Meet the 2012 Annual Campaign Leadership

Incoming Savannah Jewish Federation President, Jeffrey Laskey is proud to announce the 2012 Campaign Leadership. “I am excited to have six unbelievably dedicated individuals who have each committed to campaign leadership for two years. I am confident that with Campaign Co Chairs, Merry Bodziner and Toby Hollenberg we will engage more individuals and raise more money for the important work of the Federation.”

The Women’s Campaign will be led by Arlene Ratner and Vivian Slotin. The Men’s Campaign will be led by Jerald Gottlieb and Harvey Lebos. Meet the Campaign leadership:

Merry Bodziner
Overall Co- Chair, 2012 Savannah Jewish Federation Campaign

Toby Hollenberg
Overall Co-Chair 2012 Savannah Jewish Federation Campaign

Cocktails to Cupcakes – A Magical Community Event

While the JEA Annual Great Gala, “Cocktails to Cupcakes” was held just over two weeks ago, the community is still buzzing from the wonderful evening. One attendee stated, “I haven't seen such a wonderful event at the Alliance in fifteen years. It helped confirm how important the JEA is to the entire community.”

The JEA Main Ballroom was beautifully decorated by Jenn Rich and Skye Cossio who created centerpieces out of oversized wine glasses (donated specially for this event by Millie Melaver). When entering into the room, there were wonderful passed hors d'oeuvres. Chef Trace Weitz and Terri Dressel outdid themselves with their creative offerings, delicious dinner, and inventive cupcakes. The bar was ably staffed by David Silverman and his folks from Spankys. Michael Kooden and our friends at United Distributors went above and beyond in supplying the liquor at a huge discount—with much of it being donated! Andy Kramer did a wonderful job as our auctioneer.

This years Gala featured the live auction, a silent auction, and for the first time, a “Tricky Tray Raf.” The 18 themed Tricky Tray baskets were overflowing with amazing prizes. The value of the baskets ranged from $550 to over $1,300. These stunning baskets could not have been possible without numerous generous donations from the community, and the creative assembly work of Michelle Allan, Morgan McGhie, Digi Ruben, Lauren Weitz, Meredith Rothouse, and Amanda Reeves who all worked tirelessly on the baskets, descriptions, and program. What made it all possible was the hard work of our solicitors who went door to door to get the donations. Solicitors included...
What is Apogee and how does it help Rambam Day School?

By Freddie Rabhan

Apogee is a Student Scholarship Organization affiliated with the Georgia Education Tax Credit program. The law allows all individual and select corporate taxpayers to receive tax credit for donations to SSOs. The funds contributed are designated for the direct benefit of Rambam Day School and are used to provide financial assistance to eligible students. There is a statewide cap of $50 million dollars for this program each tax year.

Rambam needs your help and we ask you to take advantage of this tax credit opportunity! With this tax credit, you are able to direct money you are already paying to the State of Georgia to be used for financial assistance for eligible students. This is your chance to keep your state tax dollars in our community. This is your opportunity! With this tax credit you are able to direct money you are already paying to the State of Georgia to be used for financial assistance for eligible students. This is your chance to keep your state tax dollars in our community.

The entire evening was coordinated by Anna Berwitz who did a spectacular job balancing suppliers, volunteers, and professionals in creating a special evening that raised close to $45,000 to support the vital programs and services offered by the JEA.

Almost 300 tickets were purchased for the event, and while final numbers were not available at “deadline,” it is estimated that this magical evening raised close to $45,000 to support the vital programs and services offered by the JEA.

Several new options are available to make donating easier. As long as the statewide cap of $50 million dollars has not been met, donors may submit a single approval form and then pay the full commitment in installments over a period as long as the payments are complete by December 15, 2011. In addition, after a donor receives approval for their donation, payments can be made by credit card.

For further information, please visit Rambam’s website, www.rambamdayschool.org, and click on “Giving” and then “Georgia Education Tax Credit” or contact Freddie Rabhan (335-9805) or Judy Hirsch (354-7780). Savannah Benefits from Hadassah Centennial. This is the year to enjoy and support Hadassah events as President Joanna Rich and her board implement programs locally that cover all interests and ages based on members’ recommendations, the national office has reduced lifetime membership to only $100 until December 31, 2011, and the membership is planning to go to Israel as a group to celebrate the centennial in October, 2012! Activities this year begin on Sept. 18th as new Savannahian Dr. Yaron Perry talks about being a staff surgeon in Hadassah at the critical days of “the Intifada.” See our Faces of Hadassah SJN Ad to learn about that program.

The Last Bite

This is my last article for the Savannah Jewish News. What seemed like a daunting task two years ago is now complete. Every month I wondered what I could possibly have to say, but somehow I managed... one bite at a time.

Let me tell you a secret. I didn’t do it alone. I had an extraordinary editor and my assignment made for wonderful phone conversations with my mother. An accomplished writer, she was my mentor and critic. Mother majored in journalism at SMU, had a job lined up to work for a Dallas newspaper, but visited her aunts in St. Louis, met my father, and well, she never took that job. She is probably the best writer I have ever known. Beautiful words flow from her pen with absolutely no effort.

My public school education was mediocre at best and Mother was the one who taught me to write. When I asked her to look over my first high school essay, my otherwise gentle parent went ballistic! She was appalled by my writing and minced no words in beginning my painful tutelage. She taught me to use a thesaurus, remove duplicate words, never begin a sentence with the word “and,” that the editing process never ends, and so on. I hear her words in my head as I write to this day. In case you are wondering, she had no input on this article because I wanted to surprise her when she read it. Thanks Mom, it was fun!

There are others to credit for their help during my years as President. When Mother wasn’t available, I would call on Lynn Levine to review my column. Another journalism major, Lynn writes skillfully and is a fabulous editor...the very best. I thank my husband, Michael, for cheering me on and being my advisor. Having served as a Federation President years ago, his experience was invaluable.

I had remarkable officers and a tremendous board of directors to help me along the way. Jeffrey Lasky, Steve Greenberg, and Joel Greenberg were my officers. Merry Bodziner, Sherry Finestone, Black, Neil Brecker, David Byck, Morris Gelfen, Toby Hollenberg, Mark Konter, Harvey Lebos, Margie Levy, Helene Sandler, Beth Vantosh, and Larry Zaslavsky worked on committees, Campaign, and Allocations, along with over 100 non-board members volunteers who are the heart and soul of everything we do. All those mentioned above really did the work and made my job an easy one. I thank them from the bottom of my heart.

Adam Solender kept me straight, was my devil’s advocate, and is probably the most well-read and knowledgeable person on the Jewish world that I have ever met. I appreciated his sound advice. Benjamin Bloom was a consummate gentleman and a pleasure to work with. Cheryl Lansing was a true gem. In case you haven’t heard, we are in extremely good financial hands under her leadership. Sonya Rush made member services run smoothly. I don’t know how Vicky Lunick accomplishes all that she does, but it seems to be with confidence and ease. Gershon Perut was a great shaliach and made the Zoller Seder a memorable one. We are very fortunate to have three consummate gentlemen and a pleasure to work with.

It seemed that whenever you turned around, some country was attacking Israel. Flash forward to 2011/5771: the Jewish community is more powerful than at any time in our history. We are Democrats, Republicans, Libertarian, Independent or something else. We are accepted everywhere. The same institutions that shunned our money was not desired at many museums, hospitals and other civic organizations. Anti-Semitism manifested itself in our everyday world from what we read in the paper to our personal experiences in school. It seemed that whenever you turned around, some country was attacking Israel.

Lost Our Language?

Growing up in New York I thought that there was only one Jewish way of thinking, one Jewish opinion, and one way of reading about Jewish ethics. My parents were Democrats, so were their friends. I do remember them talking about how misguided one of their Republican friends was... but they only spoke of him in hushed tones. My Grandfather was an absolute rebel in our Jewish world: he was a Communist and read the Daily Worker, the American Communist paper of the day (his day, not mine).

In my world of the 1960’s it seemed that Jews were of one opinion and spoke with a common language. We knew what it was like to be the oppressed, so we were very active in the civil rights movement. We knew what it was like to have no choice, so we were very active in the women’s reproductive rights movement. We were shunned from the country clubs and community centers, so we formed our own, the JEA. Our money was not desired at many museums, hospitals and other civic organizations. Anti-Semitism manifested itself in our everyday world from what we read in the paper to our personal experiences in school. It seemed that whenever you turned around, some country was attacking Israel.

In general, Jews are “better off” than our numbers would indicate. Anti-Semitism (with the exception of some specific “hot spots”) is at the lowest level since WW II. In general, Jews are “better off” than Americans at large: we have money, influence and power far greater than our numbers would indicate.

With all of our gains, we have lost something as byproduct of our success. We have lost our common language. For all the right reasons, we no longer have a common Jewish voice. No longer do we have to look to each other for common support or activities. No longer do we have to look to our communal leaders and rabbis for information and interpretation. The Internet has the same information and thousands of interpretations. Once there seemed to be one common voice, one voice of authority; now there are many.

While many lament our loss of centrality, an equal number of people revel in the fact that we no longer need the one voice. We have come a long way. Judaism is rich and diverse and welcomes debate. We have come far enough to have multiple and dissenting voices, multiple and dissenting opinions.

Yet, somehow, with this backdrop, the missions of organizations like the Savannah Jewish Federation and Jewish Educational Alliance take on even greater importance. They provide the glue that keeps our Savannah Jewish community together. They bring us “out of our silos” to one common meeting place to observe, celebrate, exercise, and socialize.

The Savannah Jewish community reflects trends from throughout the Diaspora. Communities throughout the U.S. are grappling with the very basic definitions of how they support each other, what their priorities are, how they teach their children, outreach to intermarried couples, and responsibility to Israel. There is no one voice and many opinions on these issues.

As the Savannah Jewish community goes through continual evolution and change, we welcome all views, all opinions, from many voices.

Hats Off To ...

From Linda Zoller

...Merry Bodzin for chairing the Leadership Committee. She and co-chair LeeAnn Kole organized, implemented and evaluated a leadership development program for seven emerging community leaders. Merry also served on the Endowment Committee, the Personnel Search Committee, and as always was a key solicitor for the Campaign. She was a trusted advisor, champion, confidant, and friend. She bought me an elephant t-shirt in my favorite color. Merry never faltered in her message to me: “Whatever you need me to do, Linda, I’m here for you.” She was a treasure.

...Sherry Dolgoff for serving as overall chairperson for the Federation Campaign. In a very tough year for fundraising, Sherry brought her passion, enthusiasm and gift for engaging people to motivate and inspire us all. She didn’t stop with campaign. She also served as the chair of the Allocations Committee, the chair of the Yom Hashoah Committee, and was the one who took my ticket every day at the Jewish Film Festival. Sherry met everything asked of her and more. The board was indeed fortunate to have her.

...Peggy Harris for coming forward without hesitation to chair the Women’s Division, recruiting a fabulous team, and for raising the dollars we so desperately needed.

...Vivian Slotin for being the Vice Chair of the Women’s Division, recruiting wonderful solicitors, and addressing the follow-up so well.

...Harold Black for chairing the Men’s Division, stepping up to help in a very difficult year, and for his wonderful way of engaging volunteers. You will have jam for life.

...Jerald Gottlieb for chairing the Community Relations Committee. Much to Jerald’s credit, he wanted our high school students to be prepared for the anti-Semitic propaganda they could encounter on college campuses. He brought the ADL in for a program in the fall, but didn’t think that was enough. He then worked out a cost-sharing arrangement with the Jewish Federation of Houston to bring acclaimed speaker Neil Lazarus to Savannah to train our teens to handle anti-Israel propaganda and speak to the community at large. It was costly and we hadn’t budgeted for it but that didn’t deter Jerald in the least. He worked out a partnership with the JEA and raised additional monies independently to bring us one of the finest and best attended speakers we have had in years.

...Janis Jawetz for chairing the PJ Library Committee and for serving as a division co-chair for the Campaign. Janis rotates off the Board this year and we thank her for her service.

...LeeAnn Kole for vice-chairing the Leadership Committee, for serving as campaign division co-chair, and for serving on the Early Childhood Education Committee.

...Amanda Reeves for chairing the Teen Summer Grant Committee as well as serving on the Leadership Committee, participating in the Young Leadership Program (YALL), Young Jewish Savannah Program, the Allocations Committee, the Nominating Committee, the Personnel Search Committee, and for chairing with her husband Josh the Super Sunday Super Funday family event. Wow!

...Allan Ratner for taking the Savannah Jewish News to a new level. Under his leadership the committee met monthly, took an active role in reviewing and developing articles, and improved the look of the paper. Alan served on the Allocations and Nominating committees, helped with the Campaign, was a voice of reason at board meetings, and was always there for advice when I asked him.

...Laurie Rubnitz for chairing the Human Resource Development Committee (HRD). Under her leadership, a welcome wagon was established and the entire program was evaluated, found to be highly effective, and given the go-ahead to continue. Laurie was an integral member of the Personnel Search Committee. She will rotate off the board this year and we thank her for her service.

...Amos Timna for chairing the Jewish Film Festival. Under his leadership the festival was highly successful and enjoyed by all.

...Charlotte Black for serving on the Jewish Family Services and HRD committees in her first year on the Board. I know she will be a great asset to Federation in the coming years.

...Neil Brecker for serving on the Communications Committee and bringing fresh ideas to the paper. Neil will rotate off the board this year and we thank him for his service.

...David Byck for his support and good counsel, and for being a key campaign solicitor.

...Morris Geffen in his first year on the Board, for serving on the Jewish Family Services, Endowment, and Nominating committees. What a great start!

...Toby Hollenberg for her ongoing and major work on the HRD committee bringing new families to Savannah. Toby served on the Personnel Search Committee, the Allocations Committee, and was a division co-chair in the Campaign.

...Mark Konter for serving on the Allocations, Nominating, and the Teen Summer Grant Committee, participating in Young Jewish Savannah and for representing the next generation. This was his first year on the Board. What a beginning!

...Harvey Lebos for his work on the Personnel Search Committee and Campaign, and for his enthusiasm and concern.

...Margie Levy for her work on the Human Resource Development and Nominating committees, for her interest, and for her valued input.

...Helse Sandler for her work on the Jewish Family Service committee, the Early Childhood Education Committee, and Campaign.

...Beth Vantosh for her work on the Early Childhood Education Committee, her participation in Young Jewish Savannah, and for representing the up-and-coming generation.

...Larry Zaslavsky for serving on the Endowment Committee and being the motivator and the voice of reason that he is.

...Scott Samuels for representing the JEA on the Federation Board. Scott did more than just attend board meetings. He and I worked together constantly, made joint decisions, planned mutual programs, and supported each other in our roles. Thanks to Paul Kulbersh, too, who now serves in that position.

...Jeff Lasky, Federation President-Elect, Jewish Family Services Chair, and member of the Personnel, Early Childhood Education, and Allocations committees; Steve Greenberg, Federation Treasurer and member of the Personnel Search and Allocations committees; and Joel Greenberg, Federation Past President, Nominating Chair, Endowment Chair, and member of the Allocations committee, for their participation in Officers meetings and their much appreciated advice.

...Carol Greenberg for her continued work on the HRD Committee and for her work year after year on the MLK concert.

...Freddie Rhaban for exercising his privilege as past president and attending every board meeting, and for his advice and counsel.

...Adam Solender, Lynn Levine, Benjamin Bloom, Gershon Peru, Cheryl Lansing, Sonya Rush, Vicki Lunick, Risha Katzman, Mike Strear, and Sharon Hughes, for quietly doing everything behind the scenes and making us volunteers look great. You are the enablers of all that we do.

...and anyone I may have unintentionally neglected to mention with my apologies.
By Jane Kahn

“Where have you been?” Anne Scheer asked me when I visited her home. “I mean, why don't we know each other?” (In Savannah, where everybody knows everybody, it's incredible our paths had not crossed. I had asked myself the same question—especially since two of our sons have long-standing professional relationships.) Anne was attempting to interview me, but my assignment was to interview her!

Dedicated to Family and Country

I remember shopping at her husband's Habersham Street delicatessen, "Junior's", where Anne worked from 1934 until the early 1960s. (Remember the pickle barrel, the tongue sandwiches?) I remember lunch stops at her father-in-law's Congress Street restaurant, Marathon, where Anne worked when she was first married and moved here in 1948. We have a lot of mutual friends.

We greeted each other with the Savannah embrace—like long-lost friends, but then, both realizing that we really didn't know each other, Anne decided on a graphic introduction to me, and the readers of the Savannah Jewish News. "I'm 90-years-young," she emphasized. "Don't you say 'old'."

Two entire walls in her home are dedicated to the most important facets of her life—her Army Wall and her Family Wall.

On one wall are citations, commendations, photographs from her 26-year career as a civilian in the military. There's a photograph of Anne with Major General Norman Schwarzkopf, of more recent Gulf War fame, at the 1985 opening of the Spouse Center at Hunter. She worked for the Army Emergency Relief Office at Hunter Army Air Field, assisting soldiers and their families in times of need. Functioning as a social worker, she advanced through the ranks. "When you love your job, you always do a better job," she said. In 1993 she was awarded the Department of the Army Commander's Award for Civilian Service.

She was named honorary commander of the 165th Airlift Wing Mission Supply Group. There is a proclamation from then Georgia Governor Roy Barnes.

Then there's the other wall devoted to family—early photographs of Anne, through weddings, B'nai Mitzvot, birthdays—happy memorable occasions with four children and their spouses, seven grandchildren, two great grandchildren.

Both of these walls belie the tough earlier life of this Savannah lady. They don't hint of the struggle of her early childhood in the tenements of New York, of the week in Savannah when she held three jobs, when she was forced to deal with a bankruptcy and her children were excluded by cruel fair-weather friends. "I am talking because I am old," she offered.

She has worked most of her life. In New York she was in the subscription department of Parents' Magazine. Through mutual cousins, she grew up knowing Isadore (Junior) Scheer. The Scheers were able to send all four of their children to college. "I am blessed with good children," she says. They are "making their lives and the people around them happy." (I know) that "they will always be there to help others, regardless of whether it's a smile or any other comfort and help they can give." Emphasis on charity began at home.

Today, upbeat, happy, resilient, Anne Scheer travels to visit three of her children and their families—Jerry in Charleston, who operates 16 restaurants, Henry, who runs T-Bones restaurant in Augusta, and Myra, who works in public relations in New York City. Her oldest son, Steve, is an attorney in Savannah. When Anne visits Myra and two life-long friends who live in New York, they line-dance, watch tennis matches, visit the casinos in Atlantic City, shop Canal Street, and from the steps of the Metropolitan Museum, Anne watches people! Long committed to volunteer work, she now involves herself in senior activities at the JEA and in the Agudath Achim Synagogue.

Summer End Outdoor Pool Bash, September 4th

By Stephanie Johnson
Health and Wellness Director

It has been a great seeing all the members at the outdoor pool this summer. The laughter that came from the children is going to be missed when the outdoor pool closes for the season on Sunday, September 4th. I have enjoyed getting to know all those that visited the outdoor pool more personally over this summer. I look forward to continuing our relationships during the rest of the months of the year. If you aren’t a member yet, please come and join the JEA; I’d enjoy getting to know you too.

Reflecting back over the summer, at least 2,000 individuals swam the crystal clear and cool waters of our top notch outdoor pool. The JEA and I are happy to report no injuries of significance occurred, which is quite an accomplishment considering that approximately half of those that used the outdoor pool where campers from the most successful to date JEA Summer Camp.

I enjoyed bringing new items, such as the awesome JEA Israeli Salad, to the menu at the grill, and listening to all the memories of parents and grandparents that they had as kids when they went to camp at the JEA and lived out their summer adventures either at the JEA’s pool or at the JEA itself.

Speaking of the grill, there is going to be one last feast at the pool on September 4th to end the summer with a bang. We will have everyone’s favorites such as; hotdogs, hamburgers, chips, watermelon and cold drinks and definitely a few special items that can be enjoyed by all.

I hope to see you all at the JEA Outdoor Pool for this final farewell to summer!
It’s A Funny Thing

By Melinda Stein

True story:
On our recent overseas cruise, there was a couple seated at a table near us in the dining room and next to them a single man dined. I overheard the woman of the couple begin a conversation with the solo guy, and it turned out that, quite coincidentally, all three lived in Miami. The woman asked if the other guy was traveling alone, and he replied in the affirmative, that he was a bachelor. They then all introduced themselves, Mr. and Mrs. Birnbaum and Dr. David Katzman. Immediately the lady leaned towards her husband and said, “My friend Robin would be just perfect for Dr. Katzman!”

An Israeli rowing team had been performing very poorly. They decided to send one of their rowers to the U.S. to see how the great teams of this country manage to win their competitions. The rower returned and said, “Guys, the American teams do exactly the opposite of what we do. Over there, seven of the rowers in the boat row, and only one yells all the time!”

Top Six Signs That’s its Way Too Hot in the Savannah Jewish Community:

6. Instead of tossing candies at the Bar/Mitzvah kids, it’s ice cubes.
5. Congregants are in no hurry to leave the synagogues after services.
4. The Savannah Jewish News is being mailed out folded into a fan.
3. Synagogue appeals for the Air Conditioning Fund break all previous donation records.
And the number one sign?
1. Friday night candles have actually begun to self-ignite.

And a last cool thought:

From Darkness to Light: Natan Sharansky

25 years ago the Jewish world and the world at large watched as Natan Sharansky crossed the Glienicke Bridge from nine years in prison to freedom and Aliyah. This was a very special moment for millions of Jews around the world who were privileged to see the fruits of their collective relentless campaign to free Soviet Jewry.

On December 8, 2011 Jewish leaders from across the Southern United States will come together in Memphis, Tennessee for a private reception with Natan Sharansky to celebrate Mr. Sharansky’s unwavering dedication to freedom and human rights and his enduring commitment to our global Jewish community. The evening will be dedicated to support for critical programs of the Jewish Agency for Israel that are ensuring our Jewish future here at home, in Israel, the former Soviet Union, and around the world.

The Jewish Agency invites you to show your support and to share your memories and messages with Mr. Sharansky through a special tribute journal which will be presented to Mr. Sharansky at the Darkness to Light reception.

Consul Gen. Opher Aviran visits JNF Projects in the Negev

Jewish National Fund
Press Release

Consul General of Israel to the Southeast, Opher Aviran, his wife Talia, and their daughter Noa, spent their summer vacation visiting various Jewish National Fund projects in the Negev. With great respect for JNF’s continued efforts, Consul General Aviran said he wanted to get a “first impression” of JNF’s “added value” to the Negev. Throughout their journey, they visited a new water reservoir near Kibbutz Nir-Am, Be’er Sheva River Park, Sderot Secure Indoor Recreation Center, and Aleh Negev rehabilitative village in Ofakim, which cares for people suffering from severe disabilities. All these projects, among many others, are part of JNF’s Blueprint Negev campaign, to make the Negev Desert home to the next generation of Israel’s residents.

Deep Water Aerobics! Join Us for 6 Special Sessions!

Deep water aerobics is a cardio-vascular exercise performed in water deep enough so that you do not come in contact with the bottom of the pool. A flotation device, such as a buoyancy belt or pool noodle, is usually used to free your hands and legs to perform large movements against the resistance of the water. Some moves commonly done in deep water aerobics classes include jumping jacks, knee tucks and scissors.

Deep-water aerobics reduces the heart rate by as much as 17 beats per minute compared to land exercises. Because of your reduced heart rate, your body might think it isn’t working very hard, when in fact you are getting a strenuous workout. The low-impact exercises in deep-water aerobic classes include kicking, running or dancing, too jarring or painful.

Water aerobics helps you burn calories more efficiently than traditional exercise. According to Diabetic Lifestyle.com, during a 30-minute workout, you will burn 135 calories by walking on land and 264 calories with deep-water walking.

Starting August 19th through September 23rd we are going to have deep water aerobics on Friday mornings from 9:00 to 10:00am in the outdoor pool. There is a $5 charge per person per class that would like to partake. Come and join the increased benefits from this special limited time water class for the next six weeks.

Gator Basketball at the JEA

The second week of August was an amazing week for our Gator Ball Basketball campers. Sixteen campers had the opportunity to meet and learn from Larry “Gator” Rivers, a former Harlem Globetrotter and a native of Savannah. They learned many valuable skills such as:

Pads of Hands
Two Hand Chest Pass
Touch Drill
Pivot Pass
Dribble Pads
Touch-N-Turn
Shooting Techniques
Slight of Hand
Two Ball Juggle
Quick Hand Catch
Dig Dribble
Rib-N-Go
Hook Pass
Skip to Ball
Seal-N-Pop Out
Defend Dribble

The first couple of days were a little frustrating to some because of having to break bad habits but as soon as the understanding came about, their faces lit up with joy. Watching the kids improve is always something that a parent wants to see. After seeing the success that we have had this summer, Gator has committed to have 2 weeks of summer camp next year again with us. We are going to have a week for girls and a week for boys. I hope that those that joined in this year will be able to come back next year as we continue to go this awesome opportunity. It’s not everyday that kids get to learn from some of the best in the sport.

12 Steps to Help Decrease Stress

Limit Emotional Involvements
Not with people! But avoid getting too emotionally invested in things that don’t matter that much.

For example, researchers recently linked football team losses with a greater risk of heart attack. In Los Angeles County, deaths from heart attacks and just deaths in general (mostly in elderly people) spiked after the Pittsburgh Steelers routed the Los Angeles Rams 31-19 in the 1980 Super Bowl. But when the Rams pounced the Washington Redskins 38-9 in 1984, deaths in the county declined. So don’t sweat the small stuff and remember that it’s all small stuff.

Eat Right
Eating a balanced diet -- low in red meat and processed foods, high in fruits and vegetables, poultry, fish, and whole grains -- will not only keep your weight down but also have a more direct effect on the heart’s functioning: It keeps your blood sugar stable throughout the day so you can avoid destructive peaks and valleys.

“Eating a more balanced diet with complex carbs means you’re going to be stable throughout the day,” Dr. Simmons says. “You’re not going to have a carb high, then a drop down. Your mood isn’t going to fluctuate.” Healthy eating can help prevent or delay diabetes, a major risk factor for heart trouble.

Seek Help for Depression
Depression can increase the risk of heart disease and may shorten life span. If you’re depressed, medication, psychotherapy or cognitive behavioral therapy, and other treatments may help. The Cleveland Clinic recommends antidepressants known as selective serotonin re-uptake inhibitors (SSRIs, such as Prozac and Zoloft) because they don’t raise blood pressure. But ask your doctor if this is the best drug for your depression and make sure you know about any interactions.

Get Some Sleep
So many people in our sleep-deprived culture just aren’t getting enough z’s, or enough of the right kind of rest. An average of six to eight hours of sleep is recommended.

However, quality of sleep is key. Sleep apnea—a condition in which you wake up periodically due to interrupted breathing—has been linked with cardiovascular disease.

People who awake in the middle of the night from sleep apnea are unable to complete normal sleep cycles, a time when the body naturally lowers hormone levels and blood pressure. This can lead to hypertension and heart disease.

Exercise More
Want a cure-all? Try aerobic exercises like running, walking, swimming, and even dancing. These activities help you feel better, lower your risk for diabetes, and make your heart stronger, a trifecta of health benefits. Exercise can also help depression.

Study after study has shown the benefits of physical activity, even active housework or gardening. The reason? It pumps your heart, moving blood all around the body.

The American Heart Association recommends exercising aerobically at least 30 minutes all or most days of the week. But talk to your doctor before hitting the track.

Don’t Drink (too much) Alcohol
Having too many drinks can raise triglycerides and blood pressure and even lead to heart failure. However, moderate drinking may actually ward off heart disease. Moderate means no more than one drink a day for women and two for men.

If you don’t drink, this isn’t a reason to start, according to Dr. Simmons, an assistant professor of family medicine at Texas A&M Health Science Center College of Medicine. “But if you have always enjoyed a glass of wine and want reassurance, it’s perfectly fine,” he says.

Cut the Caffeine
Caffeine can quickly raise your fight-or-flight response and all the attendant stress hormones, explains Dr. Simmons. That’s good if you’re being chased by a saber-toothed tiger but not so good if you’re caught in traffic.

Elevated stress hormones contribute to inflammation. So cut down on your coffee or tea habit. And even your diet soda habit. Preliminary studies have linked diet sodas to an increased risk of diabetes, a major risk factor for heart disease.

Prevent Heart Failure
People tend to overeat at football games. Exercise before hitting the track. The American Heart Association recommends exercising aerobically at least 30 minutes all or most days of the week. But talk to your doctor before hitting the track.

This article continues our discussion from last month about stress.

Can stress hurt your heart? The evidence is piling up that the answer is—yes, stress is bad for your ticker.

Art at the JEA

September Artists—Bobby & Mona Segall

Robert and Mona Segall are husband and wife. Both are Savannah natives and both are artists!

Robert has been involved in various aspects of art all of his life, but has devoted his efforts in the past several years to oil painting. He is largely self-taught, but has studied with, among others, Savannah artist, Zola Delburn, as well as with his niece, Charlotte Segall, an accomplished artist (and SCAD honor graduate) now studying and residing in Florence, Italy.

His subject matter varies, from Savannah land- and seascapes to portraits, still life, and famous jazz musicians. He has also been commissioned for architectural renderings. “My love of Savannah and its surrounding waterways is evident in many of my works, as are the images I’ve created of the jazz music and musicians to whom I owe so much of my inspiration,” says Robert.

His work has been displayed at the Telfair Art Fair, as well as numerous local galleries, including Soho Gallery and Café, and Dimensions Gallery. He has had several solo shows, a number of Savannah Art Association group exhibitions, as well as having had a number of his jazz portraits featured at the 18th Annual Black-Heritage Festival.

Mona has loved art all of her life, studying with private teachers through her teens in Savannah before moving on to a Fine Arts major at the University of South Florida. However, it has only been in the past few years that she has rekindled her passion for painting.

Mona has painted in several mediums over the years, but now focuses primarily on acrylics. Mona’s passion for painting is inspired by the beauty that surrounds us from the colors and textures of nature to the movement and grace of ballet dancers.

The subject matter of her paintings spans everything from flowers to ballet dancers. Mona has several exhibitions coming up in the near future, some of which will be in conjunction with her husband. The two also share a joint studio and enjoy working and critiquing each others work. Mona has a number of commissioned that now reside in private collections.

Jewish Pioneers in Medicine

By Dr. Martin Greenberg,
Professor of Medical Education at Mercer University School of Medicine

An old Yiddish joke states (in rough translation) “Being a doctor is a Jewish disease.” Yes, Jews have been doctors for millennia; some prominent, some just plain folks in their communities; but almost always making a difference!

Some, like Maimonides, have been extraordinary and, as Jews, we can be proud. Among the most notable doctors in the last one hundred plus years, recognized by a Nobel Prize, are many “smart Jewish kids” who went on to make a big difference. The prizes, administered by the Nobel Foundation were initially awarded annually in five categories, including outstanding contributions to Physiology or Medicine; the other prize categories being chemistry, literature, physics, and peace. Economics was added later. Alfred Nobel, inventor of dynamite, established the prizes for those who made a difference.

As of 2010, over 800 prizes have been awarded; more than 20% of the recipients are Jewish. Among them are about one dozen for contributions to literature, 23 for chemistry, 22 for physics, and the most, more than 50, were for medicine. In some instances more than one person shared the prize. Some winners came from Jewish backgrounds, but did not practice Judaism, or may have converted.

The following are but a few notable examples in the field of medicine for our community to kvell over:

- Dr. Martin Greenberg
- Dr. Elie Metchnikoff of Russia and Paul Ehrlich of Germany
- Karl Landsteiner of Austria, for his discovery of human blood groups (A,B,O) making blood transfusions safe and available.
- Ernst Boris Chain, a refugee from Nazi Germany to England.
- Alexander Fleming, of the USA, for his pioneering work in antibiotics.
- Howard Florey and the discovery of streptomycin, the first successful treatment of tuberculosis.
- Joshua Lederberg, of the USA, for his pioneering work in genetics.
- Arthur Kornberg, of the USA, for his work on discovery of RNA and DNA.
- Joshua Lederberg, of the USA, for his work with Doris and me for their discoveries concerning genetic control of enzyme and virus synthesis.
- Gerald Edelman, of the USA, for discoveries concerning the structures of antibodies.
- Selman Waksman, of the USA, for discoveries concerning the regulation of cholesterol metabolism.
- Salk, of the USA, for his discovery of polio vaccine.
- Prions, a new principle in medicine.
- The Nobel Prize website.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Great article in the Savannah Jewish News. Thanks for including it and for letting folks know about the impact we have on our students.

Wayne Silverman, PhD
Executive Director, Hillels of Georgia

To the Editor:

Calling all Girls Scouts, former scouts, leaders, and family of former scouts:

Next year scouts from all over the world will travel to Savannah to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the organization. Did you know Jewish girls participated in scouting from almost the very beginning? Help us document the Jewish community’s participation in Girl Scouting and camping by loaning us some of your memorabilia to scan or photograph or by telling us some of your stories for a special exhibit beginning January 2012.

Honor your memories and those of the women you love by being included in this centennial event.

Tikvah Fund

One Gift to Jewish Family Services, A Lifetime of Support for the Savannah Jewish Community

A community supporter who chooses to remain anonymous has established The Tikvah Fund in support of the Savannah Jewish Federation’s Jewish Family Services efforts.

Tikvah, meaning Hope, will provide funding in perpetuity for the social service needs of the community including rent/mortgage assistance, Kosher meals, case management, prescription medicines, clothing and other daily necessities for those who are unable to attend to themselves in times of need.

The Challenge

The fund’s creators have generously issued a challenge to the community to participate in the creation of the Tikvah Fund. For every dollar donated to the fund by members of the community (up to a total of $20,000), the fund’s creators will match the donations dollar for dollar!
Join Us At Mickve Israel

Mickve Israel extends to you an open invitation!

To Worship: In addition to special children services and holiday events, we have Shabbat services on Friday evenings at 6:00 pm. From Memorial Day to Labor Day, our Friday evening services will be held at 6:30 pm. Instead of being held in our historic sanctuary, these Exotic Resort Location services will be hosted at member homes around the community. Our Saturday morning services are at 11:00 am and are followed by a Kiddush lunch.

To Tour Our Historic Sanctuary and Museum: We offer docent-led tours Monday through Friday from 10:00 am to 1:00 pm and again from 2:00 to 4:00 pm with the last tour starting approximately 30 minutes before the end of the session. The suggested donation for a tour is $5 per person.

To Shop: Our Judaica Shop is stocked with a variety of items for children and adults. If we don’t have what you are looking for, we can order it for you! The shop is open during tour times and other times upon request.

To Eat: The Shalom Y’all Jewish Food Festival will be held in Forsyth Park on Sunday, October 30, 2011, from 11:00 am until 4:00 pm.

Four Questions for the Rest of the Year
Toby Hollenberg,
Grow Savannah Volunteer and Jewish Federation Board Member

1. Having once been new to Savannah, what was your experience like when you came to this Jewish community?

My husband and I were welcomed warmly at Mickve Israel and also through the newly formed Jewish Women of the Landings when we moved here 13 years ago. Initially those were our two Jewish connections in Savannah. We quickly met many people at Mickve Israel, involved ourselves in the congregation and then joined the JEA. We found that when we embraced the Jewish community, it quickly embraced us as well.

2. What brought about the “Grow Savannah” program in the Savannah Jewish community?

In 2003 (or thereabouts) the Grow Savannah program came out of the Federation’s Human Resources Development committee which had determined that the JEA, each of the congregations, Rambam and Shalom School had the ability to accommodate many more Jewish families and individuals, and in light of the fact that Savannah is a highly desirable place to live, we felt that we should find ways to attract and engage more Jewish people. Initially, ads were placed in several other Federation publications in the north and in Florida to advertise our welcoming Jewish community. We created an "Ambassador" program fashioned after the one developed at The Landings where prospective newcomers were paired with current residents. Carol Greenberg and I became the initial contact people, writing or speaking with everyone who contacted the JEA/Federation indicating an interest in relocating to Savannah. We continue to do so, with new contacts coming from the Federation website. When these contacts actually come to Savannah to visit or to actively look to relocate, we make sure that they connect with the congregations, the JEA and others in the Jewish community with whom they might have something in common. We have had many successes in introducing newcomers to the Jewish community and helping them engage in Jewish life.

3. There are many in this community that may not notice the influx of Jewish individuals and families that are moving to Savannah. Can you share what you have noticed about those that moved to Savannah and about how much the Savannah Jewish community has changed and grown?

We’ve recently seen many new Jewish families with young children moving into the area as well as young adults who are starting their careers with various companies here. The growth of the Young Jewish Savannah group has created a very positive way for young adults to meet each other and have a connection with the Jewish community. Newcomers find Savannah a very warm and welcoming community because of our Grow Savannah Ambassador program. The job market in Savannah has its ebbs and flows and this, of course, has a great effect on the ability of people to move to our area. The medical community has brought many new Jewish practitioners to our community and several Jewish families have recently relocated with some of our local companies. Savannah has been a destination for many who wish to retire here as well as others who wish to live here and take their chances at finding job opportunities. A number of entrepreneurs have created their own companies here as well. Savannah continues to be a very desirable place to which to relocate.

4. What advice do you have to those who have moved here recently and to those that may not know how to become a part of the Savannah Jewish community?

Moving to any community does require self-initiative in terms of finding one’s interests and pursuing them, including being involved in the Jewish community. Savannah, however, provides newcomers with a warm, personal and comprehensive introduction to all options in the Jewish community. The Federation website and the weekly eNews from Federation provide wonderful information about the activities and options for involvement in the Jewish community. Anyone knowing of a new Jewish resident is encouraged to contact Adam, Carol or myself so that we can be sure that these people are appropriately welcomed and we can introduce them to others who might help them become involved. It does help when the newcomer is proactive and takes it upon themselves to check out the congregations and the JEA, but we also want the entire community to help any newcomer by inviting them to services, to Shabbat dinner, to programs at the JEA and/or at the congregations and helping them meet other Jewish individuals and families.
To Change or Not to Change

The word change has begun to be used as commonly as the word bully. Society has made it too easy for a child to be labeled a bully rather than the child just may be unkind at times. That is an ongoing situation that schools must currently address on a regular basis. Not only protecting children that are being bullied, but as well to safeguard the child being labeled a bully – is the child really deserving of the label?

Change is a necessary aspect of our lives. Our world is constantly changing, requiring us to bring to the table the situations that in our day just didn’t require so much time and energy. The responsibility of every generation is to determine the benefit of change and not just the generic, change, is good.

When our forefather, Yitzchak, was preparing to take a wife, he engaged his father in conversation about his father’s role in Judaism. Rambam makes it fun to learn; Rambam makes it a hands on learning experience; Rambam exposes our students (of all ages) to their heritage through songs, videos, various books, projects, speakers and so much more.

Rambam Day School is unique because we have a dual program and both programs are geared to excellence! No educator has ever become familiar with our program and not been intrigued. This past school year Rambam became reaccredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Council. This is the highest Georgia accreditation. The comments from the delegates that observed our school expressed their respect, admiration and awe of what Rambam accomplishes.

Some fundamentals need not change to remain meaningful, significant, and superb.

A Return to Routine

As school has begun, I am struggling with routines. Bringing back the good ones, like a healthy breakfast and getting rid of the bad ones, like summer bedtime hours!

The same goes at Shalom School. We want our routine back!

Routines are essential building blocks of life. Parenting books, pediatricians, and early childhood experts will tell you that routines provide children with a measure of predictability that is necessary and comforting. They give children a sense of safety in an unsafe world. Routines and rituals are also emotional regulators, guides to positive behavior, ways to decrease conflict, and perhaps most importantly, a basis for learning.

Not much to do with bedtimes or breakfast, Shalom School focuses on Jewish routines. To bring the Holy to the daily is our mantra. Sometimes it means pointing out to the child that there is a Jewish aspect to all our daily actions, like when we make a blessing before eating a piece of fruit. Other times it means learning new rituals, ones that can be replicated outside of school easily, like starting our Friday dinner with the Shalom Aleichem song as we welcome Shabbat in our house.

Most of our actions in a given day are based on habit. Getting up at a certain time, getting ready a certain way … If I was to decide tomorrow to change one of my habits and do things differently, it would feel a little odd. I might barely notice it. But I would feel kind of strange. Our school’s task is to make our students feel comfortable with all the little changes we want to incorporate in their everyday lives. From saying the Shema when they go to sleep or lighting candles every Friday night, we want them to embrace the change in their routines by taking the odd feeling away. And the more consistent we are, the stronger the habit develops and the easier it becomes.

Whether it is making the mundane sacred, or incorporating the sacred into our everyday routines, parents are a key factor in this process. While our teachers are doing a wonderful job at introducing these routines, we need the parents to be role models at home to establish the routines and rituals in the children’s lives.

Force of habit is one of the most powerful forces in our life. It can help motivate us to accomplish anything (as it can prevent us from achieving our dreams if handled the wrong way).

As we are getting ready for Rosh Hashanah I wish for all of us a year rich in new experiences, in new or better habits, and most of all a year full of Holy in our daily lives.

Shalom

Eva Locker

Savannah Leader Attends BBYO’s Conference

Regional BBYO Godo, Elliot recently attended, BBYO’s International Executives Conference in Washington, DC. The Regional and Council ‘Execs’ met as the Movement’s top tier teen leadership.

Programming for the weekend was focused on five key priorities of AZA and BBG for the coming year: (1) Total Involvement and Growth, (2) Programming Standards and Quality, (3) Expanding and Strengthening Stand Up!, (4) Globalizing our Movement and (5) Committing to Israel. Each session was facilitated by a team of professionals and members from the AZA & BBG International Boards, and each workshop had materials to allow for easy implementation back home in our Savannah Jewish community.

Elliot participated in workshops with Estee Portnoy, Chairwoman of BBYO’s International Board of Directors, and with partner agencies including AIPAC, JDC, AJWS, Keshet, Rock the Vote, the iCenter, the Israel on Campus Coalition, Jewish Student Union and the Jewish Partisans Educational Foundation, and Oz Fishman (GAG) and Samantha Levinson (N’siah). The teens embraced BBYO’s new brand and launched the theme for IC 2012.

This group of Regional and Council leaders of BBYO worked on an impressive array of BBYO related business and passed a great deal of legislation:

1. An endorsement for Congresswoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz’s (D-FL) and Congresswoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-FL) bill to protect the rights of aging Holocaust survivors in the USA
2. They established Stand Up! Week – the 7-day period ahead of J-Serve, culminating with J-Serve (April 2012)
3. They approved a new chapter charter process to incentivize new chapters to reach for self-sustainability
4. BBYO’s Speak Up for Israel’s advocacy strategies were agreed upon intended to target mass audiences, use social media and connect with student government leaders
5. AZA and BBG welcomed – alongside professional leadership from the JDC – Latvia and Ukraine as our newest global affiliates, and Skype’d with a 16-year old named Besos – the only Jewish teen in all of Albania – who celebrated the 5th Shabbat of his lifetime on Ambassadors to Bulgaria this summer
6. AZA and BBG discussed and approved updated organizational core values.
7. BBG passed a motion creating a new initiative called BBGG – B’nai B’rith Girls Games – to leverage athletics and recreation as a new method of adding content and engaging more Jewish teens.

Preparing the Next Generation of Nonprofit Leaders

The nonprofit sector is at a major crossroads. Thousands of idealistic baby boomers that started nonprofit organizations 20 years ago are calling it quits and retiring from their leadership positions in the coming years. So, who will replace them? Exiting executive directors and take up the torch in the current nonpro sector? Therefore, nonpro leaders need help, and lots of it, to be able to rise to the important challenge of assuming executive roles after baby boomers leave.

Clearly we should be focused on cultivating and developing the leaders we already have in the sector, instead of trying to attract 640,000 new ones. In order for the sector to continue to do its good work, it’s important that we prepare, develop, and groom current nonprofit professionals for vacant leadership roles in the future. Good news is that we absolutely can do this as a sector, and use this era of generational shift to change the face of the nonprofit sector and find new ways of fulfilling our missions and improving the community in smarter, faster, cheaper, and more innovative ways. Bad news is that young nonprofit professionals, executive leadership is not just that easy to envision. Younger workers feel the challenges every day concerning long hours and low pay, the lack of adequate infrastructure, inefficient technology, and outdated modes of implementing programs that hinder us from doing our jobs as well as we could. We know there are more effective ways of implementing social change, and young people bring the energy and idealism to back it up. But how can things change if current leaders aren’t nurturing younger generations to be part of the solution?

To paraphrase a famous singer’s provocative question for current leaders in the nonprofit sector: What have you done for the next generation lately? What actions is the sector taking to ensure that young nonprofit employees are getting the right leadership development opportunities so they can take the reins from retiring baby boomers? Therefore nonprofits need to be proactive in preparing their younger workforce for future leadership positions. Some ideas:

- Provide mentoring opportunities to younger employees through your colleagues or board members. Allow work time to be used for mentoring sessions monthly or quarterly.
- Give junior employees tangible leadership opportunities such as leading a meeting, managing an important project from start to finish, or supervising an intern or volunteer.
- Encourage all staff to pursue learning opportunities outside of their job description—executive directors need to know each piece of the organization, so let your staff learn, too.
- Involve staff in major decision-making, such as the organization’s strategic planning process or preparation for an important board meeting.

Point blank: If current nonprofit leaders give half a damn about their organizations and their missions to improve the world in some way, it’s critical that they work closely with younger generations to help prepare them for the long road ahead. And let’s be clear that the leadership “crisis” is not an issue of there not being enough young people who want to work in nonprofits. The problem is that current leaders are not doing enough to cultivate their younger staff to take over their jobs when they retire in the coming years. And we need to change that.
We’ve helped young Jews in our community strengthen their roots in Israel.

Thanks to donors like you, here are a few of them.

From farm-focused, eco-Israel experiences to Teen Israel Experiences and MASA programs, Jewish Federation is actively supporting innovative new projects that inspire a deep love of Israel and Jewish life. It’s a successful strategy we apply to every issue we tackle. From feeding the hungry and helping the unemployed to supporting local Jewish education, together we do a world of good.
