Janice Kaplan

Janice Kaplan is widely known for her achievements as a writer, television producer and magazine editor. She is the author of fourteen books, including the New York Times bestseller The Gratitude Diaries and her latest hit, How Luck Happens.

As the Editor-in-Chief of Parade, the most widely read publication in America, she attracted some of America's best writers and biggest-name celebrities. Her own interviews with stars including Barbra Streisand, Clint Eastwood, Matt Damon and Daniel Craig got international attention.

Janice was deputy editor of TV Guide magazine and executive producer of the TV Guide Television Group, where she created and produced more than 30 television shows that aired primetime on ABC, FOX, VH1 and other networks. She began her career as an on-air sports reporter for CBS Radio and went on to be an award-winning producer at ABC-TV's Good Morning America.

In addition to her popular non-fiction, her bestselling novels have been translated and published in more than a dozen countries. She has written hundreds of articles for national magazines and appeared dozens of times on TV shows including Today, Good Morning America, Entertainment Tonight and CBS This Morning. Janice graduated magna cum laude from Yale University and won Yale's Murray Fellowship for writing.
