Federation raises more than $156,000 at Super Sunday Campaign event

TODA RABA! Thank you to the 100-plus community volunteers who collectively raised a record breaking $156,695 at Super Sunday on October 11, representing a 32% increase over last year’s achievement. Super Sunday was truly a day of “Community,” where volunteers from all parts of the community came together to reach out to their fellow community members – to fulfill the mitzvah of Tikkun Olam (repairing the world).

Super Sunday co-chairs, Greg Davis and Liz Rockstroh, and Aaron and Danielle Sarfati, welcomed volunteers and motivated callers throughout the day with words of encouragement, updates and fun raffles.

JCC Main Event set for Saturday, Nov. 21

The JCC’s annual fall fundraiser, The Main Event, will take place Saturday, Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. at the JCC. This year, the JCC honors Karen and David Palans, and Courtney and Steve Silver. These Fantastic Four honorees have been indispensable to the JCC’s success for nearly 2 decades. They have played lead roles in major initiatives and events including the JCC Maccabi Games®, the “Fore the Kids” Golf tournament, The Main Event, strategic planning and many more. As couples and individually, they’ve volunteered their time and expertise to both Jewish and wider San Antonio organizations including the Jewish Federation, Golden Manor, Jewish Family Service, Temple Beth El, the Campus, PTA’s, CTRC, SAMMinistries, and many other worthwhile endeavors.

“Our primary goal for the Main Event each year is “fun,” said JCC CEO Saul Levenshus. The JCC Board of Directors, under

Fostering connections, building community

Last month we celebrated Simchat Torah, and with it concluded the High Holy Day season. A few days later, we began the annual cycle of Torah readings with Bereishit… “In the beginning…”

We read the same words each year, but understand them in new ways because we change with every new year, and our world changes with us.

We study the Torah with different perspectives at various points in our lives. We also find ourselves looking for alternative lessons depending on our life circumstances. For instance, my son always asks the same questions about stories and movies, “Is there a bad guy in it?” As children, we tend to view stories with such contrast – there is a good guy and a bad guy. As we mature, we understand that stories are more complex and nuanced. There is not always a clear “bad guy” or a “good guy.” Most of the world is more nuanced than fiction allows.

The work of the Jewish Federation is similarly complex, although some would prefer simply to label us as the “good guy” or the “bad guy.” The Jewish Federation’s role is to embrace and strengthen the entire Jewish community. We do not represent specific Jewish interests; we represent what is best for the entire Jewish community, and on that there is not always unanimity of opinion. Our Federation asks a lot from us, and we from it. Sometimes the answers are disappointing, sometimes the labor is discouraging, but it is always worthwhile. It’s challenging and complicated and, like the Torah, eternally being re-examined.

“In the beginning.”

Those first lines of Torah remind us that as old as the story is, it is new every year. We read the Torah over and over again, the words never change, but we hear it differently each time. Our ancient texts and traditions are studied and observed, pored over and dissected, and interpreted in countless ways within our community. No matter how or why you struggle or connect (or both) with the words and commentaries, your Federation is here to foster those connections and help us all continue the sacred work of Creation.

The Tribe rings in the New Year

The Jewish Federation of San Antonio and its auxiliary organization for young adults, the Tribe, held their 5th annual Jewish New Year “Appletini” party on September 26.

The Tribe, our Jewish community’s social organization for 20s and 30s held this year’s event at the home of Elisa and Lance Reinsmith. Sixty young adults dined on vegetarian and fish delicacies created by James Beard nominee Chef Dave Gilbert. The event included a signature apple alcoholic beverage and a presentation of Israeli appetizers such as hummus with feta and dolmas, making for a unique and special gathering for the Jewish New Year of 5776.

The event was topped off by three signature homemade Jewish ice cream flavors: Manischewitz wine, coconut macaroon, and horseradish.

Tribe Chair, Nicole Porterfield and Young Adult Coordinator, Kelly Klein both addressed the crowd, told the history of the Tribe, the importance of our Jewish Federation’s work, and let the community know of the plans to incorporate all of the Young Adult programming into a Young Adult Division.

This event clearly brought our community together and kicked off the Jewish New Year in a sweet way.

For more details about upcoming Tribe events and to learn more about the Jewish Federation’s programming for 20s and 30s, go to The Tribe on Facebook, or contact Young Adult Division Director Samantha Mazuz at mezuzass@jfsatx.org.

Should we as a Jewish people be prioritizing unity or pluralism? That was the question put forth by Dov Waxman at the opening of the JCPA (Jewish Council for Public Affairs) annual conference in Washington D.C. last month. Waxman is a Political Science, International Affairs and Israel Studies professor at Northeastern University.

He stated that individual perspectives on the question of unity versus pluralism would depend on the respondent’s perception of the current safety of the Jewish community.

If the Jewish community is threatened, then unity of the current safety of the Jewish community would depend on the respondent’s perception of the current safety of the Jewish community.

The Jewish Council for Public Affairs by its nature has long cherished and encouraged unity. The JCPA is composed of representatives of community relations councils and national Jewish organizations from around the United States. With such a variety of representation, embracing pluralism becomes a necessity. To embrace pluralism means to recognize our differences.

JCPA has pioneered the ability to move forward with pluralism by creating the Civility Institute, led by Rabbi Melissa Weintraub. The JCPA Civility Institute has set the pace with workshops to teach the skills of listening, exchanging ideas, and learning to understand other views. The purpose of the program is not to stifle the free expression of ideas, but to protect it. The goal is to allow exchange of ideas by recognizing the dignity in others.

A new book, Islam and the Future of Tolerance, illustrates how two people can speak together though they approach from very different angles. The book is a dialogue between Sam Harris, an atheist and former radical who co-founded Quilliam, a think tank on religious freedom, extremism and citizenship. Steven Pinker, a Harvard professor who authored the Better Angel of our Natures has described their dialogue as “honest and intellectual.”

Engaging in respectful dialogue is a vehicle to appreciate our differences. It is a way to “hold to the center” as expressed by Rabbi Doug Kahn, long-time Community Relations Director in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Respectful dialogue can prevent extremism from pulling our community apart.

Working to the same end is another way to learn to embrace pluralism. At this year’s JCPA conference, Dr. David Luchins, a professor at Touro College, a national vice President of the Orthodox Union, and a national officer of JCPA, was honored for his personal commitment to Tikkun Olam. In his eloquent acceptance speech he noted that social justice is an area in which Jews can come together with the same goals. Pluralism can be achieved with a shared vision.
Shower Our Community with LOVE Event

Federation’s Women’s Philanthropy will host an evening of tzedakah, collaboration and inspiration as we ‘shower’ those who need our help here in San Antonio and in Israel on Thursday, December 3 at 7pm at the Campus in the Holzman Auditorium.

This intergenerational evening is open to all women—daughters, grandmothers, moms and friends. Women are encouraged to visit jfsatx.org/Shower to choose an item from the Target registry to bring to the event. These items are from the wish lists of the adopted yet anonymous local families who are experiencing hardship and could greatly benefit from our support.

In addition to organizing the baskets for these needy families at the event, there will be a hands-on art project designed by local artists, Aliza Cantu and Wendy Bolerjack.

Proceeds from the art project will benefit the Women’s Empowerment Program in Israel, which provides job and skill training for women living in poverty.

“it’s the season for giving,” says Leslie Tramer, one of the co-chairs for the event. “Hannukah begins just a few days after the event.”

The hope is that women of all ages will be inspired to come together as a community to do some good here at home and abroad. Which is exactly the mission of Federation.

CRC Israel Task Force meets with local Presbyterian officials

Federation’s Community Relations Council Executive Director Judy Lackritz, Dr. Mike Stern and Rabbi Samuel Stahl, representing the CRC Israel Task Force, met with more than 20 local Presbyterian ministers and Rev. Mike Cole on September 17.

They discussed current Presbyterian-Jewish relations and expressed grave concern over the 2014 vote by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church-USA, to divest from three American companies that do business in the West Bank.

Speaker Event at Holocaust Memorial Museum of San Antonio – Nov. 10

Margaret Paxson, Senior Associate at the Kennan Institute of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, and Visiting Scholar at the Institute for European, Russian, and Eurasian Studies at George Washington University will be a guest speaker at the Holocaust Memorial Museum of San Antonio, located on the Jewish Campus on November 10 at 6 p.m. Paxson will be speaking about the effect of the rescue effort of Le Chambon-sur-Lignon on subsequent generations.

To RVSP, please contact Juana Rubalcava at education@hmmsa.org or (210) 302-6812.

Paxson received a Ph.D. and an M.Sc. in Anthropology from the University of Montreal and a B.A. in Anthropology at McGill University. For her Research Fellowship of the Miles Lerman Center for the Study of Jewish Resistance, Dr. Paxson is conducting research for her project, Remembering the Good: Legacies of Rescue and Resistance in Le Chambon-sur-Lignon.

During her tenure at the Center, Dr. Paxson is researching the rescue and resistance efforts in the small village of Le Chambon-sur-Lignon, France. Ruled by the Vichy government at the time, the villagers managed to rescue thousands of Jews, particularly children, over the course of four years.

Dr. Paxson is assessing the social repercussions of active resistance and how these events are memorialized by the participants and the community.

The event is co-sponsored by the Holocaust Memorial Museum of San Antonio and UTSA Honor’s College and History Department in memory of Kristallnacht (night of Broken Glass) during Nazi era Germany.

This program is made possible by the Campus Outreach Lecture Program of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum’s Jack Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies, supported by the Leonard and Sophie Davis Fund.

PJ Library celebrates Sukkot and Super Sunday

Chabad Center for Life and Learning and PJ Library teamed up to get ready for Sukkot with lots of creativity! With the theme of “building,” the children spent time building with blocks and legos, and building their own edible Sukkot out of graham crackers and real fruit, and finally using small green strawberry baskets to build their own Sukkot to take home. Morah Rivkie Block and Chaya Block Weingarten shared two PJ Library books with our children, including It’s Sukkah Time and Bubbie Isabella’s Sukkah Cake. Morah Chaya Weingarten engaged the children in songs and got them on their feet, dancing around enthusiastically with scarves and musical instruments.

Morah Chaya Weingarten relayed, “It was such a pleasure to sing with this great group of children from all over our community! They were all so excited for the holiday of Sukkot and I loved watching them get up on their dancing feet with so much ruach (spirit). Sukkot is the holiday of joy, and I could certainly see it on their faces!”

The Jewish Federation of San Antonio and PJ Library also hosted “Be A Super Hero” on Super Sunday. With a special visit from the Superman and Wonder Woman of the San Antonio Justice League, the PJ Library children were able to learn more about the idea of being a “hero” and helping the world. Wonder Woman read the children the PJ Library book entitled Tikkun Olam Ted which told about a young boy’s every day actions that help the world (including recycling and helping feed his animals). The Justice League heros discussed ideas about how we can each be heros in our own homes. This followed with Super Man, himself, reading the book “Sammy Spider’s First Mitzvah” and it taught us about Bikkur Holim, helping the sick as he read about a boy named Moti who brought chicken soup to his neighbor in the story. This day proved to be a SUPER Success, as the PJ Library children decorated their own capes that were cut out of real t-shirts, so they can continue to be a Super Hero in their own daily lives. PJ Library Committee member, Micah Davies reflected on the day, “It was so wonderful to see the kids so excited to meet and talk to the real Superman! Their eyes got so big. They learned so many values and I hope they will remember all of the important lessons that he and Wonder Woman had to say.”
Spotlight on: Jonas Berkowitch

Jonas Berkowitch is a busy senior at Churchill High School. In his spare time he plays basketball, is a scorekeeper at the JCC, and works at Bigz Burger Joint. He is involved in B’nai B’rith Youth Organization as the beau of Sababa BBG (girls chapter) and as the past President and Vice President of Erich Weiss AZA (boys chapter). Jonas has been accepted to the University of Houston as a hospitality management major, and he is looking forward to beginning college next year, but before that he has stopped to tell us more about himself as this month’s Spotlight.

1. What brought you to San Antonio?
   I was born in upstate NY, and I moved to SA when I was six. We moved for my dad to take a job here, and my memories of growing up are all from San Antonio.

2. What is your strongest Jewish memory?
   Three years ago at a BBYO retreat called Brotherhood weekend at Leaky, Texas, all of the boys came together and did the prayers on Friday night and we were all together all weekend long. It was cool being with only the guys in BBYO. We were able to connect with Judaism and have a good time doing it.

3. What volunteer activities do you find the most rewarding and why?
   I really enjoy working at Food Kitchens and Food Banks... I have experienced and witnessed the poverty in certain areas. I am directly impacting the people that are on the streets and are really hungry. It’s a rewarding feeling. When I am helping in one of those pantries I realize my work could be the difference in someone eating and not eating. That’s a big deal. In my future career plans I would like to be involved in the hospitality industry and in helping people. The volunteering has helped me get a glimpse of the industry.

4. Please share your favorite Jewish holiday. Why?
   My favorite holiday is Yom Kippur because I get a lot out of the fasting and I can think and reflect on See SPOTLIGHT, page 11

Federation welcomes new Young Leadership Director

Samantha Mazuz has joined the Jewish Federation of San Antonio as the new Young Leadership Director and Marketing Manager. Mazuz moved to San Antonio from New Jersey with her husband, Idan, a year and a half ago. Mazuz most recently served as Hillel Director and as a member of the camp administrative team for the Barshop Jewish Community Center. During that time, Mazuz attended the Hillel International Conference in Orlando and was chosen to travel to Israel on a first ever Hillel International Directors trip with 30 other Hillel Directors from around the world.

Mazuz’s relationship with Israel started more than 5 years ago when she was finishing up her final semester in the fall at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey. She was graduating early and planning to move on into the working world, however this plan changed when she received a phone call from Birthright Israel to go on a trip that January. She decided to put her career plans on hold and quickly packed her bags for a life changing experience, to a place that shortly after became her home.

After living in Israel for two years, participating on a Masa Internship program, followed by an NYU Masters program in Israel, and getting married there, too, she returned to the United States with her husband, to make a difference in her Jewish Community and pass on her love for her homeland. Mazuz taught Hebrew school and Sunday Judaica class to 5th graders, 9th grade Hebrew High School, worked as an adjunct professor at the Richard Stockton College of New Jersey in the Jewish Studies Department, and was involved in Young Leadership throughout the Jewish Federation of San Antonio as the new Young Leadership Director.

Mazuz has also led and organized many Birthright Israel trips and has spoken at the annual Birthright Gala in New York City in the spring of 2013, before moving to Texas. Mazuz and her husband are the proud new parents of Eitan.

“We look forward to her enthusiasm as she shares her experiences and love for Judaism, Israel, and our people with our community through planning events and programs for young adults,” said Susan Kariv, Chief Development Officer.

An Unknown Country: The Jewish Exiles of Ecuador

The Holocaust Memorial Museum of San Antonio hosted a showing of An Unknown Country on September 17 at the Jewish Campus. The film is the story of European Jews who fled the Nazi terror during WWII and found refuge in a land very new for them.

The past year, I think about what I have done that I have liked and just the opposite. It’s a nice time to take to myself and to really relax. It seems like without the food and with the quiet and with the dark mood, it has helped me find my Jewish identity.

Yom Kippur is really the only time I get to personally reflect on my actions and to thank God for the actions I have done that are good and for the ones that I could improve.

It’s an important holiday and one that is meaningful.

5. Name a hope or aspiration you have for the San Antonio Jewish community?

Over the past 13 or 14 years we have really grown. I hope this continues. I have seen San Antonio change for the better and I want it to keep happening.

I want us to combat the anti-Semitism that is in the area. In my life I have never seen anything like what happened to the synagogues and I hope we can grown and be stronger and stop that in the future.

When I was applying to colleges, I wrote about these incidents that happened in the synagogues, as they meant a lot to me.

My last hope is for the youth programs to keep going and improving. BBYO has been so important in my life, and the more Jewish teens can be involved through youth groups, the more it will help them. It has really helped me a lot.

Hanukkah 2015 begins in the evening of Sunday, December 6 and ends in the evening of Monday, December 14

Leading Jewish spokesperson at the Vatican to speak at Hanukkah celebration

On Thursday, Dec. 10, at 11:30 a.m., members of the San Antonio-area Roman Catholic and Jewish communities will gather for an interfaith Hanukkah celebration. The event will be held at San Fernando Cathedral Hall, 231 West Commerce.

This marks the 14th year that San Antonio-area Catholics and Jews have jointly celebrated Hanukkah. The Jewish Federation of San Antonio and San Fernando Cathedral are the co-sponsors.

This year the group will highlight the 50th anniversary of Nostra Aetate, the Vatican II document, which revolutionized Catholic-Jewish relations. Presenter will be Rabbi Jack Bemporad, the founder and director of the non-profit Center for Interreligious Understanding. He is widely acknowledged as the leading Jewish spokesperson at the Vatican.

The Most Rev. Gustavo Garcia-Siller, M.Sp.S, Archbishop of San Antonio, will be the presiding host for this unique interfaith observance this year. The Very Rev. Tony Vilano, JCL, Rector of San Fernando Cathedral, and Rabbi Samuel M. Stahl, Rabbi Emeritus of Temple Beth-El, will lead the proceedings.

Included in the program will be a presentation by the choir of Providence High School and the kindling of Hanukkah lights by clergy and lay leaders of the Jewish and Catholic communities.

Reservations are required by December 4 to attend this program, which includes a catered lunch, at $30.00 per person. Table sponsorships are also available for $350. For further information, call San Fernando Cathedral, (210) 227-1297.

Temple Chai launches 10,000 hours of service

Temple Chai, a welcoming, progressive congregation in Northwest San Antonio launched a year-long social action initiative over the High Holy Days. With a goal of 10,000 hours of community service for the year, Rabbi David Komerofsky encouraged the membership “to ensure that our congregation does not just stand on its corner in a new home, but stands for something in the wider community.” Deb Field, a member of the Temple Chai board, is working with a group of volunteers to engage the congregation in service opportunities around the city. The first and ongoing project is with the San Antonio Food Bank, and new projects will begin each month.

“Judaism’s prophetic mission is central to our congregation’s progressive values,” said Rabbi Komerofsky. “We believe that our service must be more than words and music.”

Temple Chai’s inaugural adult b’nai mitzvah class will also adopt its own community service mitzvah project. For more information, visit www.templechaisa.org/socialaction.

“We enjoyed seeing such a diverse group of Jews come together for one cause – supporting other Jews,” said the Sarfatis. “We are grateful to both those who made the calls and those who answered.”

“Super Sunday is the perfect example of the greater San Antonio community coming together,” said Davis and Rockstroh. “This year over 100 volunteers, along with the amazing Federation staff, contributed their time and energy in making the day successful.

“This participation, and our community’s willingness to answer the call and give, helped raise over $156K, dollars that will go to assist so many! What a fantastic illustration of a community working to be Stronger Together–we thank all who gave their time and generous gifts.”

The Holzman Auditorium was filled with lots of positive energy, children making Thank You calls, while the teens and adults were making solicitation calls. Synagogues and Agencies were represented, and medical professionals came out and worked as a team. Super Heroes Superman and Wonder Woman came out to motivate callers as well as read stories to our youngest community members at a special PJ Library Super Hero event.

Susan Kariv, Chief Development Officer said, “It was incredibly heart-warming to see so many working together to help our fellow Jews. Callers included veteran community members as well as individuals who moved to San Antonio as recently as one week ago. Community members schmoozing AND working, making new friends while making a difference -- what could be better! The Jewish Neshama (soul) is a special thing!”

If you missed the chance to donate at Super Sunday, it is not too late. Make a gift that makes a difference by donating online at www.jfsatx.org, or call the Jewish Federation of San Antonio at (210) 302-6960.

Frame every image with care.

The images you keep of people you love – in photos, in your mind, in your heart – deserve to be framed in a proper way. One that honors your family’s faith, culture and tradition. We understand. After all, creating exactly the right way for you to say farewell is something the Porter Loring family has done for four generations.

Rodfei to giveback on Thanksgiving Day

On Thanksgiving, Rodfei Sholom will be preparing and serving meals to San Antonio’s first responders. “These people give and sacrifice so much for the greater community every day all year,” said Rabbi Avraham Scheinberg. “For them to be working and away from their families on Thanksgiving makes it that much harder for them. We want them to know that we are thinking of them and we are thankful for them.

“Over the years we have had an amazing relationship with the local police and fire departments and because of some recent unfortunate incidents, that relationship has become much stronger. It is time for us to be able to give back.”

Anyone interested in helping prepare and serve the meals should contact the synagogue office at (210) 493-3557 or by e-mail to rodfeisa@gmail.com.

JCC seniors create art celebrating Sukkot

JCC seniors celebrate high holidays as artists and chefs

Members of the Barshop JCC’s senior adult program are always ready to celebrate Jewish holidays in new and interactive ways. Crafting Culture and Senior Chefs are two classes at the JCC that feature seasonal opportunities for senior adults to connect with Jewish life.

At the most recent Crafting Culture, seniors created paintings using water colors and kosher salt that featured seasonal holiday foods such as apples and pomegranates. Two days later, seniors made the transition from painting to tasting during Senior Chefs.

While reminiscing about each person’s favorite holiday foods, participants followed a recipe to make dates stuffed with honey, goat cheese, and pomegranates. Both of these classes allowed both Jewish and non-Jewish seniors to actively participate in celebrating this special time of year.

Hanukah provides another chance to celebrate with the return of Senior Chefs on Dec. 3 and Crafting Culture on Dec. 8, both from 10-11 a.m. in the JCC Senior Center. Classes are $5, JCC members are free. To enroll or for more information, contact the Senior Center at (210) 302-6860.

Chabad Hebrew School incorporates new GROW curriculum

CKids’ new GROW project, launched this fall at Chabad Hebrew School, is designed to meet the needs of today’s children. GROW gives them a safe place to practice foundational skills such as interpersonal awareness, self-care, and character development, in a wholesome group environment.

Dr. Michael Ben-Avie, PhD, a professor at the Yale Child Research Center, is part of the GROW research team. “What GROW gives young children,” he said, “is a sense of competence in addressing trying situations, and strategies for problem-solving. It promotes their resilience and teaches them how to be contributing, productive members of a group.”

GROW classrooms are student-led learning communities supported by specially trained staff. Instructors help children develop emotional intelligence through a series of lessons that draw on the latest child-development research fused with the timeless wisdom of the Torah. Kids learn to appreciate the differing perspectives of others, to respond empathetically to challenges and conflict, and to look for peaceful, win-win solutions.

Parents want their children to have a positive Jewish learning experience, but they also want them to look forward to something fun and engaging. GROW meets these needs by teaching solid Jewish values through creative, hands-on activities such as baking, drama, art, engineering, social action mitzvah projects and team-building challenges.

For more information call Rochel Teldon at (210) 764-0300, email rochel@chabadsa.com, or visit www.ChabadSA.com/HebrewSchool.
Rodfei Sholom Book Club to discuss Honeydew

Rodfei Sholom’s book club will meet on Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 7:30 p.m., in the conference room at the synagogue to discuss Honeydew, a new collection of short fiction by prize-winning writer Edith Pearlman.

“When I was young,” said the 75-year-old author, “I wanted to publish a book simply to be buried with it, that’s all I wanted. I had no ambition beyond that.” Many of Pearlman’s stories brim with Jewish characters. Other stories capture the tensions within Israeli society.

Pearlman sets her stories in far-flung places, from Latin America to Israel, and a central theme is often dislocation. You might think the writer lived a nomadic existence herself, but she hasn’t. She has lived in Brookline for much of her adult life, with the exception of a year spent living in Israel in the mid-1990s where she got the idea for “Allog.”

“All the stories I write come from someone I’ve met, or some anecdote I’ve heard,” Pearlman said, noting that few of her stories are autobiographical. Yet she does acknowledge that many of the stories hit close to home. Her father immigrated to the States from a small Jewish town outside of Kiev, when he was just a boy, at the turn of the 20th century. Her maternal grandparents were also Jewish immigrants from Eastern Europe. Her mother was born in Providence, R.I. and the author was also born in Providence, in 1936.

Many of Pearlman’s stories deal with Jewish characters or Jewish subjects, but the themes are universal. Her Jewish characters, she says, “come naturally. I don’t consciously write about them, they just come out of me.”

STARZ and NOVA fall 2015 productions

The Barshop Jewish Community Center Youth performance troupes present two family-friendly shows in December.

The STARZ Youth Performance Troupe, composed of students aged fifth to twelfth grade, presents Thoroughly Modern Millie, Jr. NOVA, which is composed of students in second through fourth grade, will be presenting Cinderella, Jr.

Performances of Thoroughly Modern Millie are on Saturday, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m., and Sunday, Dec. 6 at 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m., in the Sheldon Vexler Theatre. Tickets are $7; advanced purchase is highly recommended.

The show tells the story of Millie, a small town girl who searches for a new life in 1920s New York City. Based on the classic tale of Cinderella, the musical is full of jazz-inspired song and dance.

The classic tale of Cinderella tells the story of poor Cinderella, who is mistreated by her wicked stepmother and stepisters. With help from her mice friends and her Fairy Godmother, she gets a chance to go to the ball and see if her dreams will come true. Cinderella will be performed Saturday, Dec. 12 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 13 at 2 p.m. in the Holzman Auditorium. Tickets are $5.

Tickets for both shows may be purchased in advance by contacting Lauri Batey at (210) 302-6859. For more information about joining the STARZ or NOVA theatre groups, contact Rachel Rustin at (210) 302-6969 or rustinr@jcc-sa.org.

Dueling Loyalties

In the World to Come, borders, visas, and missiles will all disappear. However, in the world that we inhabit, nationality defines and divides us. The 193 flags flying outside United Nations headquarters in New York demonstrate that the nations are not entirely united, that even tiny Monaco (pop. 36,000 in less than one square mile) insists on its sovereign uniqueness. “Nationalism is an infantile disease,” insisted Albert Einstein. “It is the measles of mankind.”

Cosmopolitanism is, then, the condition of a species that has outgrown childhood maladies. But the accusation that Jews are cosmopolitans, that they have no loyalty to any nation they inhabit, is also a favorite refrain of anti-Semites, dating at least as far back as 1st-century Rome. The espionage conviction of Captain Alfred Dreyfus found popular support of Captain Alfred Dreyfus because of the widely held belief that a Jew could not because of the widely held belief that a Jew could not because of the widely held belief that a Jew could not because of the widely held belief that a Jew could not.

When asked where he came from, Socrates replied: “I am not an Athenian or a Greek, but a citizen of the world.” Though citizens of the world presumably enjoy travel, the world does not issue passports. Customs officials demand documentation from cosmopolitanism” was the phrase employed by Stalinists in the late 1940s to impugn the patriotism of Jews and purge them from responsible positions in Soviet society.

When asked where he came from, Socrates replied: “I am not an Athenian or a Greek, but a citizen of the world.” Though citizens of the world presumably enjoy travel, the world does not issue passports. Customs officials demand documentation from cosmopolitanism” was the phrase employed by Stalinists in the late 1940s to impugn the patriotism of Jews and purge them from responsible positions in Soviet society.

Though citizens of the world presumably enjoy travel, the world does not issue passports. Customs officials demand documentation from specific nations. So it is necessary to be a citizen in one part of the world in order to visit other parts. A true citizen of the world would hold 193 passports, though that is neither practical nor legal. However, some nations – including the United States and Israel - allow their citizens to be citizens of other nations. Under the Law of Return, an American Jew settling in Israel who requests Israeli citizenship is ordinarily granted it. Of the 100,000 Americans living in Israel (60,000 of them on the West Bank, constituting 15 percent of its settlers), it is not known precisely how many are dual citizens, but the number must be substantial. There are an estimated 150,000 Israeli yordim living in the United States, but if they became American citizens, naturalization procedures would have required them to declare under oath that: “I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, of whom or which I have heretofore been a subject or citizen.”

Dual citizenship in Israel and the United States is not unnatural, since both nations share a commitment, however imperfect, to the values of democracy, justice, pluralism, and human rights. The United States and Israel have been closely aligned since the founding of the Jewish state in 1948. Nevertheless, a Yiddish proverb reminds us that: “Mit yvn tokhes ken men nit tantsn af tsvey khasenes” – You can’t dance at two weddings with one behind. It turns out that Dreyfus’s Jewishness was compatible with loyalty to France; after release from Devil’s Island and complete exonerated, he reenlisted in the artillery, retiring as a lieutenant colonel. But Jonathan Pollard, an employee of the Naval Intelligence Command in Washington who was sentenced to life in prison (later reduced to 30 years) for passing top-secret information to an Israeli handler, betrayed the country of his birth (in Galveston). To some, he confirmed the anti-Semitic contention that Jews are perfidious, a fifth column that places the interests of Israel above those of the country they live in.

During an interview on her June 10 public radio program, Diane Rehm told Bernie Sanders: “Senator, you have dual citizenship of Israel.” However, though Sanders spent time on a kibbutz in 1963, he has never been a citizen of Israel, and Rehm later issued a public apology for having unwittingly repeated a falsehood circulated on the internet. Several sites make the bogus claim that every Jewish Senator holds dual citizenship, when in fact none does. The effect of these misrepresentations was to raise questions again about the loyalty of American Jews. Just as opponents of John F. Kennedy insinuated that he, a Catholic, would allow the Vatican to dictate U.S. policy, American Jewish politicians were said to be taking their orders from Benjamin Netanyahu. The Israeli prime minister did make strenuous efforts to persuade the U.S. Congress to oppose the nuclear agreement with Iran. When Senator Chuck Schumer, a Jew, did, he was vilified as an agent of Israel. When a majority of Jewish members of Congress, including Sanders, supported the agreement, they were vilified as enemies of Israel and self-hating Jews.

In Europe, the question of dual loyalties became even more acute when Netanyahu appointed Fiamma Nirenstein as Israel’s ambassador to Italy. Nirenstein knows Italy well, since, born in Florence, she was a citizen of Italy at the time of the appointment. A prominent journalist, she served in the Italian Parliament as a member of Silvio Belusconi’s right-wing People of Freedom Party.

Not all of Italy’s 30,000 Jews were enthusiastic about her selection. Yedioth Ahronoth quoted an unnamed figure in the Jewish community as noting that: “If a former Italian parliament member, a Jew, becomes Israel’s ambassador, it basically means that we recognize the fact that each of us, and every store we own, is in fact Israeli. People will think we have dual loyalty, and this holds disastrous consequences.”

Nirenstein’s ambassadorship leaves any Jewish politician in Italy vulnerable to the charge of serving Israel’s interests more than Italy’s. Her own cousin is running for mayor of Milan, and the suspicion that he, too, works for Israel could not be helpful to his campaign. The fact that Nirenstein’s son works for the Italian intelligence service, which no doubt keeps an eye on foreign diplomats, could evoke unfortunate comparisons with Jonathan Pollard. A Jew torn between Rome and Jerusalem suffers a peculiar bipolar disorder. A Diaspora Zionist is enriched by dual loyalties, except when they duel.

Steven G. Kellman is a professor of comparative literature at UTSA.
Modim - A daily reflection

During the High Holy Days and the joyous Festivals celebrated recently, some of us spent more time in prayer and reflection, soul-searching than during the year. However, which was the most significant of these canonized prayers for us?

Our sages provide us with a curious answer. It is not the Kol Nidre, the Un'taneh Tokef, nor the Al Chet or Ashamnu, nor the grandeur of the Malchuyot. Rather it is a paragraph of gratitude within the Amidah recited daily. The Talmud records that “at the end of time all prayers will be expendable, but the prayer of Gratitude will not be eliminated.”

Modim anachnu lach, We thank you (f.) Adonai for our lives entrusted to thy care; for miracles, and wonders, kindness, that are with us daily evening, morning and noon.

A sense of gratitude in our everyday lives encourages us to cope with anxieties, conquer frustrations, and build better communities, and lives. Gratitude is a prerequisite for happiness, stability, self-fulfillment and maturity. It is from the source of life, that the staff of life is made creative, by being of grateful countenance, and working to achieve a goal.

Thackeray wrote, “Life is akin to a mirror; if you frown at it, it returns the frown; if you smile, it returns the greeting.” Psychiatrists frown; if you smile, it returns the frown at it, it returns the frown. Gratitude is akin to a mirror; if you smile, it returns the smile. If you are with friends and family, a word of affection, pride from children, new births and partnerships. A genius of Judaism is discovery of the momentous in the momentary.

Abraham Heschel stated, “What the world needs is not more information, but more appreciation.” With gratitude, we earn affection and loyalty, and humility.

In the final analysis, it is not sufficient to be grateful or offer mere text on command. We are encouraged to acknowledge the Divine spark—the source of those daily gifts. That was the authentic purpose of these past Holy Days, of our new year—the day the pregnancy of eternity beckoned. It is the thread within the holiday of Thanksgiving for which we prepare.

Why not daily reflect Modim, your loving kindnesses never cease; we ever hope in Thee."

Diller Teen Tikkun Olam Awards taking nominations

(JTA) — The Helen Diller Family Foundation announced it is taking nominations for the Diller Teen Tikkun Olam awards for Jewish teenagers.

The awards — a series of up to 15 prizes of $36,000 each — are awarded annually for social justice projects to Jews aged 13 to 19. They are meant to recognize “exceptional leadership and a commitment to creating meaningful change in the world,” the Diller Foundation said in a recent news release.

The deadline for nominations is December 13. The online application can be found at www.dillerteenawards.org.

Past award recipients have tackled issues such as bullying in schools, water shortages in Africa and nutrition problems in low-income communities.

The Helen Diller Family Foundation, which awards grants to museums, universities and other arts and culture institutions, has given more than $2.5 million to the Teen Tikkun Olam Awards since 2007.

Jewish Fraternity issues security alert about rise in anti-Semitic violence on campuses

(Indianapolis, IN) In a message sent to the presidents of its 185 chapters and colonies worldwide, Alpha Epsilon Pi (AEPi) Executive Director Andrew S. Borans has issued a security alert and cautioned members about rising anti-Israel and anti-Semitic activity and violence on college campuses.

In his message, Borans also promised cooperation and assistance to campus security officials to ensure that members of Alpha Epsilon Pi – and all campus Jewish communities – remain safe.

“Unfortunately, we’ve already seen a number of incidences of anti-Israel and anti-Jewish rhetoric and violence on campuses this fall. Our brothers are prominent leaders in their campus Jewish communities and are often among the most active pro-Israel advocates around so we want to do everything possible to ensure their safety,” said Borans.

“With violence against Israel once more on the rise, we are well-aware that such heinous actions often make their ways to our college campuses next. We are also, obviously, very concerned for our brothers in Israel.”

In 2014, AEPi contracted with a global security firm to develop the fraternity’s security program by providing guidance on all security matters, deterring and managing incidents, providing security advice at certain events, and educating undergraduates on specific steps which can be taken to create a safer environment for themselves and their campus Jewish community.

“Our brothers are proud to represent their Jewish heritage on their campuses and passionate about their support for Israel. We can’t ever be afraid of that and, yet, we must also be cautious because we know now that many Jews have become targets on college campuses. AEPi is committed to doing everything possible to protect them,” said Borans.

Operating on a parallel track to the wave of Palestinian terrorist attacks on Israeli civilians and security personnel, a physical and diplomatic war against Jewish holy sites is also underway.

On October 21, a Palestinian resolution was passed by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), by a vote of 26-6 with 25 abstentions, to list two revered Jewish holy sites—the Cave of the Patriarchs in Hebron and the tomb of the matriarch Rachel in Bethlehem—as Muslim holy sites. Jewish holy sites are also under siege physically, including the recent firebombing of Joseph’s Tomb.

“This ongoing assault is the merging of classical terrorism and political warfare,” said Dan Diker, director of the Political Warfare project at the Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs (JCPA) think tank.

The UNESCO bill, which also condemned Israel for archaeological excavations in the Old City of Jerusalem, was a watered-down version of an earlier bill that sought to officially claim that the Western Wall Plaza—the most heavily visited modern-day Jewish prayer

Meet the Islamic Movement, Netanyahu’s newest public enemy

By Ben Sales

TEL AVIV (JTA) – In assigning blame for the recent wave of violence in Israel, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has turned to the usual suspects – Hamas and the Palestinian Authority. But he has also accused a lesser-known group that operates within Israel’s borders: the Islamic Movement, a religious political group and social service organization.

Netanyahu has seized on the inflammatory rhetoric of the movement’s northern branch, which claims the Al-Aqsa mosque in Jerusalem is “in danger” and has funded protest groups that harass Jewish visitors to the site. Netanyahu has blamed the movement’s rhetoric for inciting the attacks and is seeking to formally ban it.

Here’s what the movement does, what it believes about the Temple Mount and why it might be difficult to ban.

What is the Islamic Movement?

The Islamic Movement is a political organization, religious outreach group and social service provider rolled into one. Formed in the 1970s, the movement’s overarching goal is to make Israeli Muslims more religious and owes much of its popularity to providing services often lacking in Israel’s Arab communities. Today the group runs kindergartens, colleges, health clinics, mosques and even a sports league—sometimes under the same roof.

“Their popularity stems from the fact that they had, in every place, changed the face of the local village or town,” said Eli Rekhess, the Crown Chair in Middle East Studies at Northwestern University. “It’s this combination that underlies the Islamic Movement’s formula.”

The movement split two decades ago. One faction, known as the southern branch, began fielding candidates for Israel’s Knesset in 1996 and now is part of the Joint List, an alliance of several Arab-Israeli political parties. Three of the Joint List’s 13 current Knesset members are part of the movement.

The more hardline northern branch rejects any legitimization of Israel’s government and has called on its adherents to boycott elections. The branches now operate essentially as two separate organizations.

The ‘Al-Aqsa is in danger’ conference

The movement’s northern branch is in Netanyahu’s sights now for its aggressive advocacy for Islamic control over the Temple Mount, the Jerusalem shrine known to Muslims as the Noble Sanctuary. The branch’s leader, Raed Salah, has called on his followers to “redeem” the mount, which houses the Al-Aqsa mosque, from purported Israeli aggression.

Every year, Salah hosts a conference titled “Al-Aqsa is in danger,” and has promoted the idea—hotly disputed by Israeli officials—that Israel seeks to change the status quo at the site.

The movement also funds a group called the Mourabitoun, whose protests against Jewish visitors at the Temple Mount have occasionally turned violent. On Sept. 9, Israel banned the group from the mount, sparking the riots that preceded the current wave of attacks. Salah has accused Netanyahu of declaring war on the mosque.

An offshoot of Egypt’s Muslim Brotherhood

Netanyahu also sees the group as something of an Islamist fifth column within Israel. The movement, according to Haifa University’s Nohad Ali, is an ideological offshoot of Egypt’s Muslim Brotherhood, as is Hamas, the militant group that controls Gaza and is considered a terrorist organization by the United States.

Though they all share the same principles and operate similarly — Hamas and the Muslim Brotherhood also operate educational and social service programs in addition to their political activities — the Islamic Movement has no organizational relation to the others. Rekhess says remaining separate gives the movement a niche within Israel. And Ali says keeping its distance from Hamas helps the movement avoid prosecution. Which is why …

There’s not much Netanyahu can do to ban it.

Salah has served prison time for assaulting an Israeli police officer and is appealing a conviction for incitement, but several experts say Netanyahu will be hard-pressed to outlaw the whole group for incitement to violence. Its official pronouncements are too ambiguous to qualify as illegal, they say.

“They don’t call for violence,” Ali said. “They know that use of violence will cause the destruction of the movement. I’m not saying they’re angels or that they oppose violence, [but] they’re using vague concepts.”

Outlawing the group could also spark a broad backlash in Israel’s Arab sector. Knesset member Talab Abu Arar, a member of the movement’s southern branch, said he could view any ban on the group as an attack on Arab-Israelis as a whole.

“The Islamic Movement includes most of the Arab public in Israel,” Abu Arar told JTA. “Outlawing it, you could say, is outlawing the entire public from the land.”

Israeli hummus restaurant gives Jews and Arabs 50% off for eating together

(JTA) — Can a shared love of hummus bring Jews and Arabs together? An Israeli restaurant near the coastal city of Netanya is offering 50 percent discounts on hummus for tables with both Jews and Arabs.

A manager of the Hummus Bar, located in Kfar Vitkin, told the Times of Israel that “several” tables of Jews and Arabs have taken advantage of the offer since it began Oct. 13.

“By us we don’t have Arabs! But we also don’t have Jews . . . By us we’ve got human beings!” the restaurant posted on Facebook. “And real excellent Arab hummus! And great Jewish falafel!”

The move was motivated by the growing unrest across Israel in the aftermath of weeks of attacks by Palestinian extremists on Jewish-Israelis and Palestinian deaths at the hands of Israeli police and soldiers trying to tamp down the violence. The latest attack – a shooting in a Beersheba bus station by a Bedouin-Israeli that left two dead and 10 wounded – came Sunday night.

“If there’s anything that can bring together these people, it’s hummus,” manager Kobi Tzafrir told the Times of Israel.

Holocaust museum opens in Seattle

(JTA) — The Holocaust Center for Humanity, the first museum dedicated in the Pacific Northwest to the Holocaust, opened in Seattle, Washington on October 18.

The $3.4 million museum, which includes artifacts from local Holocaust survivors, includes classrooms and office space that will be open for students and the public. The center is expecting 16,000 visitors in its first year of operation.

The building is dedicated in honor of Henry and Sandra Friedman of Seattle.

site—is an extension of the Al-Aqsa mosque on the Temple Mount compound. That language was roundly rejected by UNESCO and the international community. “[The Palestinians] are trying to demoralize the Israeli public, first by fear of terror, and second by mobilizing the international community against the legitimacy of the Jewish state,” Diker told JNS.org.

For weeks, Palestinian leaders have alleged that the current wave of terror was sparked by Israeli violations of a longstanding and fragile status quo on the Temple Mount, known to Muslims as the Al-Aqsa Compound. The site is recognized by Jews and Muslims alike as the site of First and Second Jewish Temples.

Since the Six-Day War in 1967—in which Israel conquered the Temple Mount, only to return the site days later to a defeated Muslim custodianship—Jews have been permitted under Israeli law to visit Judaism’s holiest site, but are not permitted to pray there. Muslims are allowed to both gather and pray on the site. Palestinians contend that Israel seeks to revoke Muslim rights on the Temple Mount and permit Jews to pray there, with the intention of replacing Al-Aqsa with a third Jewish Temple.

While Israeli leaders, including Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahhu, have continuously denied any change to the regulations and visitation patterns of Jews on the site, Palestinians have used Al-Aqsa as a rally cry to incite Arabs to violence against Israelis.

Before a recent trip to address the U.N. Security Council, Netanyahu stated, “Israel wants peace with the Palestinians, but regrettfully lies continue to be spread about our policy towards the Temple Mount. Israel is maintaining the status quo. It is the Palestinians bringing weapons to the Temple Mount who are harming the site’s sanctity and disturbing the status quo.”

In October, Israeli President Reuven Rivlin stated at a joint press conference with U.N. Secretary-General Ban Kimoon, “The Temple Mount is held captive by people who want to ignite a religious war. Israel won’t let this happen, and won’t change even a single letter of the status quo.”

According to Diker, the narrative that Al-Aqsa is in danger has been used by Muslims as a pretext to incite violence against Jews for nearly a century.

“The ‘Al-Aqsa is in danger’ libel traces back to the Multi of Jerusalem, Haj Amin al-Husseini. This is the same Husseini who conspired with Hitler on the Final Solution,” Diker told JNS.org. “He mobilized thousands of Arabs to the Temple Mount in the 1920s and 30s using the Al-Aqsa Mosque as a staging ground for terror against the Jewish communities of that time.”

More recently, said Diker, “Hamas and the Palestinian Authority have adopted this rhetoric, and have used it regularly. In September 2000, Yasser Arafat rallied terrorists under the false claims that Al-Aqsa was in danger. They named their terror wave the Al-Aqsa Intifada. It’s the same libel!”

Earlier that same year, in July 2000 at the Camp David Summit, Arafat famously denied that any Jewish Temple ever stood at the Jerusalem complex—despite the fact that a guide to the Temple Mount published by the Supreme Muslim Council in 1925 (and again in subsequent years) states explicitly, “Its identity as the site of Solomon’s Temple is beyond dispute.”

“That was Arafat using Al-Aqsa to mobilize Muslims in Israel and throughout the Muslim world. And today we are seeing the exact same thing,” Diker said. “Instead of condemning the Palestinian Authority for incitement to murder, the international community buys the current Islamic narrative…For decades, Arabs have used the Al-Aqsa mosque compound as a sanctuary for terror.”

While the Temple Mount has been at the epicenter of Arab terror and narrative warfare, other significant Jewish holy sites have been dragged into the militant and diplomatic assault. Over the past two years, nearly a dozen separate incidents have been recorded near the Cave of the Patriarchs in Hebron (the burial site of Jewish forefathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob); the tomb of the Jewish matriarch Rachel in Bethlehem; and the tomb of Joseph in Shechem. Attacks have included stabbings, firebombings, pipe-bombings, and an attempted lynching.

On a tour of Joseph’s Tomb following the recent firebombing attack there, Sephardic Chief Rabbi of Israel Yitzchak Yosef cited a verse from Psalms stating, “The nations came and desecrated your sanctuary.” The chief rabbi himself added, “What was done here was quite simply the work of ISIS. The heart cannot grasp the evil.”

At the same time as the Jewish sites are being attacked by Palestinian rioters, the Palestinian Authority’s diplomatic team is trying to claim that the sites are part of Islamic heritage.

Harold Rhode—a retired adviser on Islamic affairs in the Office of Net Assessment at the U.S. Department of Defense, as well as the department’s former Turkish Desk Officer—suggests that the key to understanding these moves is wrapped up in the narrative. “From an Islamic point of view, there is only one narrative. And it is the Islamic narrative,” Rhode told JNS.org.

According to Rhode, claims that Jewish holy sites such as Joseph’s and Rachel’s tombs also are holy to Muslims have no historical significance in Islam.

“The claims are invented in the battle to de-Judaify Israel,” Rhode said.

Rhode notes that Muslims have historically made claims on Christian and Jewish sites across the Middle East, including in Syria, Iraq, and Turkey.

“This is taking place all over the Middle East,” he said. “They take places holy to other religions and they Islamify them. The goal is to snuff out, slowly but surely any other religions.”

Rhode adds that Israel and other societies have difficulty coming to terms with false Muslim claims on other religions’ holy sites, as it would be uncommon for any Judeo-Christian society to manufacture such claims about another religion without historical basis.

“They are not using reason. They are using Islam. This is not right and wrong in the way Westerners would understand it. According to Muslims, if it advances Islam, it is right,” Rhode said.

That phenomenon is now taking hold in Israel, said JCPA’s Diker.

“It’s the total inversion of history to detach by force of terror, as well as by force of non-military means, any Jewish connection to Jewish holy sites in the land of Israel,” he said.
