Production of

The Town That Fought Hate

This puppet show is age appropriate for grades 4 -5 and is based on an incident that made national headlines. The story recounts the remarkable events of the 1993 holiday season in Billings, Montana. A hate group harasses Jewish families and other groups, so residents band together to resist the forces of bigotry that threaten their community. The story is based on Janice Cohn's book The Christmas Menorahs: How a Town Fought Hate. It is designed to help young children realize that individuals can find things to do to work against hatred and make changes in their community. The show is 40 minutes long and then we will answer student questions for approximately 30 minutes. We also have teacher's guides available for anyone bringing students to the show.
