*We have created this guide to serve as a convenient go-to document when you need reliable information regarding Judaism and issues pertaining to Israel. Included in this guide are short descriptions of the three major Jewish denominations and some of the more well-known Jewish organizations as well as contact information for our local Jewish organizations. Also included is a calendar of Jewish holidays and a short description of each. This calendar can be consulted when scheduling important events and is useful for teachers and the Board of Education to avoid scheduling exams during the High Holidays as well as the holidays of Sukkot, Pesach, and Shavuot.

Synopsis of the three major Jewish denominations:

Reform Judaism: Reform Judaism emphasizes the evolving nature of the faith, the superiority of its ethical aspects to the ceremonial ones and belief in a continuous revelation, closely intertwined with human reason and intellect. It is a form of Judaism, initiated in Germany, that has reformed or abandoned aspects of Orthodox Jewish worship and ritual in an attempt to adapt to modern changes in social, political and cultural life. Many rabbis of the Reform movement will officiate at interfaith marriages and same-sex marriages. The vast majority of Reform Jews support the secular Zionist movement.

Conservative Judaism: Conservative Judaism seeks to conserve essential elements of traditional Judaism but allows for the modernization of religious practices. Following Orthodoxy, many Conservatives insist on the sacredness of the Sabbath. Dietary laws are generally respected and observed. Starting in 1985, Conservative Judaism drew farther away from Orthodoxy by ordaining women rabbis. Many Conservatives, stressing Jewish nationalism as inseparable from the culture of the Jewish people, encourage the study of Hebrew and support the secular Zionist movement.

www.uscj.org

Orthodox Judaism: Orthodox Judaism is the branch of Judaism that most strictly adheres to traditional beliefs and practices. Jewish Orthodoxy believes that the Bible and other sacred Jewish writings contain not only eternally valid moral principles, but also historically and culturally conditioned modern adaptations and interpretations of the Law. In Orthodox Judaism, both the Written Law and the Oral Law remain the basis of religious observance.

Please note that Jews consider Messianic Judaism a Christian sect, not a form of Judaism. When needing answers or statements from the Jewish community, please refer to the individuals and organizations contained within this guide.

United Nations Watch is a non-governmental organization based in Geneva, Switzerland, whose mandate is to monitor the performance of the United Nations by the yardstick of its own Charter. Areas of interest include: UN management reform, the UN and civil society, equality within the UN, and the equal treatment of member states. United Nations Watch notes that the disproportionate attention and unfair treatment applied by the UN toward Israel over the years offers an object lesson (though not the only one) in how due process, equal treatment, and other fundamental principles of the UN Charter are often ignored or selectively upheld. www.unwatch.org
