To everything (turn, turn, turn) . . . There is a season (turn, turn, turn) . . . And a time to every purpose, under heaven. These lyrics were written by Pete Seeger and popularized by the Byrds in the 1950's. The origins of this song are literally biblical, in that they were inspired by the book of Ecclesiastes. Ecclesiastes reads, “For everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven (3:1).” We will read the book of Ecclesiastes during the holiday of Sukkot, invoking the freshness of a new year following Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

We are in the season of change and new beginnings. For some of us, like me, it is bittersweet. I love watching the kids begin a new school year, and I also lament the maturity gained over the summer. Oh, how I would love to “stop the clock” and keep my children young and innocent forever! That is not possible, and the truth is that I would not want that either. We all must grow and hopefully evolve into better versions of ourselves as we do.

So too at the Jewish Federation – change is always happening. The “big change” we are planning for presently is that of The Jewish Journal. want to keep it that way!

At the same time, we are faced with increasing costs for print and mailing, which does not allow us to grow and shift in other ways. We decided more than six months ago that we would be moving to an online version of The Jewish Journal, beginning in October 2018. It will look exactly like The Jewish Journal issue, only it will be in an online flipbook, which you will receive a link to each month via email. For those of you who would rather continue receiving Jewish community news in print and by mail, we are happy to mail you a copy of the new Jewish Journal Digest, but you must let us know. If we have not heard from you about your preference, please contact us. (See the accompanying Going Green article for this information.)

Additionally, the Jewish Journal will continue to evolve as we get into the 2019 year. We will begin working on the creation of a website dedicated to the Jewish Journal which will allow us to continually update and adjust news stories, as well as archive other stories and photos. A year from now, August 2019, we will launch yet another “new and improved” Jewish Journal via the internet and transition the print copy to a digest version which will look very different from what we have now.

“Turn, turn, turn . . .” Change is in the air, and we recognize that it can be challenging. We appreciate your cooperation and support of our efforts to improve this important source of information and communication in the Jewish community. For now, “turn” the pages and enjoy what we have in store for you this month!

Young Adults Division monthly L’Chaim social

The Young Adult Division of the Jewish Federation of San Antonio hosted their monthly L’Chaim social at Paramour Bar on Thursday, August 2nd. Guests enjoyed drinks while rotating through four interactive roundtable conversations led by ADL representatives: Regional Director Dayan Gross spoke about Israel, BDS, and international affairs; Bailey Player spoke about Immigration; Bethany Boucher spoke about interfaith relations; and Gail Glasser and JFSA Community Engagement Director Eva Laporte facilitated a conversation about taking action on issues here in San Antonio.

The Young Adult Division will host their next social on Monday, Oct. 8th at Max & Louie’s NY Diner. For more information about YAD, please contact Eva Laporte, Director of Community Engagement, at laporte@jfsatx.org.

Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Boston leads 24-hour hands-on mission to San Antonio

By Ellen Ollervidez,
CRC Director

On August 2, Twenty-nine people from Combined Jewish Philanthropies (CJP), Greater Boston's Jewish Federation, embarked on a 24-hour crisis response mission to San Antonio, where community members, along with the Interfaith Welcome Coalition (IWC), packed and distribute essential supplies to 400 migrants and their families.

Participants learned firsthand about the migrant crisis in America from lawyers with the Young Center and engage in interfaith text study led by CJP and IWC staff members. The group also joined the Jewish Federation of San Antonio to hear from Tino Gallegos, Immigration Liaison, Office of the City Manager, and a Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) recipient who is a member San Antonio Stands.

"CJP is proud to lead this important mission," said Sarah Abramson, Vice President of Caring, Community Impact, and Strategic Partnerships for CJP. "We are incredibly heartened by the outpouring of community support, with many people eager to put our values – most especially the central Jewish tenant of welcoming the stranger – into action. We care deeply about our own local community and Jews all over the world. We are proud to continue our legacy of supporting the

PJ Library Back to School Pool Party makes a huge splash

By Lauren Abraham,
PJ Library Coordinator

On Sunday Aug. 19, 32 PJ Library families came together to enjoy the afternoon at the Barshop JCC Pool. Amidst popsicles, oreo cookies, and lots of splashes, the children gathered to hear the Shofar and learn about Rosh Hashanah the New Year. Joel Swedlove and Leah Apothaker from Temple Beth-El sang songs and read PJ Library books to the kids as they swim up and clapped and enjoyed the pool together. This back to school swim party marked the end of the summer and gave families an opportunity to be together and share the summer heat one last time. To learn more about PJ Library and the upcoming programs for the year, go to PJ Library Facebook, or the Jewish Federation of San Antonio website at www.jfsatx.org.
On Sunday, July 29, the Holocaust Memorial Museum of San Antonio hosted a luncheon for museum volunteers and their friends and family. The Museum honored outgoing Scholar in Residence, Dr. Edward Westermann, docent Len King, and volunteer Lynnsey McReynolds.

The event was a success with volunteers and their friends and family enjoying lunch and remarks from our honorees, former intern Jeanette Lopez, and Reagan High School student Jake Brookover, who shared his school’s Bexar County High School Film Festival entry about the Museum.

Note: We will need your email addresses by September 15 if you don't want to miss out on the October issue.

Your privacy is key. Your emails will NOT be shared or used for any other purpose unless you specifically request that we add you to our community email list to receive other Federation communications and updates. You may opt out of the monthly Journal notifications at any time.

For Readers without a computer or who still prefer to receive local Jewish news by mail:

We understand that some of our readers still prefer to receive their Jewish Journal news in printed format. Beginning in October, we will introduce a new Jewish Journal Monthly Digest print publication, which will be mailed to anyone who requests it.

This is a smaller print publication that will include select articles from the digital version of the Jewish Journal.

Please Note: You must let Jewish Federation know if you would like to continue receiving a printed publication. If we don't receive a request, you will NOT receive the Jewish Journal Digest by mail.

You can request that we put your name on the "print" list by calling Federation today at (210) 302-6960 or by emailing Yolanda Vargas at Vargasy@jfsatx.org. Please confirm we have your correct mailing address.

Wrestling with Faith, new JLI course offered by Chabad

This fall, the Chabad Center will offer Wrestling with Faith, a new six-session course by the acclaimed Rohr Jewish Learning Institute (JLI), that openly addresses common challenges people have in their relationship with G-d.

The course explores questions such as: Doesn’t the concept of “Jewish chosen-ness” seem racist? Why do I need G-d if I can live perfectly well without Him? How can we relate to a loving and caring G-d amid the experience of tragedy and suffering? How do we reconcile compelling evidence for evolution and the age of the universe with a Bible that tells a different story? Does G-d really care about the nuances of Jewish practice?

“We recognize that almost everyone has some degree of skepticism when it comes to religion,” said Rabbi Levi Teldon. “We’ve created this course for participants to think critically about these challenges—to approach them with an array of insightful perspectives—so we can articulate our beliefs to ourselves and to the next generation with clarity and conviction, and not just play defense.”

The course will be offered at two different times: six Tuesday afternoons with Rabbi Chaim Block, beginning Oct 23, 12:00 p.m. - 1:15 p.m. at Jackson Walker law offices (Weston Centre), 112 E. Pecan Suite #2400; and six Wednesday evenings with Rabbi Levi Teldon, beginning Oct. 24, 7:30 p.m. - 9:00 p.m. at the Chabad Center, 14535 Blanco Rd.

Interested students may call (210) 764-0300 or visit www.myJLI.com.

Temple Beth-El and the Landsman Family Relief Fund help those in need
Temple Beth-El recently made a large donation through the Landsman Family Relief Fund to ATZUM, which is involved with a variety of social justice work in Israel, and is working with a consortium of Israeli organizations to alleviate the humanitarian crisis involving asylum seekers from Eretria and other African nations. In a grassroots effort, people in Israel have been organizing collections of diapers and baby formula and other family necessities, as well as lobbying for a change in laws, which currently call for the deportation of these asylum seekers. There is currently an initiative underway to resettle asylum seekers in Kibbutzim.

In addition, Temple Beth-El, through the Landsman Family Relief Fund, has given a large donation to Catholic Charities to help with another humanitarian crisis here in the United States, particularly in Texas where undocumented immigrant children have been separated from their families. According to reports, some people are being dropped off, sometimes in the middle of the night at the San Antonio bus station on their way to other places around the country with ankle bracelets but no money, food, water or clean clothing.

Temple Beth-El’s Landsman Family Relief Fund was established in 1996 in order to help individuals and families who are victimized by human and natural disasters throughout the world.

TASA launches intergenerational Dor l’Dor program

The Shmuel Bass Torah Academy of San Antonio is launching a new community engagement program this year. The objective of the Dor l’Dor (generation to generation) program is to develop relationships between TASA students and area senior citizens. TASA students will visit local senior centers, sharing programming and activities planned around the Jewish holiday cycle. Another element of the program will bring local seniors into the school to help develop meaningful relationships between the seniors and students. Overarching goals of the program include instilling within the students the values of “v’Hadarta pnei Zakain” (honoring our elders), developing a sense of community, and the importance of giving back to one’s community. This intergenerational program is possible due to a generous grant from San Antonio Jewish Senior Services.

TASA re-launches PTO

The Shmuel Bass Torah Academy, now in its 6th year of operation, is re-launching its Parent Teacher organization (PTO) for the 2018-2019 school year.

The program is being organized by Malkie Marrus, PTO President, and Brach Gluck, PTO Vice President. Committees have been formed to organize and plan a multitude of programs for the TASA students.

"It’s so exciting to see a revamping in our PTO structure and having enthusiastic parents that are ready to step up and make a difference," said Marrus. Parent volunteers are working on events that will be open to the community - such as family dinner nights and TASA’s annual Hanukkah party.

The sign of getting the best

Steve & Courtney Silver
Heintz Preschool accepting children for waiting list

Heintz Preschool at Congregation Agudas Achim has grown to record numbers, the largest in the school’s history.

Despite opening four new classrooms in the last year, the school has already reached capacity in some age levels, forcing the school to begin a wait list for the first time.

“Thanks to our reputation in the community and growing school, we were forced to create a waiting list for the time being until we can outfit more new classrooms to accommodate the numbers wanting to attend our school,” said Heintz Preschool Director Taryn Bretado.

Since some children will move from one age level to the next, and with plans on building more classroom space, there is hope that the waiting list will not exist for more than a few weeks. However, the school recommends applying for a spot and coming for a tour as soon as possible in order to reserve a spot in the school.

Heintz Preschool, for children 6 weeks old through Pre K prides itself on “Creating Creative Curiosity,” with a high focus on kindergarten readiness.

The preschool offers daily rotations, weekly and monthly themes not only focusing on secular themes but also intertwining Jewish values with each theme.

The core school day is from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. with extended hours are offered from 7am to 6pm.

For a tour or to learn more information, contact Heintz Preschool Director Taryn Bretado at (210) 479-7023 or by email at t.bretado@agudas-achim.org.

Temple Chai social action committee kicks off year of advocacy

Temple Chai’s social action committee, chaired by Jonathan Fink, is launching the 5779 Jewish year with a focus on immigration.

In the spirit of the Biblical command “You must love the stranger, for you were strangers in the land of Egypt,” (Deut. 10:19) the committee will work with local and national organizations that fulfill that ancient promise.

The work of the social action committee will be highlighted on Yom Kippur, when the liturgy reminds the Jewish people that “repentance, prayer, and righteous actions” are needed to make the individual and the community whole. Information about advocacy, volunteering, and involvement in various social action projects will be available throughout the day on Wednesday, Sept. 19 at Temple Chai’s services at Embassy Suites Landmark San Antonio. See www.templechaisa.org/HHD for the schedule.

The social action committee mission statement is “to connect Temple Chai congregants with opportunities for gemilut chasidim (acts of loving kindness) and tikkun olam (repairing the world) causing Temple Chai to be known for social action within the San Antonio Jewish and general community.”

For more information, visit www.templechaisa.org/social-action.

Temple Chai High Holy Day services open to all

Temple Chai, San Antonio’s small Reform congregation on the northwest side, is making its High Holy Day services open to the entire community, free of charge. Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur services will be at the brand-new Embassy Suites San Antonio Landmark, conveniently located at 5615 Landmark Pkwy (IH-10 West just inside Loop 1604).

Prospective members and spiritual seekers are encouraged to RSVP online so that they can be welcomed warmly at the services they choose to attend. Information, schedule, and registration materials are at www.templechaisa.org/HHD.

Led by Temple Chai’s Rabbi David Komerofsky and Cantorial Soloist Lisa Goldstein, with accompanist Manahara Virasinha and a volunteer choir, the High Holy Day liturgy this year is from the new Reform prayerbook Mishkan HaNefesh.

“The High Holy Days can be overwhelming,” said Rabbi Komerofsky. “Large crowds, long services and heavy content can sometimes be too much. Our services are intended to be spiritually uplifting and meaningful while still accessible. Being a small congregation means that even on the most crowded day of the year it’s still impossible to get lost in the crowd.”

SEPTEMBER 2018 17
Discovery in Brussels

By Marion Bernstein,
Past President,
Jewish Family Service

We were walking along a shady street in the St. Gilles district of Brussels, Belgium. Our son, who lives nearby, gestured to a row of apartments and offices. “This is some sort of Jewish social service agency,” he said, and pointed out the armed guards and massive brick planters between the street and row of buildings. From the name on the door, it appeared to be the local equivalent of our Jewish Family Service.

My adventurous husband suggested that we might want to pay the agency a visit. Fortunately, I had a business card that listed me as “Past President of JFS” which allayed the concerns of those who buzzed me in. “Just wait here,” they said. “The director is here and she will show you around.”

Her agency was founded after World War II with the assistance of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee. It serves all the French-speaking Jews in Belgium. (An agency serving Flemish Jews is based in Antwerp.) Among its concerns are more than 200 Holocaust survivors still living in Belgium.

Aside from that, they provide social, psychological, and even medical services to both Jews and non-Jews in the community. In some respects, their services mirror those of our Jewish Community Center or San Antonio Jewish Senior Services, in that they offer clubs for seniors to meet and discuss the Bible, see films, or converse in Yiddish, Hebrew or even English.

They provide a space for students to do their homework after school, and many of the regulars are Moslem children. “Their parents trust us,” notes Lederman-Bucquet.

The SSJ has about 40 employees and a budget that’s about twice as large as that of our JFS. They receive money from their royal (national) government as well as from Jewish groups like the Claims Conference, which provides funds for victims of the Holocaust. They also raise funds from the community, and they just held a fundraising dinner in May.

One aspect of their service is one we fortunately have little experience with – aiding the survivors of terrorist attacks. Brussels not only had a murderous attack on the Jewish museum, but also terrorist attacks on the general public on the subway and at the airport.

Lederman-Bucquet says that she has consulted with her counterparts in France, and they help one another in dealing with the aftermath of these all-too-common events.

I shared with her our experiences with natural disasters, such as hurricanes and flooding.

Certainly JFS and the SSJ deal with different sorts of disasters, but it all comes down to helping human beings cope with what the world throws at them. I am proud to be part of that effort.

B’nai B’nith: View from the top

By Irwin Barath,
Special to The Jewish Journal

Sitting here watching the world go by, I find it rather interesting that I am asked, “Is there a B’nai B’rith Lodge in San Antonio?” My answer is “YES”.

We are small in numbers, but we are fulfilling our mission, assisting the young and the old. We are collaborating with San Antonio Jewish Senior Services to provide lunches for the elderly. We also work with Jewish Family Service in their meals for the elderly program.

And, we assist the Hillel chapters in Austin, College Station and San Antonio. B’nai B’rith San Antonio usually meets at 10:30 a.m. on the second Sunday of the month (provided there is no Jewish Holiday on that day). We meet at the Jewish Campus in room 227. We will not meet in September, but will meet on October 14, as we celebrate B’nai B’rith’s 175th birthday.

I invite you to come join me as we watch the world go by, as we assist our young and old, and reflect upon the past.

Come visit us today to see why your friends and neighbors are choosing to live the Adante life.

Call today to schedule a personal tour.

By Naomi Pfefferman

LOS ANGELES (JTA) — Ask Ben Kingsley about why he was keen to portray Nazi criminal Adolf Eichmann in the new film Operation Finale and he describes the traumatic childhood incident in which he first learned about the Holocaust.

The 74-year-old British actor was then in grammar school and at home alone when he turned on a documentary about the liberation of the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp.

“I remember my heart stopped beating for a while,” Kingsley, who is not Jewish but believes he may have some Jewish relatives on his mother’s side, said in a telephone interview. “I nearly passed out. And I have been indelibly connected to the Holocaust ever since.”

His connection was even more enhanced when he asked his grandmother about the atrocities, and she said “Hitler was right” to have killed Jews.

“I went into deep shock and was unable to counter her,” Kingsley said. “But something must have clicked in my innermost soul that said ‘Grandmother, I will make you eat your words. I will pay you back for that. You have not distorted or poisoned my mind.’”

Kingsley went on to portray the Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal in the HBO film Murderers Among Us; the Jewish accountant Itzhak Stern in Schindler’s List; and Anne Frank’s father in a 2001 ABC miniseries. He also won an Academy Award for his turn as the titular Indian independence leader in 1982’s Gandhi.

During research for his Shoah-themed films, Kingsley became close friends with Holocaust survivor, activist and author Elie Wiesel. Not long before Wiesel’s death in 2016, the actor vowed to him that “the next time I walk onto a film set that is appropriate to your story, I will dedicate my performance to you.”

So when Kingsley was offered the Eichmann role in Operation Finale after Wiesel’s death — a film that debuts Aug. 29 and focuses on the Holocaust architect’s capture — the actor jumped at the chance. Just as he famously carried a picture of Anne Frank during the filming of Schindler’s List, he carried a photo of Wiesel during the filming of Operation Finale.

“[E]very day as promised, I looked at a picture of Elie that I carried in my pocket and said I’m doing this for you,” Kingsley said.

Operation Finale tells the story of Peter Malkin and other Mossad agents who covertly hunted and captured Eichmann hiding in Argentina and brought him to Israel for trial in 1961, where he was ultimately executed. The heart of the story is the cat-and-mouse game between Malkin (played by Oscar Isaac) and Eichmann, both of whom were master manipulators, according to the film’s director, Chris Weitz (About a Boy and A Better Life).

“Each one is trying to convince the other of something,” Weitz said in a telephone interview. “Malkin wanted to convince Eichmann to sign a paper indicating that he was willing to go to trial in Jerusalem. And Eichmann is trying out various defenses that he will eventually use in Israeli court. So in that regard there is the subterfuge of the escaped war criminal and also the subterfuge of the spy as he’s trying to turn a source.”

As for Eichmann, Weitz said, “I think the evidence shows a very chameleon-like figure who is constantly trying to serve his own ends and ambitions.”

Kingsley unabashedly sees his character as evil.

“What other adjective can you use?” he asked. “Not only did he commit these crimes as an architect of the Final Solution, he went to his grave proud of what he had done — utterly unrepentant.”

See KINGSLEY, page 23

Yet Kingsley said he chose not to portray Eichmann as “a B-movie, cartoon, comic strip villain.”

“That would have done a terrible disservice to the victims and the survivors I know and love,” he said. “It’s important for us to accept, to stomach and to swallow that the Nazis were men and women – ‘normal’ people. Twisted people, but they didn’t come from Mars.”

Weitz, 48, had his own personal connection to the material. His father, the fashion designer John Weitz, escaped Nazi Germany in 1933 at the age of 10. Nine years later he arrived in the United States and later became a spy for the OSS, the precursor of the CIA. He interrogated Nazi war criminals and helped liberate Bergen-Belsen, “which forever changed him,” his son said.

The filmmaker grew up with his father’s war stories and ultimately helped the patriarch write multiple books about Nazi war criminals.

As research for the film, both Weitz and Kingsley relied in part on the expertise of former Mossad agent Avner Abraham, who has curated a now-touring exhibition about Eichmann. Weitz eschewed photographing the famed glass booth in which Eichmann spent his trial – a part of the exhibition – because he feared that might be “blasphemous.”

The director also said he had “endless trepidations” about depicting images of the Holocaust, and so chose to do so through the lens of the Mossad agents’ memories.

“The agents’ memoirs indicate that they all found it deeply unsettling to be so near the person who had taken part in the murder of their families,” Weitz said. “Some of them were disappointed that all this evil could have the face of this rather unprepossessing man, which felt terribly out of scale to all the damage that had been done.”

Jewish delegation witnesses ‘heartbreaking’ situation at border detention centers and courthouse

By Josefien Dolsten

(JTA) — A delegation of Jewish leaders from 17 organizations has been visiting detention and migrant facilities on the U.S.-Mexico border.

The 27-person delegation visited detention centers in San Diego on August 21 and traveled to asylum-seeker shelters in Tijuana, Mexico, the following day.

The trip, which was organized by the Anti-Defamation League and the Jewish refugee aid group HIAS, included meetings with American and Mexican government officials, immigration attorneys and humanitarian workers.

Among the participants were representatives from three Jewish movements — Reform, Reconstructionist and Conservative — as well as groups such as the American Jewish World Service, the Jewish Council on Public Affairs and J Street.

Mark Hetfield, CEO of HIAS, described the visits to detention centers and courthouses where migrants are being tried on charges that they entered the country illegally.

“It’s heartbreaking to see the way the United States is treating immigrants. It’s not treating them like human beings,” he told JTA in a phone interview from Tijuana.

Hetfield, a former immigration lawyer, said members of the delegation witnessed migrants being tried in a court as a group and that some who pleaded guilty to criminal charges lacked proper understanding of the consequences.

“It’s really troubling in terms of the lack of due process and the lack of understanding that people have as they’re going through and pleading guilty to these criminal proceedings,” he said.

Nancy Kaufman, CEO of the National Council of Jewish Women, said visiting a detention center for unaccompanied minors, which held children as young as 6 years old, was “eye opening.”

Though she described the shelter as “clean and decent” and the staff as “very caring,” she had concerns about the conditions.

“I asked if they go to school. They have school there, but I don’t know how you have meaningful educational programs for that kind of range of kids,” she said.

Kaufman referenced the Holocaust in speaking about the importance of the trip.

“As Jewish leaders, we need to bear witness. We all committed after the Holocaust to ‘Never again’ — we meant it,” she said. “I think we all live our lives with the belief that every person is made in the image of G-d, ‘b’zelem Elohim,’ and should be treated with dignity and respect.”

Jonathan Greenblatt, CEO of ADL, called the trip “a moral imperative” in a statement to JTA.

“In the face of continued harsh policies by the Administration targeting immigrants and asylum seekers, we’re here to learn more about the crisis at the border, listen to the experiences of migrants and asylum seekers escaping violent conditions, and recommit to our advocacy for humane and compassionate immigration policies,” he said.

Many Jewish groups have joined progressives and some conservatives in criticizing President Donald Trump’s immigration policies, including his executive orders banning citizens from some Muslim-majority countries from entering the United States and the since-rescinded policy of separating migrant families at the border.

In late August, HIAS organized a letter to Trump urging him to raise the cap on refugees admitted into the country to at least 75,000. The letter was signed by leaders of 36 Jewish groups. Trump set the cap for 2018 at 45,000, a historic low, and is considering a further decrease, The New York Times reported last month.

(JTA) — British Labour Party leader Jeremy Corbyn's longtime secretary urged supporters to oppose candidates who appeared in the Jewish media, The Sun reported.

In a pamphlet published by the Palestinian Solidarity Campaign in 2010, Nicolette Petersen recommended that Labour supporters "read the Jewish Chronicle online and look at websites that will show you who not to vote for," asserting that it was better to divert support from Labour than to support anyone considering himself a "friend of Israel," according to The Sun.

"This isn't about helping Palestinians. It's about attacking Jews," Jewish Chronicle editor Stephen Pollard said. "The recommendation that activists who want to rid Parliament of Zionists use the Jewish Chronicle for a hit list of targets exposes the truth: that they use the word Zionist as a euphemism for Jew."

The incident is the latest of a string of revelations detailing Corbyn's antipathy for the Jewish state and highlights the widening gap between the British left and the country's Jewish community.

In July, Britain's three Jewish newspapers, including the Chronicle, united in publishing a front-page editorial warning of the "existential" threat to British Jewry that a government led by Jeremy Corbyn would pose.

"We do so because the party that was, until recently, the natural home for our community has seen its values and integrity eroded by Corbynite contempt for Jews and Israel," the editorials said, referring to the Labour Party. "The stain and shame of anti-Semitism has coursed through Her Majesty's Opposition since Jeremy Corbyn became leader in 2015."

Last month, i24News reported that Corbyn had called Israeli opposition leader Tzipi Livni a "war criminal" during a 2010 visit to the Gaza Strip. Writing for the Morning Star, a communist newspaper, he said that "any plans by the British government to curtail the opportunity to arrest" the former Israeli foreign minister would be "seen as yet another confirmation of British duplicity in the treatment of Palestinian people."

That revelation came a day after it emerged that Corbyn, already facing scrutiny over his contacts with various Palestinian terrorist groups, hosted a 2012 panel featuring a number of senior members of Hamas, the terrorist organization that controls Gaza.

Corbyn appeared beside several individuals who had been convicted of murder and had been freed the previous year in a prisoner swap.

Among those who appeared with Corbyn were Khaled Mashaal, who at the time was Hamas' political chief, and Husam Badran, the erstwhile head of the group's military wing who had overseen a series of bombings that killed dozens of Israeli civilians, including the 2001 attacks on the Sbarro pizzeria in Jerusalem and the Dolphinarium disco in Tel Aviv. Alongside Mashaal and Badran was Abdul Aziz Umar, who was responsible for the 2003 Cafe Hillel bombing in Jerusalem.

Corbyn said during the panel that "their contribution was fascinating and electrifying" despite the fact that the participants appeared to advocate violent attacks against Israel. Badran was filmed at the event saying that the Palestinians had been displaced by force and that "the return will only be viable through military and armed resistance and nothing else."
Headstones smashed at Jewish cemetery in Poland for second time in less than a month

(JTA) — A Jewish cemetery near Krakow was vandalized for the second time in less than a month, resulting in damage to dozens of headstones.

At least 30 headstones were pushed over, some of them shattered, in the latest incident recorded at the cemetery in Mysłowice, a town located about 40 miles west of Krakow, the Jewish.pl news site reported August 22 on its Facebook page.

Some of the headstones toppled had been repaired following an earlier incident in which 20 headstones were shattered in late July, the report said. Police are investigating both incidents but have no suspects in custody.

In 2012, the Council of Europe adopted a nonbinding resolution placing responsibility for the care of Jewish cemeteries on national governments. The resolution was based in part on a report that said Jewish cemeteries are “probably” more vulnerable than other cemeteries.

In addition to frequent vandalism, including for anti-Semitic reasons, at Jewish cemeteries, the report also noted instances of cemeteries in Eastern Europe that have been turned into “residential areas, public gardens, leisure parks, army grounds and storage sites; some have been turned into lakes.”

Trump administration slashes $200 million in funding to Palestinians

By Ron Kampeas

WASHINGTON (JTA) -- The Trump administration cut funding to the Palestinians by $200 million, citing Hamas rule in the Gaza Strip.

“At the direction of President Trump, we have undertaken a review of U.S. assistance to the Palestinian Authority and in the West Bank and Gaza to ensure these funds are spent in accordance with U.S. national interests and provide value to the U.S. taxpayer,” a State Department official said in an email to JTA.

“As a result of that review, at the direction of the president, we will redirect more than $200 million in FY2017 Economic Support Funds originally planned for programs in the West Bank and Gaza. Those funds will now address high-priority projects elsewhere. This decision takes into account the challenges the international community faces in providing assistance in Gaza, where Hamas control endangers the lives of Gazan’s citizens and degrades an already dire humanitarian and economic situation.”

It’s not clear what the cuts would mean for overall funding, although the figure suggested they would be far-reaching. Congress has in the past mandated $400 million to $500 million in funding for the Palestinians, but the United States already cuts back funding commensurate with payments the Palestinian Authority pays to the families of Palestinians who have attacked Israelis.

Additional showing of documentary on San Antonio’s Black history scheduled

Following two sold out showings of the San Antonio documentary, Walk on the River: A Black History of the Alamo City, additional showings are now in the works for late September and will be held at Alamo Drafthouse Park North in San Antonio. For information, dates and tickets, visit walkontheriver.com. Tickets are only $10 per person.

The film’s premier in August was an official Tricentennial event at the Carver Community Cultural Center, and played to a sold-out crowd of 600.

The ambitious documentary highlights Black contributions to San Antonio over a 100 year period, leading up to desegregation. It highlights the innovative, resilient nature of a community faced with discrimination and segregation and the lasting impact on the cultural fabric of San Antonio.

The San Antonio Black and Jewish communities have long worked together on issues of social justice, and jointly conduct a series of interfaith services and events during Dream Week each year.
Israel has announced more West Bank settlement construction — Both the left and right are angry

JERUSALEM (JTA) — The Israeli government advanced plans for the construction of more than 1,000 housing units in the West Bank on Wednesday, drawing condemnations from both the political left and the settlement movement itself.

Construction on 382 of the 1,400 units will be able to begin immediately, while the others will require several more approvals before breaking ground. A number of the units are slated to be built in isolated settlements, Haaretz reported.

Settlement expansion is “like sticking a finger in the eye of any possible peace process,” said Tamar Zandberg, chairwoman of the left-wing Meretz party. “The government doesn’t care about Israeli interests, only about the interests of settlers.”

The Yesha Council, which represents the settlement movement, complained that the Netanyahu administration was limiting settlement expansion.

“This is the smallest number of units that the committee has advanced in the last year-and-a-half,” the council said in a statement reported by The Jerusalem Post. “At past committee meetings some 2,000-3,000 housing units were advanced and this number is small compared to the tens of thousands of housing units authorized throughout the country. A nationalist government should be expanding construction and not reducing it.”

The council called “upon the prime minister to remove restrictions and to allow for construction throughout Judea and Samaria, just as it occurs in the rest of the country. This must be done today.”

The Knesset’s Land of Israel Caucus also protested the decision, saying that “the government decided to authorize fledgling communities, it must implement the decision more energetically and actively promote the regulation of these communities, and not go the opposite way.”

The Israeli army’s Civil Administration was expected to legalize two West Bank outposts on August 21 but ultimately refrained.

Poland gives record number of passports to Israelis

By Cnaan Liphshiz

(JTA) -- More than 20,000 Israelis have obtained Polish citizenship in the years 2010-2017 -- an increase of more than 250 percent over the previous seven years.

The data, released last month by the embassy of Poland in Israel, on the approval of naturalization applications by Israelis to the Polish embassy in Israel show that 10,820 Israelis became Poles during the years 2015-2017 alone -- slightly more than in the years 2002-2010 combined.
Loophole allows expansion of Western Wall egalitarian prayer section

JERUSALEM (JTA) -- A plan to expand the Western Wall's egalitarian prayer section received final approval, using a loophole that applies to handicapped-accessible sites.

The approval was first reported on August 27 in Haaretz, which did not say when the meeting to approve the work took place.

Approval of the work under the special regulation cut months off the time it would take to begin the work, since it need only be approved by the municipal engineer and not also by both the regional and local planning committees.

The scheme to approve the fast-track process for the work was supported by the Prime Minister's Office, according to the report.

The attorney general's office reportedly was against using the loophole of as a way to approve a major and controversial project. The plan was approved by the Jerusalem municipality's legal counsel, however. Plans to renovate the site, with a budget of more than $7 million, have continued, despite the suspension of a comprehensive plan approved in 2016.

In June 2017, the Cabinet suspended the deal that came about as a result of negotiations between the Reform and Conservative movements, the Women of the Wall, the Jewish Agency for Israel and the Israeli government. The suspension came after the government's haredi Orthodox coalition partners pressured Netanyahu to scrap the agreement, including threatening to bring down the government.

Netanyahu had promised to expand the area following the suspension of the comprehensive deal, though the expansion has been appealed to Israel's Supreme Court over concern that it would damage an important archeological site.

In July, the three members of the Knesset ministerial committee charged with deciding whether to approve the plan to upgrade the Western Wall's egalitarian section resigned over political pressure from the haredi Orthodox parties. Netanyahu placed himself as head of the committee.

the only synagogue in the city that survived World War II.

During his visit, Netanyahu noted that he is a Litvak on both sides and called his visit is a return. “I come to Vilna, I return to Vilna as the head of a proud, strong, advanced Jewish state. For the Jewish people, what has changed in these 75 years? Not the attempts to destroy us. They’re still (trying) to destroy us. Iran says so openly. Hamas says so openly and others. What has changed is our ability to defend ourselves by ourselves. We are no longer defenseless. We are no longer helpless. We are a power that controls our own destiny with the State of Israel and the army of Israel.”

The Netanyahus also visited the Vilna Ghetto. “We saw the glory of Jewish Vilna that was lost and in this visit we see an expression of what has been retrieved – the rise of the reborn Jewish state of Israel. What a distance we have travelled in 75 years from the death pits of Ponar to a rising power in the world,” he said.

(For more than a year, Jewish Federation of San Antonio sponsored a Mitzvah Project to help the Vilna/ Vilnius Jewish Public Library build up its children’s section.)

Netanyahu was accompanied by Lithuanian Foreign Minister Linas Antanas Antanas Linkevičius, who he called a “great friend.”

“I want to thank you Linas for standing up for Israel and the truth in European forums, for telling your colleagues the service that Israel performs in saving so many European lives by our resourceful and brave intelligence people. We have saved so many European lives in so many countries. Israel in many ways is the defender of Europe and it’s time that Europe understood this,” he said.

The prime minister was in Lithuania to take part in the Baltic States Summit, the first time that a prime minister of Israel has visited Lithuania and has been invited to the summit.
