

Susan Nehmen

There are many reasons why people choose to endow charitable gifts. The first and primary reason is because they care about the organization.

Joe and I moved to Greensboro almost twenty-two years ago and found ourselves surrounded by a warm, loving, and friendly Jewish community. We soon learned that being involved was of utmost importance in keeping this small community vibrant. We each took a turn at being ‘campaign chair’ and realized how important each gift is to sustaining all of the services the Federation offers.

Soon after completing my term, my father, Stanley Tanger z”l, made me a Lion of Judah. What a great honor for me to support an organization we truly care about.

The second reason many people endow their gifts is because they want the programs of the organization to be sustainable.

Several years later, my father gave my mother and me the gift of LOJE, endowing our Lion of Judah pins. He understood and cared about our involvement and commitment to the Greensboro Jewish Federation.

With each new generation comes a greater appreciation of the generation before.

It is a great privilege to contribute in a way that can make a real impact for years to come.

As my father did for me, I hope to set an example for our children and grandchildren.

