Letters from Anne and Martin is a dramatic presentation drawn entirely from the text of Anne Frank’s The Diary of a Young Girl (1947, expanded 1995) and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.’s Letter from Birmingham Jail (1963). This unique adaptation combines their iconic words and examines their parallel experiences living in the shadow of hatred and prejudice in different decades, on different sides of the globe, but within the same generation.

Behind closed doors, he also instructs his daughter, Yentl, despite the fact that girls are forbidden to study religious scripture. The Band’s Visit
Sunday, February 5 at 4 p.m.
On an ordinary day, the Alexandria Ceremonial Police Orchestra arrives in Israel from Egypt for a cultural event, only find there is no delegation to meet them, nor any arrangements to get to their destination of Petah Tikva. When they find their own ride, they arrive instead at the remote town of Beit Hattikva. Stuck there until the next morning’s bus, the band, led by the repressed Tawfiq Zacharaya, gets help from the worldly lunch owner, Dina, who offers to put them up for the night. As the band settles in as best it can, each of the members attempts to get along with the natives in their own way. What follows is a special night of quiet happenings and confessions as the band makes its own impact on the town and the town on them. Running time: 87 minutes — English, Hebrew, and Arabic

MULTI-GENERATIONAL TRIVIA NIGHT
Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo

A Holocaust survivor and her family saw ‘Leopoldstadt.’ The Broadway play told their story.

Editor's note: Renee and James (Jim) Akers, featured in the following story, lived in Toledo from 1971 to 2005. Jim, the oldest of 24 cousins on his mother’s side (Mastro family), met Renee in Mexico City. They married in 1972. They moved to Toledo in 1971 when their one-year-old daughter Sherry (Levin) and later welcomed a son, Bradley. Jim became Vice President of Meilink Bank Equipment and in 1975 became President of Meilink Industries, Inc., a corporation comprising four family enterprises. In Jewish Toledo in the 1980s, Jim served in many roles including Campaign Chairman, Foundation board member, and President of the Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo for two years, and several other Jewish Toledo community boards including The Temple, JFS, and JCC. Renee was Chair of the Women’s Campaign and headed the local Russian resettlement program.

By Julia Gergely

(New York Jewish Week) — On a Wednesday evening last month, three generations of a Jewish family made their way to their seats at the Longacre Theater to see “Leopoldstadt,” Tom Stoppard’s epic Broadway play about the tragedies that befell an extended Jewish family in the first half of the 20th century. The date of the family gathering was a significant one: Nov. 9, the 84th anniversary of the Nazi pogrom known as Kristallnacht. And in the audience was Fini Konstat, 95, who lived in the once thriving Jewish neighborhood in Vienna for 90 years, and her son-in-law, Renee and James Akers, and her oldest great-grandchild, Lexi Levin, 23.

When Konstat was a child, she lived in a “nice apartment” in Leopoldstadt. But exactly 84 years to the day of their family’s legacy, a play meant to her — and how her family — such an amazing multi-generational story, felt like an understatement in this scenario,” said Sherry Levin, one of Konstat’s great-granddaughters.

In “Leopoldstadt,” each generation of the Konstat family that saw “Leopoldstadt” that night came away with something different — a reaction influenced by their age, their Jewish identity, their nationality and their relationships with their family.

For Konstat, the arc of “Leopoldstadt” was so familiar that it hardly stirred her. “I was just very happy watching it and enjoying it and enjoying my children with me,” she told the New York Jewish Week. “I didn’t think about anybody else.”

Akers, too, felt an intense familiarity with the story, and, perhaps touched by her own family history, didn’t experience an intense emotional reaction. Her own parents’ lives gave Akers a sense of purpose in her life — for example, in the 1990s, she was passionate about helping resettle Jews fleeing the former Soviet Union. With her own children, she instilled in them a strong sense of Jewish purpose in their work, their education and their family.

Letters from Anne and Martin: A Dramatic Presentation to Commemorate International Holocaust Remembrance Day and Martin Luther King Day

On Thursday, January 19, 2023, 6:30 p.m., at The Center for Performing Arts at The University of Toledo, 1910 W. Rocket Dr., Toledo, Ohio, The University of Toledo will commemorate International Holocaust Remembrance Day and Martin Luther King Day with a dramatic presentation: Letters from Anne and Martin from the Anne Frank Center for Mutual Respect. The program is free and open to the public.

The International Holocaust Remembrance Day, observed on January 27, 2023, is an internationally recognized Memorial Day for the victims of the Holocaust. The Holocaust is the genocide that resulted in the annihilation of six million European Jews as well as millions of others by the Nazi regime and its collaborators. The day was designated by a United Nations General Assembly Resolution on November 1, 2005. Martin Luther King Jr. Day is observed on January 16, 2023, to mark the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. in recognition of his nonviolent activism in the Civil Rights Movement.

The traveling production of Letters from Anne and Martin counterpoints the experiences of two legendary figures: Martin Luther King Jr. and Anne Frank. Through the inspirational words of her hopes and plans for a peaceful and unified world, Anne Frank’s The Diary of a Young Girl serves as a reminder of the atrocities experienced during the Holocaust because of bigotry. Written in response to her arrest during a peaceful demonstration, the defense of his strategy of nonviolent resistance to racism in Martin Luther King’s Letter from Birmingham Jail, is one of the most important written documents of the civil rights era. To this day, Anne’s and Martin’s words still resonate as a testament to how one voice can carry the voices of millions that have been silenced.

This unique adaptation combining their iconic words illustrates how both Martin Luther King and Anne Frank, born during the same year and living on continents 5,000 miles apart, suffered from bigotry, but shared parallel aspirations for humanity. Despite being faced with unfair persecution, he in the Jim Crow South, and she in Nazi-occupied Holland, the African American Civil Rights Movement leader and the Jewish Holocaust victim believed in fairness and justice for all and in the underlying goodness of people.

This live dramatic performance features professional actors who bring to life the courage and eloquence of Anne’s and Martin’s thoughts and promotes constructive ideas on how to confront intolerance and discrimination today via a talk back at the end. This program is co-sponsored by the Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo’s Ruth Fajerman Markowicz Holocaust Resource Center and The University of Toledo Office of Diversity, Equality and Inclusion and College of Arts and Letters.

Parking for the program is free in lot 12 and 12S.

Leopoldstadt

Mimi’s story, and knowing that she survived because her mother had citizenship in Turkey,” Levin said. “That story was just inspirational to me, knowing that dual citizenship was what saved our family.” She convinced her brother and mother to apply for Austrian citizenship as well.

The day after her grandmother and great-grandmother left New York, Levin called them with news from her small apartment in Manhattan: An Austrian passport had arrived in the mail. The curtain was rising on another act.

Konstand was surprised at how interested her family was in getting Austrian citizenship. “I feel very good,” she said. “I’m very happy.”

“Does it make you emotional?” Levin asked her during the Zoom call with the New York Jewish Week.

“It does — of course it does. I used to love Austria,” she said. “I was sad to leave. I was disappointed. We never thought of coming back. I was happy to be able to escape. Thank G-d we made it out of hell.”

Over 130 people attended 2022’s sold-out Shine a Light on Antisemitism event. The evening included a delicious kosher dinner and remarks by:

• Stephen Rothschild, CEO of the Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo (JFGT)
• Sue Ann Hochberg, Chair of JFGT’s Jewish Community Relations Council (JCRC)
• Rabbi Jamie Gibson, visiting interim rabbi at Temple Shomer Emanim
• A panel discussion featuring Bishop Chet Trail (Director of Diversity and Inclusion at Sylvania City Schools), Joe Wood (Equality Toledo Board Chair), and Jewish community member Helen Grubb focusing on rising antisemitism and its intersection with other forms of hate
• Mark Greenblatt, Vice President of JFGT Round table discussions on real-life antisemitic incidents engaged everyone in attendance. Representatives from all of Toledo’s Jewish institutions sang Maoz Tzur after Rabbi Shemtov of Chabad House lit the menorah and recited the Hanukkah blessings. After the event ended, nearly two dozen non-Jewish attendees received their first tour of a synagogue, led by Margie and Mel Siegel.

Special thanks to Congregation Etz Chayim for hosting this important event.

Shine a Light on Antisemitism was funded in part through the generosity of the Stu and Jo-Jo Goldberg Donor Advised Fund of the Toledo Jewish Community Foundation.

Jewish Toledan pursuing aliyah after transformative long-term Israel program

Masa initiative aims to foster deep community engagement among Jewish young adults

Sam Light has been living in Israel’s Rishon LeZion (five miles south of Tel Aviv) for approximately 15 months. A Toledo native, Sam traveled across the world just after Covid hit in 2020 to take part in a 10-week Masa Israel Journey program in which he and a fellow participant were placed in a middle school to assist third through sixth graders with their English lessons.

“We would help the English teacher deliver her lesson to the kids, trying to foster a good connection between them and the English language,” he said. “It was interesting to take the reins and help deliver the lesson plan to captivate their attention. I wanted them to learn and have fun with the language. It was rewarding for me when I would see that they were laughing, paying attention, and participating.”

According to Sam, he learned about Masa while on his Birthright trip and was encouraged by his mother, Ruthie Light, to take part. He was also influenced by his two older siblings, a sister who took part in a similar Israeli program, and his brother who taught English in South Korea.

Masa, a joint initiative of the Government of Israel and the Jewish Agency and a global leader in cultivating Jewish connectedness through long-term, immersive programs in Israel, recently released an Impact:NPO study quantifying the impact that programs in Israel lasting four months or longer have on participants.

U.S. Capitol flag presented to JFGT to fly over Beth Shalom WWII Memorial

In early November, Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo (JFGT) received a flag previously flown over the United States Capitol (October 7, 2022) via Representative Marcy Kaptur’s office to replace a tattered flag at the World War II Memorial at Beth Shalom Cemetery in Oregon, Ohio. JFGT notified Rep. Kaptur’s office after Joe Boyle, teacher at Toledo’s Waite High School and World War II historian, contacted the organization in September to bring attention to the need and suggest reaching out to the Congresswoman’s office.

“I was paying my respects to Stephen Mosbacher and Nathan Eiser at the WWII memorial at Beth Shalom and noticed that the flag above the monument was a bit tattered,” he said. “In the process of writing a book about Toledo in World War II, I ended up growing kind of close to Mosbacher and Eiser. I don’t know if that makes a whole lot of sense, growing closer to two men who died thirty years before I was born, but I just feel a kinship with those two in particular. I amassed quite a bit of research about them - and many of the other Jewish servicemen buried or memorialized at Beth Shalom... I really can’t adequately express the admiration I have for what Toledo’s Jewish communities did during the Second World War. It’s truly remarkable.”

The surveyed Masa alumni were segmented into groups based on their attitudes and behaviors. Among the Career Explorers segment - of which 48% did not participate in any formative Jewish experiences such as bar/bat mitzvahs, Jewish summer camp, or Jewish day school growing up - the majority agree strongly that being Jewish is an important part of their identity, that they feel connected to Jews around the world, and that they feel connected to the Israeli people following their long-term Masa program.

“A new generation of deeply engaged Jewish leaders is critical to helping build a bright and strong future for the Jewish community,” said Eric S. Goldstein, CEO of UJA-Federation of New York. “Masa’s report underscores the tremendous impact of immersive Israel trips for young Jewish adults, especially for those who have less exposure to early-life Jewish experiences. Every year, thousands of Masa alumni return home inspired to lead proud Jewish lives, immensely benefiting their local communities and far beyond.”

“For me, my Masa program in Israel, I was disconnected from my Jewish roots and felt something was missing from my life. When I moved back to the United States, I knew I wanted to keep nurturing the part of my Jewish soul that blossomed in Israel,” said Charlene Green, a Masa alumna from 2008 and the Director of Changemaker Growth and Experience at the Jewish Federations of North America. “This led me to find fulfilling employment building Jewish community in North America, sharing the passion and love of Judaism I discovered in Israel. 100% attribute my lifelong work as a Jewish nonprofit professional to my Masa program.”

Masa Israel Journey is an immersive, long-term educational experience for young adults ages 16-35. Since its 2004 founding by the Israeli Prime Minister’s Office and The Jewish Agency, Masa has served over 180,000 young people from more than 60 countries.

Adam Sandler to receive Mark Twain Prize for American humor

By Jackie Hajdenberg

(\textit{JTA}) — The eight crazy nights of Hanukkah came early for Adam Sandler when the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts announced in early December, 2022, that the comedian and actor would be honored with the Mark Twain Prize for American Humor at a ceremony in March.

The prize is presented annually to individuals “who have had an impact on American society” similar to that of the 19th-century novelist and humorist, “who startled many while delighting and informing many more with his uncompromising perspective on social injustice and personal folly.”

Sandler, 56, got his start as an actor on “The Cosby Show” and was a cast member on “Saturday Night Live” for five years, before eventually starring in a slew of blockbuster comedy movies in the 1990s and early 2000s, including “Happy Gilmore,” “Big Daddy,” “The Wedding Singer,” “50 First Dates” and “Click.”

Sandler has also given critically acclaimed dramatic performances, such as one in 2019’s “Uncut Gems,” in which he played a frenetic Jewish jeweler with a gambling addiction. Others include roles in Paul Thomas Anderson’s “Punch-Drunk Love” (2002), Noah Baumbach’s “The Meyerowitz Stories” (2017) and Jeremiah Zagar’s “Hustle” (2022).

Perhaps unusually for comics of his generation, the Brooklyn-born Sandler often places his Jewishness front and center, as in his portrayal of an Israeli fish out of water in “Don’t Mess With the Zohan” (2008) and especially in his performance of “The Chanukah Song,” originally an SNL bit in which he name checks dozens of Jewish celebrities. His 2002 animated comedy “Eight Crazy Nights” takes place during the Hanukkah season.

Sandler, his wife Jackie and their two teenage daughters are set to star in a bat mitzvah-themed movie for Netflix based on Fiona Rosenbloom’s 2005 novel, “You Are So Not Invited To My Bat Mitzvah!”

Previous Jewish winners of the Mark Twain Prize include playwright Neil Simon, Lorne Michaels of “SNL,” actors Carl Reiner and Billy Crystal, and comedian Jon Stewart.

There was no Mark Twain Prize in 2020 or 2021 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The previous two winners before Sandler were 2019’s Dave Chappelle and 2022’s.

He’Brew maker Shmaltz Brewing relaunches with new owner: a rabbinical student

By Andrew Lapin

(\textit{JTA}) — It seemed like the last keg of the storied Jewish beer line of drinks, shut down last year after 25 years when its founder, Jeremy Cowan, said he wanted to focus on other businesses. But now it’s been sold to a new owner: Jesse Epstein, a 26-year-old Reform rabbinical student at Hebrew Union College who first got into home brewing during the COVID-19 pandemic and began looking for ways to work his love for beer into his rabbinical pursuits.

“I started forming in the back of my mind this idea for a Jewish brewery: how to combine these two big passions,” Epstein told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

“When he heard that Cowan was winding down Shmaltz, Epstein jumped at the chance to acquire the closest thing the beer world had to a2 Storyed Jewish brand — even though he has two-and-a-half years left of school and is currently a rabbinic intern at Temple Sinai of Saratoga Springs, New York.”

“I could have waited to do this until I was ordained and then I’d have more time on my hands, but I didn’t want to lose the opportunity,” Epstein said, declining to say how much he paid for the brand. Cowan agreed to the proposal, and remains at the company as a minority owner and consultant.

Founded in San Francisco in 1996 but now based in Clifton Park, New York, Shmaltz spent 25 years as the king of Jewish craft beer, with shtick-y brews like David’s Slingshot Hoppy Summer Lager, a jelly donut-flavored Hanukkah ale, and a Babka Loves Rugelach stout (brewed with chocolate, cinnamon and raisins). During its run it attained some level of notoriety and robust sales, with Cowan releasing a memoir, “Craft Beer Bar Mitzvah,” in 2010. Last year, after announcing he would close up shop, Cowan released an Exodus Ale as a swan song.

Epstein’s aims are different. As a rabbinical student wrestling with a shrinking interest in Reform and Conservative affiliations among American Jews, he says his goal with Shmaltz is to use beer as a vehicle for rethinking the idea of a synagogue, and of Jewish communal gathering spaces.

“What about our Jewish values can be used to inform our food practices?” he asks. “How, through beer, can we embrace the values of welcoming in the stranger, freeing the captive, opening the eyes of the blind?"

The revamped Shmaltz, working for now with an all-volunteer staff, is making Jewish practice and ritual as much a part of its brand as the shtick. Its first year under Epstein’s ownership will consist of a series of pop-up events in partnership with various Jewish groups, starting with a Dec. 17 Hanukkah launch party with Brooklyn Jews. (The events will mostly take place in New York, though Epstein may expand into other Northeast locations.)

At these gatherings, Epstein says, attendees will do the kinds of activities they might normally come to synagogue for: “Build community, do justice, look at a text, but over a pint of beer.” He sees Shmaltz as a peer of Jewish young-adult gathering projects such as Moishe House, OneTable and Base. But he says it will rely on a for-profit business model rather than institutional Jewish support.

Initially Epstein will draw from Shmaltz’s leftover inventory for the actual beers on hand at the pop-ups, and he is holding off on new products and distribution. But he hopes eventually to start brewing his own selections, which are decidedly more Talmudic in inspiration than the label’s previous offerings: He envisions a Purim-themed beer named “Shushan Beer-2” (a play on the first line of the Megillah, the scroll Jews read from on the holiday) and, ultimately, beers inspired by each of the weekly Torah portions. The brand’s labels will now include a Jewish blessing for beer, in Hebrew and English.

Ultimately, Epstein says, he would love to run Shmaltz full-time: “I can really foresee it becoming my rabbinate.”

Gary Allen Beren

Gary Allen Beren, aged eighty-nine, of Palm Beach Gardens, Florida and a long-time Toledoan, passed away November 13, 2022.

Born in Detroit on May 8, 1933, to Joseph and Betty (Levine) Beren, Gary and his family soon moved to Flint, Michigan. Detroit on May 8, 1933, to Joseph and Betty (Levine) Beren, Gary and his family soon moved to Flint, Michigan. Following the death of his father in 1941, Gary, his mother, and younger brother Charles, moved to Toledo where they lived with grandparents Sam and Ida Levine on Noble St. in North Toledo, and later to a home on Franklin Avenue.

Toledo was Gary's home for over 60 years. He was a 1951 graduate of Scott High School and attended both the University of Toledo and The Ohio State University before enlisting in the United States Army. After his military service, Gary and his first wife returned to Toledo where he started a lengthy career in the scrap iron and metal business working with his uncles Abe and Harry Levine at A. Edelstein & Son. Gary went on to become the owner and president of the company. Joined by his son Joel in 1979, together they grew the company into one of the most successful scrap iron and metal businesses in Toledo. After nearly 80 years at the Lagrange Street location, the Berens' sold the company to Omnsource Corporation in 1998.

Toledo's Jewish Community was the primary beneficiary of Gary's volunteerism and philanthropy. He was a past-President of the Jewish Community Center, board member of Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo, and chairman of the Federation's annual fundraising campaign. He was a decades-long member of Congregation Etz Chayim, Temple Shomer Emunim, and Congregation B'nai Israel. In his heart Gary was a native Toledoan. There are few people who possessed the collective memory of people, places, and events in Toledo. His recall of names, family and business relationships, and important events was uncanny. He enjoyed sharing that knowledge with his son Joel and life-long friends, many whom were members of the Raggedy Ass Cadets, an informal fraternity of sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of immigrants who settled in north Toledo.

In 1975 Gary married native Toledoan Nancy (Steinberg) who was living in California. For 47 years, Gary and Nancy enjoyed watching their family grow. They shared a large circle of friends, traveled, volunteered, collected eclectic artworks, and enjoyed life together. After the sale of Gary's company, he and Nancy moved to Ballen Isles in Palm Beach Gardens Florida. At Ballen Isles they enjoyed golf, bridge, dining, kibitzing, volunteering, and socializing with a large group of Toledoans, his brother and sister-in-law Charles and Kerry Beren, and many new friends. Visits by their children, grandchildren and later great-grandchildren were always happy times.

Gary is survived by wife Nancy, brother Charles (Kerry) Beren, son Joel (Linda) Beren, daughter Debbie (Stuart) Diamond, stepsons Mark Fetterman and Jeffery (Sharon) Fetterman. Grandchildren Sarah (Beren) and Jon Karelitz, Stephanie (Beren) and Dr. Jeremy Nathaniel, Joshua and Samantha (Schiff) Beren, Ilana (Diamond) and Michael Dahan, twins Rachelle and Danielle Fetterman. Great-grandchildren Mia and Danielle Karelitz, Zoey and Asher Nathaniel, nephews Jason (Melissa) and Peter (Rhonda) Beren, numerous cousins and friends.

Contribution may be made in Gary's memory to Hillel at The University of Toledo (toledohillel.org) or to University of Toledo Hillel c/o The Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo (jewishtoledo.org).

Justine Sperling

Justine Sperling passed away peacefully surrounded by family on December 8, 2022. She was 97 years old. She lived a long and fruitful life raising four children with her husband Roy to whom she was married to for 72 years. Together they have eight grandchildren and ten great grandchildren. She spent much of her retirement years being a fantastic wife, mother, grandmother, and great grandmother. Justine was an accomplished knitter and made afghans for each of her grandchildren in the colors of the colleges they attended. As a registered nurse at Toledo Hospital and at the WW Knight family practice center, she provided loving care for many infants, children, and adults. Additionally she was known for her culinary skills, making family favorites such as her Hawaiian chicken, corned beef brisket, lokshen kugel, and made-from-scratch brownies. She leaves behind her husband Roy and children Matthew (Gail) Sperling, Ilene (Gary) Damrauer, Nancy (Stephen) Goldberg, and Neil (Vania) Sperling. She will be greatly missed by all who knew and loved her.

Later in life he went to France and became a sports dog framer, with his dogs, Jack and Buddy, and he would work with a national Terrier rescue organization to transport adopted Terriers to their new homes.

Where are My Keys? A Talk about Brain Changes
In this program we will explore how our brains change over time, leading to normal forgetfulness about names or where we parked the car. We will also look at more serious changes, such as dementia. Presented by Cheryl J. Conley, MA, LSW, “Where Are My Keys,” will discuss the world of dementia in regards to a person suffering from it or caring for someone who does. This presentation is well known within the community, has high reviews, and has shown to be a great way to build discussion of the topic.

Come nosh, come mingle, and, most importantly, come be together. This event is open to everyone!

SERVICES.
COMMUNITY.
TOGETHER.

Beginning in 2023, Jewish Senior, Family & Social Services will be bringing a new series of FREE events to the Toledo area Jewish community. Welcome to JSFSS’s new event series: Create and Relate! These events will offer the opportunity in five unique sessions for our seniors to connect with different services by bringing in new and exciting community members and activities. Although we hope to gear some services toward our seniors, we also hope to see people of all ages as we will be touching on topics within our society that are all-inclusive. All are welcome to attend. There will be a Creative Expression Art Activity at all sessions.
As a new year is upon us, it seems an ideal time to promote upcoming tech programming plans. During the winter, please expect more tech programming information to be shared. For instance, “Tech Tuesdays,” hourly troubleshooting and instructional sessions, will premier in February. Details coming soon!

It’s our hope increased tech offerings will provide more opportunities for you to learn and explore while helping you increase your skills and confidence.

Speaking of technology, you’ve likely heard of “virtual reality.” In short, VR (often in the form of wearing a headset), allows a user to experience an alternate environment or activity in an immersive way. Good VR allows the user to feel at one with the experience; this is known as “presence.”

Join us for our next virtual reality (VR) program in January:
“Museums of the World”
Tuesday, January 17 at 11 a.m.
at the Sekach Building
Contact Sherry at 419-724-0351 to register

Types of virtual reality programming that we may offer in 2023 depends, in large part, on what you would like to experience.

Group sessions can be provided in a variety of formats: videos, slideshow-style tours, street view map exploration, and even interactive games.

Session content can range from action-packed sequences (cycling and roller coaster riding) to touring famous museums like The Met and Louvre… You may even find yourself walking the streets of Madrid, or dining in a café in Paris. Meditation sessions can be offered, too.

I encourage you to send VR program ideas and suggestions for consideration my way!

Lastly, if you are unable to attend a group program, please contact me to schedule a small group/individual appointment at my desk!

Were you a part of BBYO? Did you go to Jewish summer camp? Are you looking to influence Jewish teens today? Then this opportunity of mentorship might be for you!

Job Responsibilities

Advisors work with teens on the ground level to help them plan high quality programs, get involved with the community, and help their chapters to reach their full potential. Our advisors serve as positive Jewish role models by sharing observations with the teens, exploring problems and potential solutions, and encouraging them to strive for excellence. With advisor oversight, chapter programming is the responsibility of chapter members, allowing the teens to make some mistakes while helping them to learn and grow.

Advisors also work with teens to develop the character and confidence they need to handle the challenges of the high school years. Must be 21 years of age or older.

For more information, please visit bbyo.org/support/volunteer/. Interested in applying or finding out more? Please contact Hallie Freed at 419-724-0362 or hallie@jewishtoledo.org.

Shaanan Streett of Israeli hip-hop band Hadag Nahash mixes music and activism

By Howard Lovy

Shaanan Streett, one-sixth of the Israeli hip-hop/funk group Hadag Nahash, says that it’s all well and good for musicians to advocate for social-justice causes, but that doesn’t mean the music can’t also be fun. Streett seems to have accomplished both goals, as his band’s songs are featured in protests for various causes while remaining catchy and danceable. As long as you “keep it real,” Streett says, audiences will pick up on your authenticity.

In our interview, Streett talks about what music can do to bring people together and about his hometown of Jerusalem.

First, tell us where you grew up and how you came to the music world.

I was born in 1971 in Jerusalem. I still live on the outskirts of Jerusalem. After the army, I, like many Israelis, traveled the world. When I was in the US, I started hearing a lot of hip-hop, and like a true traveler, I had a pad and a pen, and I started writing down rhymes in Hebrew. And when I came back to Israel, I recorded one song. I handed it out in CD stores. And one of the employees at one of the CD stores turned out to be a guy with an instrumental funk band. And that’s how we started.

Before we go more into your music, tell me about Jerusalem. There’s the Jerusalem of everybody’s imagination around the world, and there’s the real Jerusalem in which real people live.

Yeah, nobody lives in the Jerusalem of the imagination, not a single person. But oddly enough, nobody lives in the Jerusalem of the real world, either. We all live somewhere in between. Doesn’t matter what religion you belong to, if any; if you’re in this city, you won’t only live on what’s happening on the floor, you’re going to live thousands of years of history, millions and millions of hopes and shattered hopes. It’s all circulating around you at any given moment. And, in that sense, it’s super artistic.

You’re involved in art, films, and music. What can these things do to foster Jewish pride or bring people together?

It’s really hard for me to put baggage on art. If it happens, it happens because the art did it, not the artist. It’s hard to explain. My only advice would be a classic hip-hop phrase: keep it real, do it as real as you can. Even when it seems like it’s the wrong thing to do, still speak your mind. And that’s the only way, at least for me and my band, to connect.

What, to you, is keeping it real? I know that you founded a number of community activities, including the One Shekel Festival, that help to strengthen marginalized communities. Is that an important part of what you do?

I think that involvement in social issues in Israel is kind of like a privilege or a benefit that artists can choose. Because people do want to hear what we have to say, and it’s up to us to decide if we want to say it or not. So yeah, when I was speaking earlier about keeping it real, it’s not to shy away from the issues, it’s to talk about the issues. And if people can act — perfect. If we can hold a festival in a place that never had one — amazing. If we can volunteer in a cancer ward — amazing. If we can perform in a forest that they want to tear down to turn into a neighborhood—even though all of the green movements think that it’s a disaster—we’ll do it. So, we try to stay close not only to the art but also to what’s happening. But that does get very, very tiring because we aren’t politicians, and we aren’t activists. We’re artists with our hearts in the right place.

Do you feel like you need to balance writing about social issues and just writing something that’s fun? Or can you accomplish both?

We demand the freedom to write whatever we want at any given time, and that can be about, for example, marijuana or just having a good time, as well as social injustice. It’s not one or the other. Our lives contain both. And when we want to keep it real, we have to speak about both. If I can give you an example from our latest album that we’re still recording, actually. But our first single that was released is a real good fun, kind of tune with funny rhyming and funny references for Israelis. The single that we’re releasing tomorrow is called the “City of God,” and it’s about Jerusalem and what it does to its inhabitants over time. So, totally different topics, but music from the same band, and we’re always trying to keep it funky and fun. Having fun

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio – Bowling Green State University’s (BGSU) Student Organization in Music Research (SOMR) is presenting a forum on music by Jewish composers on January 15, 2023, in BGSU’s Bryan Recital Hall. The event will begin at 1 p.m. with a conversation between Dr. Samuel Adler, composer, and Dr. Andrew Pelletier, hornist and BGSU professor, on liturgical and secular music, Jewish identity in music, and more. Following the talk will be a concert of music by Adler, Fromm, Harzvi, Hemi, Kasler, Mahler, Nin-Culmell, Rossi, Schalit, and more.

is super important to us. Because even if you’re saying important stuff, but it’s not fun, who wants to join? Right? There’s a saying that is something like, “If you can’t dance to it, it’s not my revolution.”

Who are some of your hip-hop influences?

I just did my top-five artists on Spotify. The first one this year was Lil Wayne. And the second one was a female rapper here in Israel called Eden Dross. Number three was Kendrick Lamar. Number four was Eminem. And then number five was an Israeli rapper called Peld. So, actually, the top five were all hip-hop. But I’m influenced by various things — anywhere from jazz to rock and roll, reggae, electronic music, funk, of course, and a bunch of hip-hop from all over the world.

One theme of the Z3 conference is achieving Jewish unity and pride. What kind of advice do you have for younger people who may be reluctant to show their Jewish pride?

I think the best method would be to find something on Judaism that you connect with. Find certain elements and be proud of that. Narrow it down. You’re not holding 5,000 years of Jewry on your shoulders. You don’t need to feel that way. Judaism, and for that matter, Diaspora Jews, have so much to be proud of. Diaspora Jews have achieved so much that there’s plenty to be proud of inside that enormous umbrella. So just find the things you connect with and be proud of that. I think that’s a good way to start.

This series is sponsored by the 2022 Annual Z3 Conference. The Z3 Project is an initiative of the Osman Family JCC of Palo Alto, dedicated to modeling how Zionism can evolve, and how communities can come together for meaningful discussions about the Diaspora and Israel. Since 2015, it has gathered leading voices from across the political spectrum for a day of debate and conversation, aimed at creating a new model of Jewish engagement in the 21st century.

Hillel1419 and the Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo envision Toledo to be a place where young Jewish adults of all backgrounds, affiliations and stories can proudly answer the question, “Why the 419?”

Thanks to the support of the Burton Kalniz Memorial Fund, our new program celebrates Judaism while helping young adults grow their Jewish identity, connect with other local Jewish young adults and take responsibility for their community through leadership and volunteer programs.

Two months into the program, our community of young adults have held ten Shabbat dinners, volunteered with eleven different organizations and celebrated Chanukah together.

Heroes of all ages joined us last month for a "Super" Hanukkah celebration and mitzvah project to give back to those in need this season. Special superhero guests presented by Laurel’s Princess Parties helped bring out the magic of the day while attendees completed a service project that will help provide comfort to seniors, foster care children, and homeless individuals, to name a few.

One person can make all the difference. There is a JEWPER hero in all of us!

Safety Tips

Dave Tullis, Jewish Federation Community Asset, Safety and Security Manager helps us stay protected with some valuable safety tips.

SITUATION AWARENESS HELPS KEEP YOU SAFE

The Jewish community not only remains the number one target of religiously motivated hate crimes, but we've seen a rise in these threats to historic levels, as well as increases in anti-Semitic incidents across the country. The trend is accelerated in the past several weeks, we’ve seen an astronomical increase in Anti-Semitism in online platforms and not just from places on the deep or dark web like 4chan and Gabb, but Facebook, Twitter, TikTok, and Instagram, the places that our community and our children congregate.

No American should be harassed, victimized, or assaulted because of their faith, and they shouldn’t be intimidated to the point where they consider not expressing that faith.

In today’s world, it’s a requirement to maintain situational awareness, whether you’re walking to synagogue, driving one’s kids to school, going to an ATM or stopping in a gas station. Today’s article is designed to give you some simple, easy-to-use tools, techniques, and strategies to keep you your loved ones more safe and secure. It’s designed to empower you. It’s also critical that we report incidents when they occur, no matter how minor or potentially embarrassing they may seem at the time. We need to make sure that those incidents are reported to law enforcement as well as local Jewish community security directors where they exist.

Situational awareness is often overlooked because in some regards, it’s common sense to pay attention.

Situational awareness really goes to the heart of our everyday living and everything we do. This is how we should process information as we move about our day-to-day life. I am not here to scare you. We are here to empower you. Our goal was to have an empowered Jewish community which will lead into a resilient Jewish community. Situational awareness is the very first step.

When we talk about situational awareness, that commitment to action, that is just truly being aware of our surroundings and reporting any sign of hate.

One of the most important aspects of building Situational Awareness is placing things in the proper context within the framework of what is “normal” or what is “ok.” Here, we see examples of suspicious behavior in various settings. These will help you make a judgment based on the context of situation instead of on unrelated circumstances.

The Five Levels of Situational Awareness

Tuned Out. This level leaves us unaware of our surroundings. If you are tuned out from what is around you, make sure you are in a safe environment or are with someone who is paying attention to your surroundings. Military and police use the phrase “watching your six” to refer to watching what might be outside of your active sight (just as the 6:00 hour on a traditional clock would be behind you as you face 12:00).

Relaxed Awareness. You may be in this state in places where you know the people around you and/or there is an established safety protocol for entry. This may include when you are at a friend’s house with several people you know well or at a ticketed secure event.

Focused Awareness. In this level, there is no direct threat around you, but you are entering a space that presents a potential danger. This may include driving under adverse conditions, walking in a city you are unfamiliar with or traveling in a place where a “be on alert” warning has been issued.

High Alert. In this level, there is an active threat or dangerous situation close by. This may include someone approaching you with a potential weapon, an erratic driver who has begun to lose control of their vehicle, or someone entering a previously safe place who begins to threaten those around them. Although it might feel safer to be on high alert all the time to reduce potential negative outcomes, there is a physical, cognitive, and emotional cost associated with being on high alert for a continuous period. Think of a flashlight in a dark environment. Although it may be useful to leave it on the entire time, there should be some consideration for battery life.

Paralysis. Typically, paralysis occurs in the absence of training. Most people are scared and experience paralysis when they first encounter an actively dangerous situation. These situations are often outside of our experiences and comfort zone. The goal of this article is not to remove fear or panic in reaction to a dangerous situation, but rather to learn the correct response until it becomes second nature.

7 Ways to Practice Situational Awareness

- Be mindful. Practice being ‘in the moment’ – when you are cognizant of your surroundings, your senses are all fully engaged.
- Identify exits.
- Watch people without staring.
- Notice nonverbal cues.
- Limit distractions.
- Trust your gut feeling.
- Be strategic.

Situational awareness in your daily lives is a wide-reaching skill that all people with regular opportunities can practice. Not only will it keep you and your family safe, but it will also make them more effective in their daily lives since they’ll be ready and able to notice irregularities that could cause problems. With these tips, you can improve your situational awareness and avoid accidents and slowdowns.

BeAware of People

Most Important – SEE SOMETHING – SAY SOMETHING
94% of Hillel students say being Jewish will continue to be important to them after graduation.

“I am impressed with all that Hillel has accomplished this semester in creating community. It is a joy to work together to make a positive impact on our campus.”
