"It is not what one says, but rather what one does, that makes all the difference in the world (Pirke Avot Ethics of the Fathers)." This teaching of Shimon, from Pirke Avot, speaks to the importance of engaging in the work of building our Jewish community. We have many in our community who actively help the work of the Jewish Federation, and for that, I am grateful. There are numerous individuals who give of their time and their resources to ensure that the Jewish Federation is able to provide support for our local agencies and for Jews around the world. In this Journal you will find an ad that highlights our 2017 annual campaign, dollars raised, events held and volunteers and staff that enabled us to be successful. It is this "doing" that makes "all the difference in the world." We do with money, with time and with passion. And I want to personally thank all of the individuals who have contributed to our Federation. As we are all still in the

On March 7, 2018, The Jewish Federation of San Antonio will host the 2nd Hope for Humanity Gala to benefit the Holocaust Memorial Museum of San Antonio (HMMSA). Guest speaker, Jennifer Teege, will talk about her maternal grandfather, Austrian Nazi concentration camp commander and war criminal Amon Goth.

At 38, Teege unexpectedly learned about her family history when she discovered her mother's biography in the library. As the product of an Austrian-German mother and Nigerian father, she understood that the ideology her grandfather prescribed to would have made her a target and to come to terms with the past, she authored the book, My Grandfather Would Have Shot Me. HMMSA Docents recently read her book as part of a book study hosted by the Museum staff. The following questions were posed to Jennifer, and below are her responses:

What prompted you to write your story?
It wasn't something I decided immediately, it was a process. Once I realized, it's an individual story, but with so many universal aspects, I thought it's worthwhile to share it.

What has been liberating to you as you discovered and investigated your family?
Adorno said: "A wronged life can't be lived rightly," I agree. The only way to live a true and authentic life is to bring the skeletons out of the closets where they are hiding. Ignorance is not bliss.

Your book is based on seeking answers and being curious. Are there any questions that you initially asked yourself that have been unanswered?
It's unrealistic to believe one will find all answers in life. There'll always be blind spots - that's ok.

How did you reconcile the love your grandmother had for Amon? Or the love she had for you?
I've fond memories of my grandmother who I saw last when I was 7 years old and who committed suicide when I was 12 years old. The question is, is it possible to love one part of a person while rejecting another part? I believe, yes. Nevertheless, different from my grandmother, I don't minimize what my grandfather did. I don't excuse it and I'm aware that he was a war criminal.

Did you feel the depiction of your grandmother in “Schindler’s List” was accurate? How did you feel about it?
Schindler’s List is a Hollywood feature, not a documentary. I was always very conscious about that fact. One has to differentiate between a

Budapest Delegation visits San Antonio

By Lauren Abraham,
JFSA Special Projects Coordinator

San Antonio welcomed the young adult delegation of Hedi Pusztai and Marton Tordai of Budapest, Hungary, as they arrived on January 9. Pusztai and Tordai shared an engaging Prezi presentation about Budapest, Hungary with children from the Temple Beth El Religious School, Inda Posner Religious School of Congregation Agudas Achim, and the Torah Academy of San Antonio (TASA). The students learned about the Jewish history and geography of our Eastern European partnering country, and even learned a few Hungarian phrases. The Budapest delegation also met with the young adults in Federation's Emerging Leadership Course (ELC). Pusztai and Tordai were treated to their first Tex Mex meal with kosher cheese and vegan enchiladas before sharing their presentation on Jewish life in Hungary. ELC students learned about history from the 19th century through the second World War Pusztai and Tordai's personal stories. Each grew up not knowing about their Jewish identities and learned through Birthright and Partnership2Gether programs how to reconnect with their cultures and heritage. Pusztai and Tordai Temple Beth El Religious School welcome the delegates when they first arrived in San Antonio. They were treated to a Hungarian history review. “real” person and the movie character. Did you have any contact with any other 2nd or 3rd generation family members of perpetrators or victims? How did this affect you?

Of course. In Germany you have so many families where there are perpetrators. Most of the elements you see in my life you can find in other people.

I met many survivors and their families over the years. When I’m with them, I see that the story of my life is not only my individual life, but it really has a symbolic meaning. I feel grateful and I feel truly blessed.

There is an empowering quote that proves that you do not have to be a product of your circumstances which is, “There is no Nazi gene. We can decide for ourselves who and what we want to be.” Could you share how this impacted your story?

You decide who you want to be. It’s your character and you set an example that you can be different. It’s not connected to genes.

Catholics and Jews celebrate Hanukkah at San Fernando Cathedral

On Thursday, Dec. 14, Catholics and Jews came together to celebrate Hanukkah during a special luncheon at San Fernando Cathedral. This annual luncheon highlights the friendship that exists between our two communities and shows our dedication to nurturing the Catholic and Jewish relationship in the years to come. Special guest and speaker, Rabbi James Rudin, with American Jewish Committee, warned that the main growth of Catholics and Jewish populations are in parts of the world that have not had the dialogue that we have experienced over the last 50 years in North America and Europe.

beginning of 2018, I want to encourage everyone in our community to DO something this year to help the Jewish Federation thrive. This community is OURS and the responsibility is ours collectively. Let me give you some ideas: attend a Federation program or a program funded by the Federation and share it on social media and name JFSA, volunteer on Super Sunday (September 16, 2018), make a financial contribution or serve on a Federation committee. We need your support and we welcome your help.

The beauty of the teachings of Pirke Avot is that they are intended to develop us as individuals ethically and morally. Pirke Avot is not telling us what laws to observe and the details involved in properly executing those laws, but rather how to be a better person from the perspective of doing what is right. From my perspective, we support the Jewish Federation because it is the right thing to do for our community. Join me and the many other volunteers in 2018 in further growing the impact of our Jewish Federation.
On January 8, community members, civic leaders, and media gathered for the kickoff of the 6th Annual Holocaust: Learn and Remember. The theme, Art and Survival was explored through plays, films, scholarly discussions on looted, cultural property, the model camp: Terezin, and our featured exhibit at the SA Central Library Gallery. Holocaust Memorial Museum of San Antonio (HMMSA) Director Ollervidez extended thanks to Howie Nestel and Ramiro Salazar, founders and co-chairs of Learn and Remember; guest speaker and survivor, Eva Balcazar; and to the San Antonio Public Library Foundation, San Antonio Public Library, Steve and Carmen Goldberg, and contributors to the annual campaign of the Jewish Federation of San Antonio for collaborating on the important educational outreach event.

Many children never imagine themselves as “sleepaway camp kids.” 7th grader Samantha Fein and her brother Jack never did. That was until this past year when they both decided to attend Camp Young Judea-Texas and BBYO Kallah at the same time. Samantha had attended Shabbatons at Camp Young Judea in the past, but her mother Cathy Fein said, “she had never expressed interest in being away for so long.” Fein said she was thrilled at the prospect of having two “sleepaway camp kids,” but admitted, “our family had not planned on spending this amount of money to send both kids away for the summer.”

So, they applied for Federation’s One Happy Camper Gift Grant. To their delight, Samantha was awarded a $1,000 dollar grant to attend Camp Young Judea for the first time.

“Samantha came home a better version of herself,” said her mother. “She is now more independent, very accomplished, and the summer really let her grow into herself.”

“I really enjoyed Shabbat at camp and singing the prayers and Jewish songs in fun ways when I was at CYJ,” says Samantha. “I can’t wait to go back to Camp this summer and reunite with my friends from last year. This year we will get more privileges and have even more fun.”

For more information about the Jewish Federation’s One Happy Camper Gift Grant that helps support first time Jewish sleep away camp attendees, contact Lauren Abraham at AbrahamL@jfsatx.org or call the Jewish Federation office at (210) 302-6960.
Marc Schnall

What brought you to San Antonio?
After law school, I got my first job as a lawyer in San Antonio, where my wife Sandi grew up. Joining a small law firm, I started to build a law practice. We had roots in the community, my in-laws were here, and the climate is generally lovely. We raised our three children, Brian (who now lives in Denver with his wife and two children), Lisa (now in Washington DC), and Daniel (who lives in St. Louis with his wife) and we are happy to be in San Antonio.

What is your strongest Jewish memory?
In 1996, as President of Congregation Agudas Achim, I presided over the new synagogue building dedication weekend. One of my main goals as a Jewish leader in San Antonio has been to preserve Conservative Judaism in our community. Building the new synagogue at its new location was a major achievement for the congregation and for the Jewish community and the dedication events were truly special. Friday night, the new sanctuary was full, and the Shabbat service included beautiful singing from the youth chorale. Saturday morning our teens, including mine and Rabbi Spiegel’s, read Torah. On Sunday morning, we began to walk with the Torahs from the Donaldson building toward the new Huebner location, stopping only due to a rain storm. Sunday afternoon we had a ribbon cutting ceremony, a formal dedication service in a packed sanctuary, and a celebration reception. This was a weekend I will never forget.

What volunteer activities do you find the most rewarding and why?
I really find it rewarding to be on various boards of trustees and use my experience to help implement decisions and make sure we preserve the future of our agencies. I have served on the boards of Jewish Family Service, the Jewish Federation of San Antonio, Congregation Agudas Achim, the Keystone School, the original Jewish Day School (which then became the Jonathan Netanyahu Academy), and the Alumni Board of Governors of Washington University. I am currently one of the two Vice Presidents of the board of the Campus of the San Antonio Jewish Community as well.

Please share your favorite Jewish holiday and why?
For me this is the toughest question, as I enjoy them all. I think my favorite is Passover. This is due to the connection with family, history, and the message of freedom. Some years ago, our family began putting an orange on our Seder plate which makes the holiday special and meaningful to us.

Name a hope or aspiration you have for the San Antonio Jewish community.
I hope our Jewish community continues to thrive and continues to grow for future generations.

Governors of Washington University. I am currently one of the two Vice Presidents of the board of the Campus of the San Antonio Jewish Community as well.

Now showing at SA Public Libraries: The Holocaust

As part of the annual Holocaust Learn & Remember exhibit, the San Antonio Public Library, in collaboration with the San Antonio Public Library Foundation, and The Holocaust Museum of San Antonio, will feature Holocaust-themed films and performances at branch libraries across the city this month. The following films and performances are scheduled for February:

The Pianist (Film, R) - A gifted Polish-Jewish musician who struggles to survive WWII in the Warsaw ghetto. During the early day of the Nazi occupation, he imagines himself above the danger. Later, he narrowly escapes deportation to a Nazi concentration camp and goes into hiding.

The Monuments Men (Film, PG-13) - Allied WWII-era art experts who venture into Germany to recover works of art stolen by the Nazis, which are slated for destruction if the Third Reich falls. With little combat experience, the ragtag squadrons have their work cut out for them.

Hiding in the Spotlight (One-Act Play) - Six-year-old musically gifted Zhanna during the Holocaust. When her family is to be executed by the Nazis, her father distracts the soldiers, allowing Zhanna to escape. Zhanna creates a new identity for herself. Zhanna is overheard playing the piano by a Nazi battalion and soon finds herself performing for Nazi forces.
Chabad’s Annual L’Chaim Event

Chabad’s Annual L’Chaim Event will be held on Sunday, March 18 at the Chabad Center for Jewish Life & Learning. Rabbi Yossi and Malkie Marrus will be honored with the 2018 Dor L’Dor Award in tribute to their twenty years of outstanding service to the San Antonio Jewish community.

“The Marrus’ faith, warmth and passion have inspired and touched the lives of thousands in our community,” said Rabbi Chaim Block, Executive Director of Chabad. “Their leadership and dedication have greatly contributed to Jewish life in San Antonio over the last 20 years.”

Rabbi and Mrs. Marrus have devoted their lives to Jewish education in San Antonio. Rabbi Marrus was the Judaic Studies coordinator of the Eleanor Kolitz Academy and now serves in this capacity at the Torah Academy of San Antonio. Malkie Marrus is an acclaimed and beloved preschool teacher at Gan Gani Preschool.

“We are delighted to express our thanks and appreciation to Rabbi and Malkie Marrus for their hard work and dedication to our community,” said Michelle and Steve Coben, co-chairs of the 2018 Chabad L’Chaim Event.

Mr. Dan Markson, Senior Vice President of the NRP Group in San Antonio, will be honored with the 2018 Chabad Distinguished Community Service Award. Markson has worked diligently to transform neighborhoods throughout San Antonio. In 2000, he chose San Antonio as the priority to develop quality affordable housing for over 12,000 families. These affordable living communities include the pillar of each development – the Homework First program. This free service for residents offers children a safe place after school to come do their homework, enjoy snacks and participate in learning activities. Markson’s grandfather, Rabbi Yehudah Leib Hurvitt, was one of the exemplary students in the Yeshivah in the city of Lubavitch, Russia, in the early 1900’s. Markson has dedicated the library at the Chabad Center in his beloved grandfather’s memory.

“We are honored to present Dan with the 2018 Distinguished Community Service Award for his many years of philanthropic work in the Jewish and civic communities,” said Rabbi Chaim Block.

Entertainment for the event will be provided by the globally acclaimed illusionist Ilan Smith.

For tickets and sponsorship opportunities, please call Chabad at (210) 764-0300 or visit www.ChabadSA.org/lchaim.

JFS sets date for Evening of Inspiration

Since 2005, Jewish Family Service of San Antonio has hosted a fundraiser each spring to draw attention to the organization and its many programs. From 2005-2014 this event was known as the Mothers’ Day Luncheon, which honored community members who were supportive of JFS. In 2015, the event moved to an evening meal, with its name retaining its emphasis on mothers. In 2016, JFS broadened its focus to include both women and men honorees, and renamed the fundraiser the Evening of Inspiration.

This year’s Evening of Inspiration is scheduled for April 29. Details of the event and the honorees are being finalized, and will be published in the March issue of the Jewish Journal. For more information visit https://jfs-sa.org/evening-of-inspiration/ or call (210) 302-6954.

Hadassah pioneers life-changing MS treatment

Malia Litman was a top Dallas trial attorney—a senior partner in a law firm—and the mother of three children—the youngest, age five. Her energy level was high, and her life was full. And then she was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis (MS), an unpredictable and often disabling autoimmune disease. The next 16 years were a journey of declining energy and mobility. Ultimately, she could only walk a very short distance with a walker. Her balance became more unsteady. Her speech was harder to understand. With the MS diagnosis, Malia’s law career came to a halt.

Then, during a very extensive search on the internet for innovative treatments, she discovered the work of Prof. Dimitrios Karussis, Senior Neurologist and head of the Multiple Sclerosis Center at Hadassah Hospital Ein Kerem. Prof. Karussis was conducting a world-first clinical trial involving the injection of a patient’s own stem cells directly into the spinal cord.

Since she was accepted into HMO for treatment, she has had four stem cell transfusions. With the very first one, her energy soared. With each subsequent one, her symptoms continued to improve.

Malia has resumed her law practice, no longer takes any medication for MS, and being an MS patient is no longer a central focus of her life. But, she is now a stem cell activist and fundraiser on behalf of Hadassah because “I feel I have been given a gift and I want to ensure that more people with MS can be helped.”

NISD school named in honor of San Antonio rancher Nate Kallison

In November 2017, Northside Independent School dedicated its newest elementary school, named after Nathan Kallison, a well-known rancher who was also instrumental in the development of the San Antonio Jewish community.

Nathan Kallison Elementary School is located in the 1604/Culebra corridor, one of the fastest growing areas of San Antonio today. Back in the early 1900s, this area was mainly ranches and farms. Nathan Kallison owned a 2,700-acre ranch that he used as a living laboratory to advance farming and ranching techniques. He also owned a popular downtown store, Kallison’s, which was one of the largest farming and ranching suppliers in the Southwest.

Kallison Elementary School is the district’s 78th elementary school. Kallison’s grandson, Nick Kotz, spoke during the dedication ceremony. Kotz is a Pulitzer-Prize winning journalist and author of a book on his grandfather’s life, The Harness Maker’s Dream.
LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear friends,

I am very proud of the work B’nai Brith accomplished this year.

When the United Nations and international bodies adopted nearly 20 anti-Israel resolutions, B’nai Brith worked tirelessly to advocate with top policy makers as the leading Jewish voice in senior issues, social security and health care, while continuing to sponsor affordable housing for over 8,000 residents in 28 supportive communities throughout the United States.

When communities were hit with natural disasters, when important human rights needed an advocate and when your voice needed to be heard across the globe, B’nai Brith was able to respond immediately because of community support.

It is only through the generosity of you, our members and supporters, that B’nai Brith was able to tackle every issue as it arose throughout 2017. But new issues will most certainly arise in the year 2018, and we need your support to provide the resources needed to address them.

Alamo Brandeis B’nai Brith Lodge monthly activities will take place on Sunday, Feb. 11 at 10:30 a.m. on the Campus of the San Antonio Jewish Community

To get involved or for further information contact me at (210) 341-4502.

Can’t Beat Love youth film contest set for February 28

The National Council of Jewish Women (NCJW) and Family Violence Prevention Services (FVPS) will award trophies and cash prizes to winners in the Short Film and PSA categories to highlight the growing issue of teen trafficking in our schools, homes and community at the 8th Annual Can’t Beat Love Film Premiere and Winner’s Gala.

The event will take place at Santikos Silverado located at Loop 1604 and Bandera Road on Wednesday, Feb. 28, at 7 pm. Admission is free.

Area high school students created either short films or public service announcements that showcase the dangers of human trafficking, which affects every socio-economic and cultural level.

Trophies and awards will be presented, including peer choice and special judges’ awards.

“Teen trafficking has been a major concern in Texas, and NCJW developed a program to educate teens and their families several years ago,” said NCJW co-chair of Trafficked Teens Marcia Waldgeir. “We are pleased to present this as a Can’t Beat Love topic this year. Our goal is to build greater awareness of the trafficking problem in San Antonio and provide student filmmakers with an outlet to address this important issue.”

To request additional information about Can’t Beat Love or the Trafficked Teens program, please contact Marcia Waldgeir at mawaldgeir@satx.rr.com. Links to both Can’t Beat Love and Trafficked Teens can be found in the Programs section of the NCJW website, www.ncjwsa.org.

published in Italy.

The book belonged to the library of Prague’s Jewish Community before the war, and it is not clear under what circumstances it disappeared.

“It’s an exceptional moment for us that such a rare book returns to Prague after such a long time,” Leo Pavlat, director of the Jewish Museum in Prague, the legal successor to the Czech capital’s pre-war Jewish community.

The book turned up last year at an auction organized by Kestenbaum & Company, a New York auction house that specializes in Judaica and rare books. The auction house withdrew it from the sale at the museum’s request. Auction house director Daniel Kestenbaum identified the book’s most recent owner as a scholar in Jerusalem who had agreed to let the museum have it.

The scholar said he was willing to return the book because a refusal would be “an active continuity of those terrible thefts committed against Jewish property and cultural treasures perpetrated by the German Nazis.”

At Issue: The first Jew in Congress

It surely has not escaped the notice of anti-Semites that Jews have infiltrated the Congress of the United States. Almost 6 percent of its members – including the top Democrat in the Senate, Charles Schumer – are Jewish, though Jews constitute only 2 percent of the general population. Jews have been elected to Congress not only from such obvious strongholds as New York, California, Florida, and Illinois but also from Hawaii, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Vermont, where it is hard to scrape together a minyan.

It was not always so. Article VI of the Constitution guarantees that “no religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United States.” But that did not prevent individual states from prohibiting Jews from serving on juries, testifying in court, or holding local positions. When the first Congress convened, in 1789, all its members were Christians, and it took more than half a century before a Jew was elected to represent any district in Congress.

Lewis Charles Levin was that Jew, and he served three terms, beginning in 1844. An anti-immigrant and anti-Catholic nativist, Levin was not a credit to the Jewish community. Born in Charleston, South Carolina, in 1808, he moved to Philadelphia in 1839 and soon achieved notoriety for the temperance newspaper he published and his intemperate xenophobic rants. The potato famine sent almost a million Irish fleeing to America, and Levin scapegoated them for the job shortages faced by Americans. He helped foment deadly anti-immigrant riots in Philadelphia.

Levin was a leader of the Native American Party, whose name, which he chose, referred not to American Indians but to privileged citizens who, like Levin, were born in the United States. It eventually morphed into the Know Nothing movement. Levin anticipated later American demagogues who still prey on popular fears of strangers. He accused American Catholics of being pawns of a foreign power, the Pope, and, unable to stem immigration entirely, he attempted, unsuccessfully, to push legislation that would extend to 21 years the period of residence required for citizenship.

The terrible irony is that it was a Jew who, a couple of decades before millions of Jews fled poverty and pogroms in Eastern Europe, became a champion of nativist bigotry and religious animosity. Jewish poet Emma Lazarus had not yet written her words of welcome to “your tired, your poor,/ Your huddled masses yearning to breathe” for a Statue of Liberty not yet erected. But Levin trashed the ancient Jewish principle of welcoming the stranger. The first Jew in Congress was a stark contrast to those who followed, men and women such as Bella Abzug, Barney Frank, Jacob Javits, Tom Lantos, Abraham Ribicoff, and Paul Wellstone for whom public service was a mitzvah.

Levin died in 1860, in the Philadelphia Hospital for the Insane. Twenty years later, both his wife and his son converted to Catholicism.

Israeli Air Force names first female flight squadron commander

JERUSALEM (JTA) — A female pilot for the first time has been named the commander of a flight squadron in the Israeli Air Force.

Major T., whose first name is not provided due to security concerns, a 35-year-old mother of two, will be promoted to lieutenant colonel, the highest rank ever held by a female air traffic controller.

In Austrian jail, Holocaust historian indicts the country for how it handles looted Jewish property

VIENNA (JTA) — If Stephan Templ’s trial and imprisonment in Austria were meant to silence his criticism of the country’s Holocaust restitution system, then his prosecution was clearly a failure.

Templ is an Austrian-Jewish historian of the Holocaust who has written critically about his country since 1995.

In 2015, he was sent to jail for nearly a year on controversial fraud charges tied to his family’s own claim for compensation — and spent his time in prison diving even deeper into his area of expertise.

The result is a new book that for the first time chronicles how modern-day Austria gave its seal of approval for flawed restitution practices that were overseen by former Nazis. Those practices, Templ shows, in essence validated Nazi-era policies that were used to rob Austrian Jews of what little compensation they sought to receive for vast assets that they had been forced to sell to Aryans.

“The wrongly imprisoned get into a cycle about where you are and who put you there,” Templ, 57, told JTA. His sentence was decried as a miscarriage of justice by dozens of leading Holocaust historians.

Templ was convicted of fraud for not listing an aunt on his survivor mother’s restitution claim, which he filled out for her. Neither Templ nor his mother wrote that they were the only claimants to the property.

Austria has no law requiring restitution applicants to list other relatives. In previous official correspondence about the claim, Templ did list his aunt, which he argues means he had indeed informed the Republic of Austria of her existence.

“The 75 historians, including Americans Deborah Lipstadt and Michael Berenbaum, suggested in a joint statement that Templ’s prosecution looked like a vendetta by the Austrian judiciary, which the Freedom Barometer index of 2016 ranked as the least independent in Western Europe.

The Anti-Defamation League also protested Templ’s sentence, as did the human rights lawyer Robert Amsterdam and Stuart Eizenstat, a former U.S. deputy secretary of the Treasury who helped set up Austria’s restitution system.

Efraim Zuroff, Eastern Europe director for the Simon Wiesenthal Center, told JTA about the case: “It looks like revenge, like they wanted to get back at him for his criticism. I’m not a jurist but it looks like an injustice.”

Templ currently is facing a civil libel suit by Claire Fritsch, a legal adviser to the restitution authority who served as the main witness in his criminal court case. She claims she was libeled by his defense team’s attempts to undermine her testimony.

In Templ’s English-language book, Austria’s Living Ghost, he examines the work of Austria’s Arbitration Panel for in Rem Restitution, a body set up in 2002 to review the restitution work done immediately after World War II on properties that in 2001 were in the state’s possession.

Until the 1990s, Austria had claimed that it was principally a victim, not a perpetrator, of Nazism. No one has been convicted of Nazi war crimes in Austria in more than 35 years, according to the Simon Wiesenthal Center. And whereas people with a Nazi past were removed from positions of influence in neighboring Germany, in Austria they were allowed to serve as judges, teachers and even restitution officials. (Walther Kastner, for example, was a former Nazi official who was entrusted with advising on restitution issues in the 1940s.)

Austria even had a former Nazi, Kurt Waldheim, as president until 1992 — the year that Austrian officials began to drop the victim attitude, which is now described as a “myth” on official Austrian government websites.

But that myth has had far-reaching implications for Austria, said Templ, who in 2001 led groups around Vienna on tours of stolen Jewish property. He pointed out building after building, using a loudspeaker to name the families whose ancestors bought the assets for a fraction of their true worth from Jews fleeing for their lives.

“The lack of de-Nazification is the reason Austria now has in government, for the second time already, a party that was founded by an SS officer,” he said of the far-right Freedom Party, which joined the coalition in December.

Austria’s victim myth also tainted how the Austrian state handled the return of Jews from concentration camps, prosecuted Nazi war criminals and settled restitution issues. Concerns about this process led to a 2002 review by the Arbitration Panel, as part of a restitution treaty that Austria signed with the United States in 2001.

Thanks to the treaty, Austria has paid at least $670 million in compensation. But even that may have been the tip of the iceberg in a country that had at least 200,000 Jews before the Holocaust, many of them wealthy.

Templ’s research shows that out of nearly 2,000 restitution cases handled in the 1940s and 1950s, the Arbitration Panel reopened and declared unjust a total of only nine cases. It intervened in another 18 cases that had not been the subject of a claim, he said.

“This seemed to me like an astonishingly low number, considering the prevalence of injustice that went on in 1940s and 1950s restitution,” Templ said.

Take, for instance, the case of Anna Freud, the daughter of the famed Viennese psychoanalyst. Following her claim for restitution for a handsome estate that the Nazis stole from her family in 1938, she received in the 1950s a sum equivalent to $80, Templ’s research shows. However, that property was not reviewed in 2002, because the estate was privately owned and therefore not in the purview of the Arbitration Panel on state-held properties.

“So in prison, I set out to review for myself the claims that the Arbitration Panel had reviewed before me,” Templ, a bespectacled intellectual with a wry sense of humor and a passion for carpentry, said during a rare visit to Vienna (following his release from prison in 2015, Templ is spending most of his time in his Prague home, in what he terms self-exile).

The findings, he said, surprised even him.

One case deemed fair by the Arbitration Panel involved an apartment building in Vienna’s Alserbach Street owned by the Stianssy family. The Aryan buyers paid only 38 percent of its real worth in 1939. Of that sum, the Nazi state stole 80 percent through racist “emigration taxes” devised to defund Jewish sellers. The other 20 percent went to a frozen account and from there to the coffers of the Third Reich, his research shows. In 1951, Austrian restitution officials declined to return the “emigration taxes” to the Stianssy family, essentially validating their extraction.

Yet the Arbitration Panel in its 2014 review stated that it “cannot conclude that the settlement reached in 1951 represents an extreme injustice.” In so doing, Templ writes, “the Panel confirms the injustice.”

Leopold Stiassny died in Prague on Nov. 20, 1939. His wife, Martha Stiassny, was murdered in Auschwitz. Three of their close relatives were murdered by 1945.

Among the dozens of reviews flagged by Templ is a 2012 case concerning the sale of a forest 45 miles southwest of Vienna by the Hartenstein family. The findings, he said, surprised even him.

Anish Kapoor’s 2017 Genesis Prize money goes to five groups assisting refugees

(JTA) — Anish Kapoor, the renowned artist and human rights activist who won the Genesis Prize in 2017, and the Genesis Prize Foundation have awarded grants to five organizations that assist refugees globally.

The grants, funded by the $1 million “Jewish Nobel” awarded to Kapoor in 2017, were announced January 17.

The recipients are the International Rescue Committee, the Multifaith Alliance for Syrian Refugees, HIAS (founded as the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society), Help Refugees and Hillel International.

Kapoor, the son of a Baghdadi Jewish mother and Indian father, upon receiving the prize in February said he would use his award to help alleviate the Syrian refugee crisis and try to expand the Jewish community’s engagement in a global effort to support refugees. More than 12.5 million Syrians have been displaced during the current conflict, of which some 2.5 million are children.

The funds will assist refugees in northern Uganda, Myanmar, Italy, Greece and France, and assist Syrian refugees. They will help local leaders in communities across America to advocate in support of immigrants and refugees to the U.S. through HIAS, and bring thousands of Jewish students and young adult volunteers together to assemble aid packages for 5,000 Syrian refugees through Hillel International, in collaboration with the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee.

“Like many Jews, I do not have to go far back in my family history to find people who were refugees,” Kapoor said in a statement. “Directing Genesis Prize funds to this cause is a way of helping people who, like my forebears not too long before them, are fleeing persecution.”

The foundation canceled last year’s award ceremony in Israel at Kapoor’s request, after he said he thought it inappropriate to hold a celebration in light of the worsening refugee crisis “on Israel’s doorstep” in Syria.

The Genesis Prize recognizes individuals who have attained excellence and international renown in their fields, and whose actions and achievements express a commitment to Jewish values, the Jewish community and the State of Israel. It is awarded by the Genesis Prize Foundation in partnership with the Office of the Prime Minister of the State of Israel and the Jewish Agency for Israel.

stories of Palestinians asking to cross into Israel for reasons ranging from the tragic to bizarre; a father marked as a security threat desperate to join his sick child alone in the hospital, a woman begging not to miss her cat's labor on the other side, a husband who just needs a few hours to “exchange oil” with his Israeli wife.

I had both remarkable power and none at all. A permit in the wrong hands could lead to a loss of the very lives I swore to protect. Yet as I delved deeper into a system, I got the sense that our policies were less about security needs but something else far more complex. My relationship with the Palestinians was bipolar at best. I oscillated between giving out my personal phone number to every Palestinian that smiled at me to then wringing my hands in paranoia for hours at the chance that I made a detrimental mistake.

A year into the army, depressed and underwhelmed on a base near Bethlehem, I started to re-read Herzl, John Rawls, Fromkin's "A Peace to End All Peace," James Baldwin on his minority identity, and Barack Obama on inspiring hope. I hoped to piece together an explanation, a formula within Zionism, within history, for awakening a country whose struggle with the outside is nothing compared to the struggle it must fully take on within itself.

My love for Israel is unconditional and only grows deeper with experience. I believe that there is no people, no cause, more worthy of fighting for than the Jewish people and the State of Israel. I had both deeply disturbing and wildly moving experiences in the army. Both represent Israel.

Starting with a foundation of love for this country, we as individuals and a community are tasked with matching our ideology with a rational acknowledgment for an actual Israel, not only the Birthright version our children learn about, to create a space for this conversation.

I live among dreamers -- individuals who are unafraid to actualize their beliefs by participating in the Jewish project. What lies ahead of us, I believe, will be more challenging than the founding of the Jewish state or any of our past military victories. Now that my literal service is over, the real one can start.

Bat Mitzvah: Samantha Elise Fogel

Samantha “Sam” Elise Fogel will be called to the Torah as a Bat Mitzvah on March 10 at Congregation Agudas Achim. Sam is the daughter of Barri and Kirby Fogel, sister to Ben and Max, and granddaughter of Buddy and Doris Kalmans of Houston, Melanie Fogel of Dallas, and Richard and Naomi Fogel of Dallas.

Sam is a 7th grader at Eisenhower Middle School. She says she enjoys acting, dancing, reading, creating art and hanging out with her friends. For her mitzvah project, Sam volunteers at Parents’ Night Out for parents of children with special needs. She has chosen to donate money to Mothers of Children with Autism (MoCAA), a group dedicated to the support of women whose children have special needs.

Rabbi Abraham named one of SABJ’s 40 Under 40

Rabbi Jeffrey Abraham of Congregation Agudas Achim has been named one of the San Antonio Business Journal’s 40 under 40 for 2018.

The award is presented each year to 40 young professionals under the age of 40 who have demonstrated excellence in business, leadership and community involvement.

Abraham is the first member of the clergy to be on the 40 Under 40 List from the San Antonio Business Journal.

“I am incredibly honored to be listed as one of the 40 Under 40,” Abraham said. “We have done so many amazing things at Agudas Achim over the last 3.5 years, and this is only the beginning. I really believe this award is a testament to our entire growing community here, and I am lucky to have amazing staff and lay leadership around me to help us create the community we want to.”

Abraham, nominated by congregant Vicki Adelstein, was one of 250 nominations for the 2018 class of 40 Under 40. This year’s recipients will be recognized at a dinner event on February 22.

family. It too was not found to be “an extreme injustice,” even though the family by 1957 received less than half of the land’s value, according to the panel. Templ’s research suggests they only got 10 percent of the property’s real value.

“I expect that now that I’ve been jailed, my criticism of Austria will be seen as a vendetta,” Templ said. “And I guess I have an agenda — but the numbers and the facts do not, and they tell a story that is much bigger and more important than my own.”

Queried by JTA on these cases, Josef Aicher, chairman of the Arbitration Panel for In Rem Restitution, stood by his organization’s findings.

“To assess ‘extreme injustice’ the Arbitration Panel has developed a complex case law,” he wrote, based on “restrictions on freedom of contract and discrepancy in value: The more the two criteria are pronounced, the more likely it is that an extreme injustice exists.”

He added that the Arbitration Panel has so far issued 138 recommendations for restitution with an estimated total value of $59 million. According to Templ, all these recommendations pertain to only seven assets. Citing independent appraisals, Aicher said that “virtually all real estate that had been confiscated by the state was restituted in its entirety after the war” as well as 60 percent of the properties sold under duress.
