Yentl – 40th Anniversary!
Sunday, January 22 at 4 p.m.
Rebbe Mendel is a single father who teaches the Talmud, a sacred text of Judaism, to the boys of his small Polish town. Behind closed doors, he also instructs his daughter, Yentl, despite the fact that girls are forbidden to study religious scripture. When Yentl’s father dies, she still has a strong desire to learn about her faith -- so she disguises herself as a male, enrolls in a religious school, and unexpectedly finds love along the way. Running time: 113 minutes — English

Rock Camp
Sunday, January 29 at 4 p.m.
The only thing better than meeting your rock idols is getting the chance to play with them onstage. For 25 years, Rock and Roll Fantasy Camp has been making dreams come true for people from all walks of life. Founded by David Fishof, an Orthodox Jew and son of a Cantor, Rock ‘N Roll Fantasy Camp is held annually in Las Vegas, offering four days of intensive music lessons with rock icons like Roger Daltrey, Alice Cooper, and Nancy Wilson. The film follows four of the campers who attend the camp as they are mentored by celebrity musicians, culminating in a final onstage performance. Featuring a who’s who of rock stars with Jewish roots, such as Gene Simmons and Sammy Hagar, this exuberant, fast-paced film manages to capture genuinely moving moments as both campers and their famous counselors bond over their shared love of music. Running time: 87 minutes — English

The Band’s Visit
Sunday, February 5 at 4 p.m.
On an ordinary day, the Alexandria Ceremonial Police Orchestra arrives in Israel from Egypt for a cultural event, only find there is no delegation to meet them, nor any arrangements to get to their destination of Petah Tiqva. When they find their own ride, they arrive instead at the remote town of Beit Hatikva. Stuck there until the next morning’s bus, the band, led by the repressed Tawfìq Zacharaya, gets help from the worldly lunch owner, Dina, who offers to put them up for the night. As the band settles in as best it can, each of the members attempts to get along with the natives in their own way. What follows is a special night of quiet happenings and confessions as the band makes its own impact on the town and the town on them. Running time: 87 minutes — English, Hebrew, and Arabic

Meet the Jewish world champion of Magic: The Gathering

By Gabe Friedman

(JTA) — There's a good chance that right now, Nathan Steuer is playing, or thinking about playing, Magic: The Gathering. The trading card game, which Steuer used to play with friends at Jewish summer camp, has become the 20-year-old Berkeley native’s lifelong passion and full-time job.

Steuer — who had a bar mitzvah in addition to attending the Union for Reform Judaism's Camp Newman in Santa Rosa, California — competes in online tournaments every weekend for about 12 hours each on Saturdays and Sundays. He spends hours preparing and studying strategy, and also coaches other players in his spare time. He's even currently taking a year off from his studies at the University of California, Santa Cruz, in order to focus on the game.

The obsession paid off when Steuer won the Magic World Championship on Oct. 30 in Las Vegas, beating the 31 other best players from across the globe.

“It felt honestly surreal, like a dream,” Steuer told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency in an interview this week.

He sounds very measured and reserved on the phone, and he thinks that calmness helps his game.

“When you're playing versus such high-level players in a world championship setting, a lot of your edges in terms of trying to win a greater amount come from keeping a really level-headed approach to each game, and making sure to essentially not let nerves affect you,” Steuer explained.

For the uninitiated, in “Magic,” as it is colloquially known, each player inhabits the role of a “Planewalker,” a wizard who can traverse dimensions to battle others in turn-based combat using spells. The game, which hit the market in 1993, often draws comparisons to predecessor Dungeons & Dragons, and can now be played both online and with physical cards. It has been played by tens of millions of people worldwide.

After the onset of the pandemic, the game largely transitioned online, especially for serious players. There’s an entire Pro Tour of players who compete in highly-competitive, international tournaments.

The World Championship comes with the hefty prize of $100,000 — but as a true Magic purist, Steuer is even more excited about the other part of the winnings: the opportunity to design his own Magic card with a fantasy illustration of himself that will be released in future decks.

“The prize money is awesome. But having that opportunity is really fantastic,” he said.

Steuer grew up attending synagogue every week for Shabbat services and religious school, an experience he remembers fondly.

“I really enjoyed getting to do that with my family, and having that experience was super meaningful, probably from when I was four to around the time of my bar mitzvah,” he said.

But even though he played Magic at Jewish camp, Steuer said he hasn’t felt much overlap lately in those two aspects of his life.

It's possible to earn a living as a Magic player. According to the official Magic site, around 150 players have amassed at least $100,000 career earnings, with the top player cracking $1 million. Steuer isn’t sure what his future holds, but for the time being, he’s devoted to his favorite game.

“I decided to transition and see how far this career could take me because it had been probably my biggest passion growing up, I never stopped,” Steuer said. “And so once I saw the opportunity, I decided to pursue it and see it through.”

Going forward, Steuer said he will work to defend his world title at next year’s championship. He’s also interested in the behind-the-scenes aspects of the game he loves, such as designing cards.

“Winning gave me that feeling that I have a lot that I can conquer outside of playing Magic if I set my mind to something, and I think it gave me a firm grasp that I can figure out my own path to success, whether it’s Magic or another pursuit.”

From Jack Antonoff to Doja Cat to Flora Purim, this year’s Jewish Grammy nominees span every genre

There’s no beer at the World Cup in Qatar, but there are kosher bagels

By David I. Klein

(JTA) — Qatar may have caused an uproar by banning alcohol at the World Cup soccer tournament in Doha this month, but for religious Jewish fans, some kosher offerings will be available, thanks to two rabbis.

Rabbi Marc Schneier, from New York, and Rabbi Mendy Chitrik, the Hasidic Chabad-Lubavitch movement’s emissary to Istanbul, worked with Qatari officials to create a kosher catering program to provide for observant Jews who may attend the games. And despite a report that has echoed around the world claiming that Qatar banned the production of kosher food after promising it would be made available, the rabbis say all is still going as planned.

It won’t involve five-course meals or fine dining, but the duo arranged for kosher bagels to be baked in a catering space provided by Qatar Airways and delivered to those who need them during the World Cup.

“We decided to go with the theme of bagels, because while they are not well known here in Qatar, they are very well known in the U.S. and ethnically identified with Jews,” Schneier told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. “They’re probably the third from left, worked together on the initiative. (Courtesy of Schneier)

Those who need them during the games and ethnically identified with Jews,” Schneier told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. “They’re probably the first kosher bagels being produced and baked here in Qatar.

The kitchen is under the supervision of Chitrik, who manages kosher certification operations in Turkey — one of the world’s largest food producers — on behalf of the Orthodox Union, the Israeli Rabbinate and the Turkish Rabbinate. He has also helped facilitate kosher operations elsewhere in the Middle East, such as the United Arab Emirates. Chitrik’s son Eli, also a rabbi, will stay in Qatar for the duration of the tournament to supervise the facility.

Neither rabbi said they know how much demand there will actually be for kosher food.

“It was really, you know, taking a leap of faith,” said Schneier, rabbi at the Hampton Synagogue on Long Island in New York. “I don’t know if one person needs a kosher meal or if 100 people will need a kosher meal.”

Chitrik, who has been involved in similar projects in the Gulf region in the past, told JTA that he received many phone calls asking if there would be kosher food available.

“From phone calls to actuality, you don’t know what will be, but there were a lot of requests,” he said. “As rabbis in the region, we felt it was our responsibility to respond to those requests and make sure that people have what to eat if they are coming to the games. Some people are staying for a month.”

The kitchen will be operational for the full 30 days of the World Cup tournament. Both rabbis said that if they see high demand, they hope to increase the offerings beyond just bagels.

The Jerusalem Post reported Sunday that Qatar has banned cooked kosher food at the World Cup, and World Jewish Congress President Ronald Lauder released a statement saying he was “outraged.” Both Chitrik and Schneier denied that claim.

“The whole thing was not very organized. Nobody actually came saying they would put up the money to establish a kosher restaurant. Everybody is demanding the Qatars to open a kosher restaurant, and no, they didn’t open a kosher restaurant. I’m sure if someone came with the business plan to open a kosher restaurant, they would have no problem with that. At the end of the day they did open up a kosher kitchen, but it was very last minute so there is no meat. That’s it for now,” Chitrik told JTA.

Schneier believes that the project has value beyond just filling empty stomachs — the bagels could be a step towards normalizing Jewish life in Qatar, which is currently nonexistent.

Both Chitrik and Schneier work in the realm of building Jewish-Islamic relations. Schneier is the president and founder of the Foundation for Ethnic Understanding, a nonprofit devoted to improving Jewish-Muslim relations, while Chitrik leads the Alliance of Rabbis in Islamic States.

Currently, Qatar has no relations with Israel, and its state broadcaster, Al Jazeera, which is often accused of serving Qatari foreign policy, has long taken a hard line against the Jewish state.

Nonetheless, Schneier worked with his Qatari contacts to help bring the first direct flights from Israel to the Gulf nation so that Israeli soccer fans could watch the games, unhindered by regional politics. Despite the lack of formal relations, the Israeli foreign ministry negotiated the establishment of a temporary diplomatic mission and consular office to serve these citizens for the duration of the games.

“The leadership of the State of Qatar is performing a ‘mitzvah’ by making kosher food available for members of the worldwide Jewish community, including those traveling from Israel,” Schneier said in a statement. “Furthermore, the Qatars have stood by and followed through on every commitment that was made to welcome Jewish fans to this prestigious event.”

The World Cup isn’t Schneier’s first foray into getting kosher food into sporting events. In the 1990s, when he served as president of New York’s Board of Rabbis, he was involved in the initiative to establish a kosher food stand at Yankee Stadium. Since then, kosher food options have become available at many stadiums around the United States.

Tech Tips

Are you aware that November is Assistive Technology Awareness Month? Curious to learn more?

Assistive technology (AT) is any device, digital or not, that helps an individual maintain or improve functioning, independence, and one’s overall well-being. Assistive technology enables people of all ages to live healthier and more dignified lives.

Examples of devices include items such as eyeglasses and knee braces and hearing aids as well as “smart” voice assistants such as Siri and Alexa, which can be found on many phones and tablets. Virtual reality headsets, a growing technology, is yet another example.

Most current cell phones, tablets, and computers offer a slew of AT features. You can usually find them within your devices’ “Settings,” under “Accessibility.”

Helpful touch, sight, and audio features often include VoiceOver, Zoom, Touch Assistance, Subtitles and Captioning, and many others – too much to list here!

I encourage you to explore these features, see what may help you most, and use them routinely to build helpful habits. Questions? Please feel free to contact me!

Getting to know you:

Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo and Jewish Senior, Family & Social Services Staff

Tim Hagen
Project Manager and Technology Coordinator
Jewish Senior, Family and Social Services

Toledo Jewish News: Can you describe your main responsibilities in your new role?

Tim Hagen: My focus is to oversee a year-long grant awarded by the State of Ohio’s Department of Aging. This grant has enabled the Federation to purchase both Amazon Echo Shows and Rendever Virtual Reality headsets, technology that we have started to implement via programming and home visits, all with the intent to increase participants’ social engagement with friends and family as well as increase their technology skills and awareness.

TJN: What are some of your biggest goals or aspirations for your role?

TH: A very practical goal is to increase technology-based programming and services for membership. More generally, I hope to help increase members’ willingness to see technology as an aide, as a tool that can benefit and make better their lives, not as a nuisance or complication.

TJN: What aspects of the JFGT or JF&SS mission do you connect with?

TH: In particular, “restoring the world” and “acts of loving-kindness,” I hope my work here reflects these values and responsibilities.

TJN: What led you to this type of work?

TH: I come from a background in public librarianship, so providing programming, learning the community in which I serve, forging connections, and helping people – these are all duties I care about and see as being important here, too.

TJN: What energizes you at work?

TH: Programming and finding ways to use technology as the focal point, is a key energizer. Knowing that I helped someone, even in the smallest of ways, is another.

TJN: What energizes you outside of work?

TJN: What is the most unique part about working for JFGT / JF&SS (so far)?

TH: To have daily, consistent opportunities to work with people in such direct, impactful ways is something I’ve never experienced in a prior job, library or not. It’s both unique and special. I’m a fan!

TJN: Do you have a favorite memory or accomplishment at work (in a previous role) that you’re most proud of?

TH: As the then director of the Ida Rupp Public Library system (Port Clinton), it was my honor to help lead the charge in opening a brand-new library branch in a nearby community, Marblehead. Witnessing the community support during construction and after opening made all the preparatory work and worry worth it.

TJN: What energizes you outside of work?

TJN: What is something a Toledo Jewish News reader may not know about you?

TH: I’m not originally from Toledo, or Ohio for that matter (I’m a proud St. Louisian), but Ohio has been my home for many years now. I’m an adopted Buckeye, so to speak.

TJN: What is something you saw recently that made you smile?

TH: My family recently welcomed a rescue dog, Tasha, into the mix. Sure enough, one of our three (very particular) cats, Socks, gently bumped noses with Tasha the other evening and I just happened to notice this exchange. Were they saying “hi”? Is Tasha now accepted by the cat clan? Did they just like how each other smelled? I’ll never know.

TJN: What is the best compliment you have ever received?

TH: I was once told by a close friend that I “was the best listener they ever met.” Hearing that meant the world to me.

TJN: What are three words your closest family and friends would use to describe you?

TH: Empathetic, creative, curious

TJN: What is one of your favorite family traditions?

TH: When young, my parents, sister, and I would go for a drive across the Mississippi River every September to go apple picking in rural Illinois. Minus Illinois and a really wide river, this is a tradition that my wife, two kids, mom, and I have continued in search of tart and crisp Jonathans, our (my?) favorite kind.

EXPERIENCE ISRAEL

Prepare to be awestruck at the old city of Jaffa, the Galilee, Jerusalem and the Old City. You'll visit the holiest site in Judaism, the Western Wall, and tour the Israel Museum and view the Dead Sea Scrolls. You'll get an up-close view of the center of Israeli government – the Knesset. Your trip-of-a-lifetime includes swimming in the therapeutic waters of the Dead Sea, exploring Jerusalem’s bustling Machane Yehuda Market, ascending Masada by cable car, and so much more! And when it's time for you to rest and recharge, you'll do it at hotels in the heart of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem and at a “kibbutz experience” boutique hotel in the Western Galilee.

There are many ways to support Israel and its people, but none is more transformative than a gift to Magen David Adom, Israel’s paramedic and Red Cross service. Your gift to MDA isn’t just changing lives — it’s literally saving them — providing critical care and hospital transport for everyone from victims of heart attacks to casualties of rocket attacks.

Support Magen David Adom by donating today at afmda.org/support or call 866.632.2763.

No charitable gift has a greater impact on the lives of Israelis.

Meanwhile, Wolberg said that among the traits she loves most about her partner is that she has long considered herself a bit of an eccentric (her love of Renaissance music was part of what endeared her to Dressner), and thought it might be difficult to find someone who would put up with her many quirks.

“Zoe wholeheartedly accepts me,” she said. “My quirks are the things she loves the most. She’s not just putting up with me, but really loves all of me for exactly who I am.”

This story is part of JTA’s Mazels series, which profiles unique and noteworthy Jewish life events from births to b’nai mitzvah to weddings and everything in between.

The couple said they appreciated that Shabbat services became a continuation of their celebration. They also said that one feature of the wedding stood out: the bouncy house.

That was Dressner’s idea. Given their ages, she said, she thought, “Why not?” But although some of their parents were initially skeptical about it, most of the guests partook. And one could also see the massive inflatable slide that the couple zoomed down together as a metaphor for their relationship.

“I’m much more reserved personality-wise, and sometimes I need to be pushed out of my comfort zone,” Dressner said. “I learn a lot from the wonderful way Margeaux approaches the world so differently.”

UT Hillel Alumnus publishes anthology

“Other Terrors is an anthology that looks at the fear and dread of being othered,” Gold stated. “Being Jewish, many of us can easily understand the darksome things, historical traumas, and modern monsters that amount to what would be considered an ‘other terror.’ The world was in such a tumultuous place during the Summer of 2020 I began to reflect not only on my Jewish heritage, but the inextricably linked relationship between Jews and Blacks in America. Black Screams, Yellow Stars examines the collective trauma of two groups told through the last moments of two narrators who find themselves on the other end of an all too familiar, hateful twine. The story itself was inspired by an article from a letter in the Cincinnati-based American Israelite newspaper dated August 28, 1868.”

According to Gold, the story follows two narrators, a Jewish man and a Black man. The two end up at the mercy of crimson-hat wearing brutes who have plans decided for them simply because they are who they are.

Gold is an alumnus of The University of Toledo Hillel and has been writing prose poetry since 2017 (professionally published); his work has been nominated for the Rhysling Award and Pushcart Prize. In 2021, he released his first book, Oblivion in Flux: A Collection of Cyber Prose. His second book of poetry, Mobius Lyrics, was recently released, and he plans to release third and fourth books of poems in 2023.

Reagan Miller is a 7th grader at Anthony Wayne Junior High. She has many passions including animals, friends, and gymnastics. One of the most important experiences for Reagan is her time at Goldman Union Camp Institute (GUCI). The time spent at camp has helped inspire Reagan’s Jewish identity. Part of her Jewish identity and being a Bat Mitzvah is her desire to help others and since winter is quickly approaching, Reagan decided to help the Toledo Humane Society as her mitzvah project. She is hoping to donate many different items to help care for all the animals. She is very excited to share her Bat Mitzvah with family and friends from all over the country.

On November 6-9, 17 women from Israel’s Western Galilee region came to Toledo as part of a program called Women Leading a Dialogue. This special, multi-cultural, women’s empowerment Partnership2Gether program brings Jewish and Arab women together for a dialogue. The women of the group get to know each other, go out on field trips, and celebrate holidays together. While strengthening their bonds, they also enhance their leadership skills. While in town, the women met with over 100 Jewish and non-Jewish community members at three events. They also went on a tour and private glassblowing demonstration at the Toledo Museum of Art, made glass flowers at Gathered Glassblowing Studio, volunteered at the Islamic Food Bank, toured the Islamic Center of Greater Toledo and Congregation B’nai Israel, and more. A special thank you to Laurie Gross, Anita Levin, Rhoda Miller, Fagie Benstein, Ann and Howard Rosenberg, Larry and Diane Friedman, and Barbara and Jim Goodman for providing home hospitality.

On October 28-30, two Shinshinim spent their first of three weekends this school year in Toledo. Shinshinim are young adult Israeli emissaries who participate in a highly competitive program of the Jewish Agency for Israel. They are taking a gap year between high school and their mandatory army service to volunteer in the Cleveland Jewish community. The Shinshinim spoke at Shabbat services at Temple Shomer Emunim and Congregation B’nai Israel and led activities at the religious schools. They will return to Toledo in February and later in the spring. A special thank you to Hope and Greg Davis for providing home hospitality.

Now that the weather is turning to colder temperatures, we need to be aware of home fire safety. House fires can be highly dangerous or even deadly, so it's important for everyone in your family to be aware of proper fire prevention and safety. Each year, thousands of children suffer mild to serious injuries as a result of fire-related situations, with nearly 500 of these cases being fatalities.

7 Ways to Prepare for a Home Fire

- Install the right number of smoke alarms. Test them once a month and replace the batteries at least once a year.
- Teach children what smoke alarms sound like and what to do when they hear one.
- Ensure that all household members know two ways to escape from every room of your home and know the family meeting spot outside of your home.
- Establish a family emergency communications plan and ensure that all household members know who to contact if they cannot find one another.
- Practice escaping from your home at least twice a year. Press the smoke alarm test button or yell "Fire" to alert everyone that they must get out.
- Make sure everyone knows how to call 9-1-1.
- Teach household members to STOP, DROP and ROLL if their clothes catch on fire.

Remember These DOs and DON'Ts

- DO keep items that can catch on fire at least three feet away from anything that gets hot, such as space heaters.
- DO take precautions: Smoke outside; choose fire-safe cigarettes; use deep, sturdy ashtrays and douse cigarette and cigar butts with water before disposal.
- DON'T ever smoke in bed, when drowsy or medicated, or if anyone in the home is using oxygen.
- DO talk to children regularly about the dangers of fire, matches and lighters and keep them out of reach.
- DO turn portable heaters off when you leave the room or go to sleep.
- DO use flashlights when the power is out, not candles.
- DON'T leave a burning candle unattended, even for a minute.

Safeguard Your Home

- Install smoke alarms on every level of your home and outside every sleeping area.
- Install a carbon monoxide alarm in a central location outside each separate sleeping area.
- Make sure your house number is easily readable from the street, even at night.
- Make sure your home heating sources are clean and in working order. Many home fires are started by poorly maintained furnaces or stoves, cracked or rusted furnace parts, or chimneys with creosote buildup.
- Use kerosene heaters only if permitted by law. Refuel kerosene heaters only outdoors and after they have cooled.
- Check electrical wiring in your home:
  - Fix or replace frayed extension cords, exposed wires, or loose plugs.
  - Make sure wiring is not under rugs, attached by nails, or in high traffic areas.
  - Make sure electrical outlets have cover plates and no exposed wiring.
  - Avoid overloading outlets or extension cords.
- Purchase only appliances and electrical devices (including space heaters) that bear the label of an independent testing laboratory.
- Store combustible materials in open areas away from heat sources. Place rags used to apply flammable household chemicals in metal containers with tight-fitting lids.

Menorah Fire Safety

It's possible to buy electric menorahs, but if you prefer traditional candles, you can still celebrate Hanukkah in a fire smart way. Keep flammable items, including curtains and holiday decorations, at least 3 feet away from your candles. Place your menorah on a non-flammable surface to catch the melting candle wax, such as a tray lined with aluminum foil. Never leave lit candles unattended.
Hillel419 wishes you a very happy Chanukah!
