet, the U.N. blames Israel and accuses it of disproportionality when defending itself against an enemy that hides behind its own children and fires from homes, mosques and hospitals while building weapon tunnels

Community Judaism: A Course Guide

If you are reading this, you probably don't need to. If you have opened up your Savannah Jewish News to an inside page and are actually reading the features and opinion columns, then you are already among those who care enough about our community to keep informed about it. Well done! You have passed Community Judaism 101.

Some of you have taken the next step. You have realized that having a Jewish community means supporting it. That means supporting the Federation Campaign, paying for a membership at the JEA, joining a synagogue and supporting Jewish charities. It means supporting community activities, and as many as you can: the film series and speaker series at the JEA, the fundraisers at all the synagogues, the benefits of both of the community-supported Jewish schools. You have come to understand that all Jewish activities invigorate and strengthen the health of our community and deserve support. You have passed Community Judaism 200.

There is an old adage that it is expensive to be Jewish. You know what? It's true. Even with over $300,000 in Savannah Jewish Federation funds for the JEA and nearly $200,000 for our schools, JEA membership fees and school tuition fees don't come close to covering the expenses of these organizations. We are all indebted to those of you who give so generously to both the Federation campaign and our other Jewish causes.

There is another level of participation. This is the 300 level course. I spend a lot of my time asking for money. When all is said and done, I have had to understand that all Jewish activities invigorate and strengthen the health of our community and deserve support. You have passed Community Judaism 200.

Finally, I would like to encourage you to enroll in “Advanced Community Judaism.” Get involved in leadership. Become engaged in an organization you care about: Hadassah, a school, a synagogue — your choice. Your efforts will be noticed quickly. Soon you will be in a position where you are part of important decisions that shape your organization’s future. That is the kind of experienced leadership we need for boards of the JEA and Federation, particularly in times like these — people who can bring their own skills and experience to bear on community-wide issues.

So if you already are doing all these things, thank you. Please just pass this along to someone else. However, on the off chance that you are not participating to the fullest in the life of our Jewish community, yet are interested enough to have read this, please consider stepping up to the plate and taking on your responsibility. Financial support, participation, leadership — our Jewish community needs all three.

Writing your Federation check is no longer enough to have read this; please consider giving your time to volunteering for the Federation and Jewish community activities. The Savannah Jewish Federation and its Jewish Family Services. With appropriate grace, JFS provides guidance, referral, and emergency funds to help people get through the hard times. It is what we have done for decades and will continue to do in the future: When the need is there, Federation provides the help.

Most often, people in need are unknown to us in our Jewish community. But you can be sure they exist. There are people who are hungry, there are people who struggle every day for the basic needs in life. They are someone's Grandmother, Father, and children. Your generous support of the Federation and Jewish Family Services provides a lifeline, a safety net for the aged, the vulnerable, and the needy.

The Safety Net

As we come to the close of the Savannah Jewish Federation’s Annual Campaign, I have been reflecting on many of the discussions with contributors. When a solicitation is made it always centers on “what our donors want,” judging by the response to the United States, in Israel, and in 56 countries around the world. I am always impressed by the amount of passion that people have — we need to keep all the money here in Savannah, our community needs it” versus “we have a responsibility to help our brethren in Israel and throughout the world.”

So little of our time is spent on discussing social service needs right here in Savannah. I guess it is because there is a history of helping those in our community in the most dignified and quiet way. People receive assistance whenever they are from. When someone approaches Federation’s Jewish Family Services for help, the calls go out, people respond, and help is provided. I can’t help feeling that we may not be sharing the story — a very important one.

Imagine how difficult it is to ask for help in a small community like ours. Yet, it happens all the time. A 62-year-old man is laid off from his hourly job, he has no savings, no family, and his rent is due. Who can he turn to? A couple is trying to move their elderly father from Chicago into congregate housing in Savannah so he can be near his children. They have no idea of where to go. Where do they turn to? A family is traveling from Florida on their way to Maryland when the father loses his wallet with all his money and identification. A single mother of two with no health insurance needs help with medical expenses. Who do they turn to?

They all turn to the Federation and its Jewish Family Services. With appropriate grace, JFS provides guidance, referral, and emergency funds to help people get through the hard times. It is what we have done for decades and will continue to do in the future: When the need is there, Federation provides the help.

About Israel

Years of Negotiating Experience, “Israel’s Disengagement from the Gaza Strip: Precedents, Motivations, and Outcomes,” and more recently “My Problem with Jimmy Carter’s Book.”

Friday night’s service will be followed by dinner. The cost is $18 per person and $5 for children under age 10. The community is invited. Please RSVP to AA Synagogue at 352-4737. This program is sponsored by the Ernie and Mary Weitz Friedman Fund for the Study of Conservative Judaism and the Tenenbaum Family Lecture Fund in Judaic Studies of the Tam Institute for Jewish Studies at Emory University.

Eitan Herskovitz, the brother of the Chosson, interrupted his studies at Yeshivas Kodshim in Jerusalem to celebrate with his brother at his Auf Rul in Miami Beach and to join with his family for the week of festivities. In addition, the Kallah’s siblings, Miryam, Batsheva, Yehuda, Sholom, Yona and Chayim Tzvi, were also present at the wedding. In the week following the wedding, Sheva Brachos dinners in honor of Ariel and Penina were hosted in Cleveland, Savannah and Miami Beach.

Ariel studied at the Derech Institute of Torah Studies, a division of Ohr Neve Yerushalayim in Israel, for two years and earned a Bachelor of Talmudic Law degree from the Talmudic University of Florida. In addition to continuing his Judaic studies, he is a graduate of Florida International University with a Bachelor of Science degree in Industrial and Systems Engineering. Penina studied at Neve Yerushalayim in Israel and has been a preschool teacher for the last five years, most recently at the Hebrew Academy of Cleveland. The couple resides in Miami Beach, Florida.

For the wedding, Sheva Brachos dinner was held in Cleveland, Savannah and Miami Beach.

On Thanksgiving morning for the past twenty plus years, the Goldstein family has brought both friends and kin together for a good old fashioned game of football where men, women, and children alike participate. “The best part about it,” says matriarch Melvyn Goldstein, “is that any age is included” — even papa Melvyn Goldstein gets on the field as all-time center. The kids get out there, the adults get out there, and even though there might be some soreness for a few days afterwards, everyone has a great time.

Marvin Walter Arkin (1922-2009)

Marvin Arkin, President of the Jewish Educational Alliance from 1970-1972, died Saturday, February 7, 2009, surrounded by his family. A native of Savannah, Arkin graduated from the Georgia Institute of Technology with a degree in Textile Engineering. After graduation, he served in the Navy as a Lieutenant in the Pacific theatre during World War II. When the war ended, he joined his brother-in-law, Ben Kantsiper, inco-owning and operating Alan Barry’s men’s clothing store, a fixture on Broughton Street for 43 years. As well as having been President of the JEA, Arkin was a life-long member of Congregation B’nai Brith Jacob and was a member of the Downtown Merchant’s Association as well as the Jaycees.

He was preceded in death by his wife of 49 years, Helen Paderewsky Arkin; his parents, Benjamin and Yetta Arkin; sister Claudia Arkin Kantsiper, and brothers-in-law Benjamin Kantsiper and Harold Seeman, all of Savannah.

He is survived by his daughter, Beth (Richard) Bosman of Largo, FL, and his son, Steven (Liz) Arkin of Savannah; grandchildren, Cindy Bosman, Zachary Arkin and Sophie Arkin; great-grandson, Elijah Smith; sister, Marilyn Arkin Seeman; brother, Dr. Murray (June) Arkin; as well as many nieces and nephews. Arkin was buried on Sunday, February 8th, in Bonaventure Cemetery. The family requests that remembrances be made to the Arkin-Clark Garden Fund of the Jewish Educational Alliance, 511 Abercorn St., Savannah, GA 31405.

Gale Hirsh’s Hamentaschen Recipe

4 Eggs
1 Cup Oil
1-1/4 Cup Sugar
2 tsp Vanilla
5-1/2 Cups Flour
3 tsp Baking powder
1/2 tsp Salt

Fillings: Apricot, Prune, and/or Raspberry (I use Solo brand ready-made)

Beat eggs. Add oil, sugar and vanilla. Separately combine the flour, baking powder and salt. Gradually add the dry ingredients to the egg mixture. Mix thoroughly until smooth. Roll out dough on floured surface. Cut into 3” rounds. Place filling in center of each circle and then pinch to make three corners. Bake for 25 minutes at 350 degrees. Yield: 4-5 dozen. Enjoy!

What can we take from Purim in our time?

One of the happiest days in the Jewish calendar, Purim, celebrates the Jewish people’s victory over those who tried to oppress us, the victory of good over evil. The holiday is characterized by public recitation of the Book of Esther, giving gifts of food and drink (mishloach manot) to family and friends, giving charity to the poor, and enjoying a festive meal (se’darat Purim); other customs include drinking lots of wine, eating delicious cookies called Hamentaschen (ozney Haman in Hebrew) and wearing costumes. It’s also common that communities put on parades, and children perform plays and parodies of the holiday, called Purim-shpiels.

The story, in a nutshell, is as follows: the royal advisor to King Ahasuerus, Haman (boooo!), planned to kill the Jews because Mordechai (the Queen’s uncle) would not bow down to him as Haman passed by in the street. These terrible plans were foiled by Mordechai, who told Queen Esther (his niece) to make sure this would not happen. After Queen Esther told the King to protect the Jews from Haman’s evil decree against them, the Jews were instead allowed to destroy Haman and his allies; and the day after this battle was designated as a day of great feasting and rejoicing.

An interesting fact about Purim is that the Megillah (the written version of the story we read to commemorate this occasion) does not mention God’s name even once!

It may come as a surprise to many that the city where this took place, Shushan, still exists today as the city of Shush, in Iran, and holds the Prophet Daniel’s remains. About two hundred miles away, in Hamadan (in Iranian Kurdistan) lay the graves of Queen Esther and Mordechai. Jews, Christians, and Muslims alike regard Hamadan as a holy site.

Is it a coincidence that Haman wanted to get rid of the Jews in the same place that in modern times is the place where the President of Iran calls for the eradication of the “Zionist entity” and questions the whether the Holocaust took place?

Purim is a time to celebrate our victory over our oppressors and that the Jewish people are still here and determined to keep our traditions and heritage alive.

A Movie & Beer!

Adults 21 and Over — Join us at the JEA for a movie & a beer!

Mar. 12th — Circus Palestina - A dark comedy chronicling the trials and tribulations of a small circus troop who visits the West Bank. When a lion escapes the camp, an unlikely alliance is forged between a Russian lion tamer, an Israeli Sergeant and a young Arab boy, who join forces in an effort to find the beast before it can injure any unsuspecting townspeople.

Mar. 26th — The Forgotten Refugees - This film chronicles the exodus of Jews from Arab countries during the 20th century. It explores the attrition of Middle Eastern and North African Jewish communities. Employing testimony of survivors from Egypt, Yemen, Libya, Iraq and Iran, the film recounts the stories that a million individuals have carried with them for so long.

Segments on the contributions of Middle Eastern Jews to politics, business and music, testify to the rich cultures which fleeing Jews left behind. The film weaves personal stories with dramatic footage of rescue missions, images of exodus and resettlement, and analysis by scholars, to tell the story of how and why the Arab world’s Jewish population declined from one million in 1945 to several thousand today.

Middle Eastern snacks will be provided.

Afterwards, there will be a short program about personal stories of families who left their homeland during this exodus.

All movies shown at 7:00 pm
FREE to Members with ID
FREE Beer, wine, beverages and popcorn

March Artist—Ian Aleksander Adams

Born in 1986 in New York City and raised in Massachusetts, Ian Aleksander Adams fled to the south to study art and escape the ice. Among other things, he creates large scale information centric installation work and tiny word-light photo books. Ian’s work has been featured internationally in exhibitions, publications and competitions. Recently he’s shown in Paris during the PX3 exhibition and in NYC through Commercial Photographers International and the Adobe Design Achievement Awards. This year he graduates from Savannah College of Art and Design with a BFA in photography, after which he plans to pursue his MFA and a teaching career. Hosen Trauma Center, Sderot

Since January 2001, when Qassam rockets started falling on the blue-collar development town of Sderot, between 15 and 25 percent of Sderot’s population has fled for safer conditions. In all, close to ten thousand rockets have rained indiscriminately, killing twenty five Israelis. But most people in Sderot cannot afford to leave or are unable to sell their homes (prices have fallen up to 30 percent). Twenty to thirty percent of area businesses have had to relocate or shut down, and children and their grades have suffered.

Sderot, a town of 23,000 has been on the receiving end of most of the Qassam rockets that have fallen on the southwest Negev region, close to the tumultuous Gaza Strip. In attempts to alleviate the danger, the Israeli government installed an early warning “Red Color” alarm system to warn citizens of impending rocket attacks, though it does not sound on cold or rainy days when radar cannot detect the rocket launches. Citizens have only fifteen seconds to reach shelter after the sounding of an alarm. The alarm system has been used thousands of times since it was instituted, resulting in a staggering number of cases of shock and Post-traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) in the Sderot area. Some statistics cite that up to thirty percent of the adult population of Sderot suffers from PTSD; in addition an estimated seventy to ninety percent of the area’s children suffer from PTSD symptoms.

As part of its allocations for 2008-2009, the Savannah Jewish Federation made a directed allocation of $4,000 for immediate needs in Sderot and selected the Hosen Trauma Center as the recipient of this grant.

In June 2006, Sderot municipal employees and local mental health clinic workers came up with the idea of opening Hosen in coordination with the Health Ministry and other government ministries to answer needs created by the increasingly volatile situation. But the Center was soon in danger of closing due to a serious lack of funding. However, in 2007, the Health Ministry agreed to continue funding the part-time staff that tirelessly treats hundreds of patients each month for shock and PTSD.

The Hosen staff goes on call immediately after Qassam rocket strikes hit the area. Having the Center in Sderot allows victims to be treated immediately and locally, as opposed to having to wait to be transferred to Barzilai hospital in nearby Ashqelon (Hosen’s ‘parent’ facility).

More than one hundred children currently are undergoing long-term mental health therapy at Hosen. But Dalia Yosef, the director of Hosen, says the number of children aged one to six who are in need of long-term treatment is increasing daily. An im-

A Different Perspective

By Sophie Nagelberg

I went on my Birthright trip to Israel at the end of December 2008 through early January 2009: a time with particularly high political tension. On our last night in Jerusalem, the group took a bus over to Ben Yehuda Street, which was crowded with tourists wandering in and out of the many shops and restaurants. Everyone was in high spirits, excited to finally purchase cheap souvenirs with shekels no one actually bothered to convert. What I couldn’t help but notice, however, was the fretful look on one of the soldier’s faces. Her name was Hadas and her eyes were glued to the screen of her cell phone as she rapidly sent and received messages. Her friends were about to enter the Gaza Strip and this was her last chance to contact them; to know they were okay. This was the night the invasion began.

This girl was just my age, though her life was nothing close to resembling mine. As she put on a smile for us American college students on winter vacation, decked out in her IDF uniform, I felt a wave of naivety sweeping through my body. I think few of my fellow travelers were aware of what exactly was going on, and it seemed our Israeli guides spared us much information to avoid any worry. My mood quickly became solemn. I thought about how this soldier must feel, how the other soldiers accompanying us must feel. I thought about the soldiers about to risk their lives for Israel, about their friends and families. I thought about my life back home in America, and I felt true admiration for these young soldiers.

As I bit my tongue, I thought about the pride I had in the IDF soldiers. My trip to Israel provided me with the opportunity to get to know these soldiers who courageously fight to defend the Jewish land. It is unfortunate that this boy cannot meet some of the Israelis that I met, much like I met his family. Then he would see the good that exists in the hearts of the Jews like I see the good in the hearts of his family.

Savannah BBYO Has Had a Busy Few Months!

By Joanne Kooden

David Finn AZA and Wexler/Clark BBG sent twenty one members to the annual Southern Region convention in the North Georgia Mountains this past November. It’s the one time during the year Dixie Council comes together with Atlanta Council for a convention of top notch programming, Shabbat services and activities, and individual chapter competitions. We are proud to say that for the second year in a row, our David Finn guys beat out all the competition (including the numerous chapters in Atlanta and throughout Dixie Council) to win first place in overall chapter competition.

This past December, Savannah BBYO hosted 60 kids for our annual Sweetheart/Beau Dance weekend. Shabbat services and programming were held Friday night at the home of Barney Sadler, and Saturday morning services were held at the home of Caroline Eichholz. The Saturday night “Dixie Council Country Club” themed dance was held at the JEA where the David Finn boys crowned Sheeri Bornstein as their 2009 Sweetheart, and the Wexler/Clark girls crowned Matt Klugman as their 2009 Beau. After breakfast Sunday morning at the JEA, the kids said goodbye to their friends from Charleston, Augusta, and Columbia who had come to town for this fun-filled weekend.

In January, we sent 15 kids to Columbia for a “Chai School Weekend” that included an all night danceathon which empty into them.

When the world comes to its senses, renounces hypocrisy, ceases applying double standards and quits saving Palestinians from their own self-defeating behavior then, and only then, will there be any hope of peace and justification for contemplating statehood.

Israel has given up land for peace, land it captured and then occupied in wars it did not seek. No peace came. When will appeasing stop? When it becomes an accepted, irrefutable belief that feeding bullies only serves to increase their appetite.

Perhaps then reality will dictate solutions that are currently beyond contemplation and enactment.

Dear Savannah Jewish Federation,

Thank you for your generous gift to the World Union for Progressive Judaism, designed for the Israel Re that raised over $1,800 for the American Joint Distribution Committee (JDC). Columbia’s Sweetheart/Beau dance, and the annual AZA intra-council basketball tournament. Congratulations to our David Finn boys who won the basketball tournament (and bragging rights) for the first time in four years!

On February 1st, our Savannah AZA and BBG chapters held a super Superbowl party at the home of Matt Klugman. Over 20 kids attended, and stuffed themselves with pizza and snacks, played “the squares,” and watched a very exciting Superbowl XLIII!

Next up will be Spring Convention, at Seabrook Island, SC, March 13th-15th, and the first ever Southeast BBYO Mega convention, April 17th-18th at Camp Barney Medintz in Cleveland, GA. This convention will include BBYO kids from Memphis, Nashville, Knoxville, Birmingham, New Orleans, and Atlanta as well as Dixie Council. With three different regions and ten different cities, it’s sure to be an exciting weekend! For more information on these and other BBYO activities, please contact Joanne Kooden, THREEED@aol.com.

Meet Community Member Extraordinaire, Toby Hollenberg
By Jane Kahn

What Toby Hollenberg has accomplished during her 11 years in Savannah leaves the rest of us breathless.

She has thrown herself into so many worthwhile projects and taken on leadership roles in so many non-profit organizations that her hundreds of friends wonder how she has time for her activity of choice, her grandchildren.

She does that, too, often doing first-string babysitting for daughter Melissa’s and her husband Jeff’s two young daughters. Jacinta is 5 and Ellie is 3.

How do you come into town and accomplish so much? “It’s what I do. It’s what I have always done,” she says, simply, explaining that her husband’s job (Steve was with GE) required relocating many times through the years. Savannah was their tenth corporate move. “Moving around the country as we did, I have to take the first step.” Toby’s successful modus operandi was to look around a community, find the things that interested her and get involved.

Her involvement in a project practically guarantees its success. She thinks in channels that haven’t been tried and she brings new insights into projects already in the works.

For starters, the ambassador relocation program of the Savannah Jewish Federation has depended on her organizational skills. That program contributed to Melissa and Jeff’s move to Savannah. It not only helps newcomers make the decision to move to Savannah, but it shepherds them through the entire process. Toby’s enthusiasm, and been-there-herself empathy, sees it through. (Since the program got underway, there have been hundreds of inquiries, and some 40 families have moved here.) And it’s the centerpiece of Toby’s involvement as a member of the Federation’s Board of Governors.

At Mickve Israel she was co-president of Sisterhood, working her way through the many projects that organization supports—outreach and membership, Temple docents, Backpack Buddies, Jewish Food Festival, and currently, Nominating Committee. She also serves on the Temple Board.

Next year will be her third year at the helm of Memorial University Health Center’s Waiting on a Cure luncheon, which annually raises some $75,000 to benefit Cancer research here.

“I guess I am a communicator,” she shrugs, implying no big deal. This energetic volunteer keeps her phone constantly on and when she’s not—check your e-mail—she’s sending out organization emails. Toby goes out of her way to stay in touch with hundreds of friends, mostly “new” friends in Savannah, but also with people she has known around the country.

And this enthusiastic non-stop talker is an organizer. She ticks off her moves, remembering her activities: In Connecticut, she was president of the League of Women Voters; in Houston, as a stay-at-home mom, she was involved with New Neighbors, in Rome, GA, in a program to help at risk kids with homework; in Kansas City, mental health; in St. Louis, Jewish Family Services and their temple; in New Jersey, educational programs for teachers. That’s just some of them.

While Steve was undergoing treatment for a fast moving pancreatic cancer, the couple came to grips with the tragedies of the disease. Steve wondered, “How do people afford this if they don’t have insurance?” How do they face the chemotherapy and radiation when they are not able to pay for pain medication, nausea medication, antibiotics or special braces and equipment? He concluded, “I want to help them.”

Six months after Steve’s death in 2004, Toby established the Steven and Melissa Hollenberg Memorial Fund to help needy cancer patients at Memorial’s Anderson Cancer Institute. “I can’t do all of their problems,” Toby says, but the Fund has helped patients, screened by Memorial, more than 1,000 times with the little extras they cannot afford. For them, “it’s just knowing someone’s there to help.”

Toby has found Savannah to be very welcoming, “if you embrace it,” she says emphatically. And, she advises, “since it is an old, established community, don’t try to tell them how you did it” (up north). Toby was born in Brooklyn and raised on a chicken farm in New Jersey by two step-mothers. Her mother died when she was 7—not an easy childhood.

“The best way to enhance the value of your life is to get involved,” she suggests.

As for Toby, she is the first to say that “I get as much from volunteering as I give. I’m now living a life that is so full of blessings.”
Thoughts from Rambam

Tuesday morning, February 3, without warning, an announcement was made and suddenly over the loud speaker the song "Hokey Pokey" was playing. The whole school was out of their classrooms hokey pokeying away! This was a student council event planned to instill some school spirit on the spot! It worked! The winners for the most participation were the Ram b a m faculty!

It was snow day in the 4th class; everyone was bundled up and there was a snow storm in the classroom. Somehow, someway, Mrs. Diane Robin son, the 4y teacher had snow blowing from a fan! The children had a blast and nobody suffered from frost bite.

Rambam Day School had five winners for the school Science Fair which is judged by outside professionals. First Place winners; Mandy Salmon, Tzvi Rosen, Lena Hirsch, Hannah Slotin and Jared Samuels will go to the city Science Fair and compete for the state Science Fair.

Seventh and Eighth Graders have made a dessert cookbook. There are some delicious desserts in the cookbook; banana split, chocolate balls, cookie ice-cream cake, frosty freezes mud pie in a cup and many more! The cookbooks are on sale in the school office. Each recipe is demonstrated with a picture created by the students and the cover design was created by Lena Hirsch.

Enjoy the pictures below and come visit Rambam.

Shalom School and the Spirit of Giving

Dear Readers: During these past months, I have written to you at length about Shalom School’s current CHAI Curriculum, which was introduced last year after considerable study by our Board and its curriculum committee chaired by Tricia Gaggenheim. It is time to share with you the sorts of experiences that go on in our classrooms. The following are the words of our wonderful third grade teacher Sarah Kovensky. Sarah grew up in Savannah, and is the daughter of Drs. Martin and Doris Greenberg. She graduated with a Bachelor of Arts and a Master of Arts in Teaching from The Johns Hopkins University and has been a teacher with Shalom School for 11 years. Sarah is married to Seth Kovensky, a financial planner with Live Oak Financial Services, and they are the proud parents of Hannah and Alexander. Here are her words:

"The Third Grade curriculum is filled with the idea that anyone, no matter what age, can do his or her part to make the world more kadosh or holy. We follow this idea through the Torah, avodah, and g’milut chasidim strands of the Chai curriculum. The overarching idea is that learning Torah is a lifelong pursuit that anyone can take part in, and that by understanding it, we can help to make the world a better place.

In our Torah studies we have touched on the concepts of keeping kosher, observing Shabbat, caring for others, and taking care of the earth. Students have worked in small groups, or chevruta, to learn from each other the significance of things like the section of Pirkei Avot that tells us not to put a stumbling block in front of a blind person or curse a deaf person. Moreover, the students learned the importance of telling a person when they’ve done something wrong in a way that you don’t end up doing something wrong yourself.

The students have addressed many of these concepts through writing poetry, drawing pictures, and discussing them with their peers.

As one student said, “What we’re learning is to treat others the way we want to be treated,” which I believe is the basis of it all. We want to make the world better for others and our selves, and the steps to make that happen begin with each of us.”

Until next time, with more from our teachers.

B’S’Halom,
Jules Kerness
Principal

On the Personal Side

Joel Zuckerman, local writer, speaker and “vagabond golfer,” was honored with first place in the book category for 2008 at the International Network of Golf 16th Annual Media Awards. Joel picked up the honor at the recent PGA Merchandise Show in Orlando for his highly-acclaimed book, Pete Dye Golf Courses, Fifty Years of Visionary Designs, which Golf World magazine called “a must read for Dye fans as well those who desire insight into what it takes to design a world-class golf course.”
Yom HaShoah Yellow Candles on Sale

The Savannah Jewish Federation again will join families throughout North America by participating in the Yom HaShoah yellow candle program. Every family in the Savannah Jewish community is encouraged to light at least one yellow candle on the night of Tuesday, April 21, 2009, to observe Yom HaShoah.

Yom HaShoah candles are a highly visible symbol for keeping the flame alive. Their color recalls the yellow stars Jews were forced to wear in Nazi-occupied Europe, but their flame inspires hope that we can make our world a tolerant place to live.

The Savannah Jewish Federation will apply the funds raised from the sale of these candles towards the establishment of a library to be housed inside the JEA. This library will contain books and videos pertaining to the Holocaust that will be available for loan to local educators in the hopes of preserving the history and memories of the Holocaust.

The Yom HaShoah yellow candles will be sold at the JEA for $9 each. Please purchase your candle to be lit on Tuesday evening April 21 and plan to join our annual Yom HaShoah program at 7 pm at the JEA.
