Our Almost Completely True Story

Monday, June 26 at 7 p.m.

Finding true love in Hollywood has always been challenging; it’s even more difficult when you’re no longer a young starlet, no matter how many movie-star friends you have or how many Gunsmoke episodes you did. And if you’re a short funnyman with a face for radio, well, you can practically forget it. Still, true love can happen. A statuesque Hollywood icon and a Jewish leprechaun might just fall forever-after in love if the stars align just right (and she laughs at his jokes). 92 minutes, English

Jews of the Wild West

Monday, July 10 at 7 p.m.

Widening the historical lens, this documentary focuses on an under-explored aspect of Jewish history: the role that Jews played in Western American expansion, both in real life and in the movies. Through a tapestry of archival footage, photographs, and interviews, Amanda Kinsey’s pioneering film entertainingly excavates the past through the stories of an array of people, from known names like Max Aronson (the real “Bronco Billy Anderson” of early Hollywood) and Levi Strauss, to some you may not have heard about. 83 minutes, English

Cinema Sabaya

Monday, July 17 at 7 p.m.

Israel’s official Oscars entry, Orit Fouks Rotem’s deft and heartfelt debut brings together disparate Arab and Jewish women who learn self-expression through the power of film. Young Tel Aviv–based filmmaker Rona (Dana Ivgy) teaches a documentary workshop to the residents of Hadera. The women, both secular and religious, film their daily activities and routines. At the outset, tempers flare because of cultural misunderstandings, but the students soon form an empowering bond over shared experiences. Nominated for eight Israeli Academy Awards with wins for Best Film, Best Director, and Best Supporting Actress. 91 minutes, Hebrew with English subtitles

Israel Swings for Gold

Monday, July 24 at 7 p.m.

Continuing the underdog sports saga, Israel’s baseball team competes for Olympic gold, facing unexpected bigotry along the way. Comprised of Jews from all over, including Americans, Team Israel’s shared sense of identity unites the blue-and-white squad. Reaching the Olympics in 2021, the players discover a dearth of goodwill the games ostensibly promote. Having overcome Middle East strife on the road to Tokyo, the team gets the cold shoulder from other athletes and death threats from spectators. With no media in the Olympic Village due to COVID restrictions, the athletes are given cameras to record their own experiences. This crowd-pleasing sequel to the 2017 hit Heading Home: The Tale of Team Israel inspires pride and cheers from baseball lovers and non-fans alike. 75 minutes, English

We are the Troopers

Featuring SPECIAL GUESTS

Monday, July 31 at 7 p.m.

We are the Troopers tells the story of the Toledo Troopers, the most successful team in the National Women’s Football League (NWFL). Ohio is the birthplace of the Women’s Professional Football League, and the Toledo Troopers hold the record for the most championship titles in women’s football history. A captivating collage of stories from former players and supporters, We are the Troopers looks back on the crew of strong women who would beat the odds through hard work, perseverance, and love of the game at a time when there were very few female sports opportunities. 96 minutes, English

YOUR GIFTS AT WORK

Do you ever wonder about the impact of your unrestricted JFGT gifts?

In January and February, the community’s Long Term Community Needs Fund made grants that paid for transportation of 27 religious school kids from Temple Shomer Emunim and Congregation B’nai Israel to Cleveland, OH to visit several sites of Jewish importance.

They first toured the Maltz Performing Arts Center (formerly the original Temple-Tifereth Israel), then traveled to the old Jewish neighborhood of Glenville to see former synagogues and the homes of Superman creators Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster.

The group visited the eastern suburbs of Pepper Pike and Beachwood to tour the new Temple-Tifereth Israel synagogue and enjoyed viewing the Andy Warhol painting collection of famous Jews. After lunch, they spent time in the Maltz Museum of Jewish Heritage and, in particular, the “This Light of Ours” Civil Rights special exhibit.

Concluding the day, the kids visited the Willett Street Cemetery, the oldest Jewish cemetery in Cleveland.

JFGT received many beautiful thank you notes from the kids. Grants committee Chair, Mickey Rosenberg, observed, “These notes help make the decision wise and fruitful for all.” Two of the many notes are shared here.

Dear The Jewish Foundation Grant Committee,

I had a lot of fun with all of the activities on the Cleveland trip. My favorite place was the Maltz museum and I was fascinated with the amount of culture in the Cleveland area. I also really liked the terminal and really hope to do this again.

Yours Truly,
Max Gray

Dear Jewish Federation,

Thank you for funding and planning our trip to Jewish Cleveland on March 12, 2023. I learned a lot about our history from the various stops along the way, including the Maltz Museum and the oldest Jewish Cemetery. We also had a good time at the supermarket and the Andy Warhol exhibit. Learning about other influential and famous Jewish figures from history overall, we learned a lot about important Jewish history in Cleveland. Thank you for making this trip happen!

Sincerely,
Mixx Frengarder

Jewish Federation and Foundation of Greater Toledo

JFGT staff participates in emergency training

By Dave Tullis

On Wednesday March 29, 2023, the Jewish Federation & Foundation of Greater Toledo (JFGT) staff participated in mandatory training in topics such as “Active Shooter,” “Stop the Bleed,” and “Crisis Management.” The staff also receives training in CPR/AED every other year.

Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo recognizes the increased active shooter threat and the swiftness with which active shooter incidents unfold and knows that training is vital to our staff to learn what we can do to survive an unprovoked attack. Studies demonstrate significant improvements in employees’ abilities to complete emergency protocols (e.g., success in locking or barricading doors, turning off lights, and escaping) after participating in training. Better awareness equals faster reaction time. Faster reaction time improves chance of survival if it comes down to that.

Active shooter training addresses the threat of an active shooter by providing awareness, preparation, prevention, and response methods. Because active shooter situations are often over within 10 to 15 minutes - before law enforcement arrives on the scene - individuals must be prepared both mentally and physically to deal with an active shooter situation.

An active shooter is an individual who is engaged in killing, or attempting to kill, people in a confined and populated area. Active shooter incidents are often unpredictable and evolve quickly. Amid the chaos, anyone can play an integral role in mitigating the impacts of an active shooter incident.

Organizations, such as businesses or places of worship or education, choose to sponsor active shooter training considering that, as of 2013, 66.9% of active shooter incidents ended before police arrival in the United States.

At Jewish Federation’s Community Asset Safety and Security Manager (CASSM), I confirm that we remain committed to training for better prevention, response, and recovery practices involving active shooter incidents, and we encourage training our staff to be able to assist in life saving methods with “Stop the Bleed” and CPR/AED training.

Even when law enforcement is present or able to respond within minutes, civilians often have to make life and death decisions and, therefore, should be engaged in training and discussions on decisions they may face.

In many cases, there is no pattern or method to the selection of victims by an active shooter, and these situations are by their very nature unpredictable and evolve quickly.

At the hostage situation at a Texas synagogue about a year ago, the rabbi and others credited their previous training with saving their lives.

JFGT staff training was provided by Kevin Steinman of Sylvania Township Police Department (STPD). Sgt. Steinman has been with the STPD since June 2009. While at Sylvania Township, he has served as a Field Training Officer and he holds multiple instructor certifications, including Firearms, Active Threat Response, Rescue Task Force, Critical Injury First Aid, and ALICE.

What Should People Do In Case Of An Active Shooter Attack?

• Run to the nearest exits, making use of available concealment while moving away from the source of hazard.
  • If unable to safely evacuate, hide in a secure area where access can be blocked or entryways can be locked, and, as appropriate, fight.
  • If no rapid escape is possible, seek cover behind any available natural or artificial objects that eliminate direct line of sight from the source of hazard.
  • Call 9-1-1 and remain alert for potential secondary attacks.
  • Render first aid when safe to do so.
  • Maintain situational awareness while aiding others.
  • When help arrives, follow instructions given by law enforcement and first responders.

CPR/AED training helps staff potentially save the life of a person who is experiencing a heart attack or cardiac arrest.

Training in crisis management gives our staff a guideline on what to do in crisis situations, such as severe weather, bomb threats, and suspicious behavior by an unknown person(s).

Getting to know you:
Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo Staff
Deborah Nolan, Financial Analyst Officer

Toledo Jewish News: Can you describe your main responsibilities in your new role?
Deborah Nolan: As Financial Analyst Officer, my main responsibilities are to prepare and analyze monthly financial statements, reconcile cash and investment accounts, and work with the auditors on the IRS Form 990s. In addition, I assist the Controller in preparing for the annual audit and budget. Having a variety of responsibilities makes this role very rewarding.

TJN: What are some of your biggest goals or aspirations for your role?
DN: One of the things that attracted me to work at the Federation is the longevity of so many employees. Everyone is very knowledgeable on the organization’s history and current processes. The Federation has a great work environment where I aspire to learn and grow as a professional and be a resource to other coworkers, as they have supported me in my transition.

TJN: What led you to this type of work?
DN: Math was always my favorite subject. When it came time to select my major in college, accounting was a natural choice. After graduation, I began my career in public accounting, passed the CPA exam, and gained experience in both audit and tax. Since leaving public accounting, I have spent my career at local nonprofits that provide valuable resources and support to the community. I find working for organizations that make a difference very fulfilling.

TJN: What energizes you at work?
DN: I am energized by collaborating and problem solving with my coworkers. I am eager to learn and grow and enjoy working with like-minded people.

TJN: What energizes you outside of work?
DN: Outside of work, I am energized by walking with my husband in one of the Toledo Metroparks. It’s such an amazing way to exercise, enjoy nature, and share our day with each other!

TJN: What is the most unique part about working for JFGT (so far)?
DN: Learning about the value that the organization adds to the lives of persons of all ages in the Jewish community through its many services and activities. There is always something going on!

TJN: What is something a Toledo Jewish News reader may not know about you?
DN: I am a dissectionist. During the pandemic, I became a jigsaw puzzle enthusiast. They are challenging yet help to reduce stress. My favorites are Thomas Kinkade Disney puzzles!

TJN: What is something you saw recently that made you smile?
DN: Watching my three-year-old grandson experience something new makes me smile. Recently, Papa and Gigi (my husband and I) took him sledding for the first time. He was so expressive and wanted to show everyone how excited he was to go down the hill by himself!

TJN: What is the best compliment you have ever received?
DN: I’ve appreciated when people have told me that I am a good listener and easy to talk to. This makes me feel like I have really connected with them.

TJN: What is one of your favorite family traditions?
DN: One of my family favorite traditions is spending summer weekends in Michigan at my dad’s house. My dad has a pool in his backyard that has hosted our family get-togethers since my children were young. I have many cherished memories of my family with my parents and my sister’s family at the pool. Now, we get to watch our grandchildren grow up with the same tradition!

‘An American Tail,’ the classic animated film about Russian-Jewish mice who immigrate to America, is now a musical

By Shira Li Bartov
(JTA) — Itamar Moses was 10 years old when he watched “An American Tail” at his Jewish day school in California. He was struck by the 1986 film, an animated musical about a family of Russian-Jewish mice who immigrate to America. Even though he was surrounded by Jewish classmates and teachers, he had never seen a cartoon with Jewish protagonists.

“Watching this mainstream hit American animated movie where the central character and the central family were specifically Jewish — it was unusual,” Moses told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. “I think there was something that felt inclusive to us about that.”

Now a Tony Award-winning playwright, Moses has adapted the children’s classic for the stage. “An American Tail the Musical” will premiere at the Children’s Theatre Company in Minneapolis on April 25 and run through June 18. Along with writing by Moses, who won his Tony for a Broadway adaptation of the Israeli film “The Band’s Visit,” the new production features familiar songs such as “Somewhere Out There” and new music and lyrics by Michael Mahler and Alan Schmuckler (“Diary of a Wimpy Kid the Musical”). The team hopes to tour the show if it has success in Minneapolis.

The original film created by Don Bluth and Steven Spielberg follows the journey of a young, tenacious mouse named Fievel Mousekewitz. Fievel’s family lives below the human Moskowitz family in Shostka, a city in the Russian Empire, in 1885. Spielberg, who had yet to make “Schindler’s List” or “The Color Purple” promises “there are no cats” and “the streets are paved with cheese.” But a thunderstorm at sea washes Fievel overboard, leaving his devastated parents and sister to arrive in New York City without him. Although they believe he did not survive, Fievel floats to shore in a bottle and sets out to find his family.

Of course, he quickly learns there are cats in America — along with corruption and exploitation. Fievel is sold to a sweatshop by Warren T. Rat, a cat disguised as a rat. A crooked mouse politician called Honest John (a caricature of the real Tammany Hall boss John Kelly) wanders Irish walks, scribbling dead mice’s names in his list of “ghost votes.” But Fievel finds camaraderie with other immigrant mice racing for freedom from the cats’ attacks and Warren T. Rat’s extortion. He befriends Italian mouse Tony and Irish mouse Bridget, who join the quest to reunite his family.

The film’s metaphors will be presented similarly in the stage version, which is also set in the 1880s, although Moses has expanded its lens on the immigrant groups that populated New York at the time. The musical will incorporate more “nice” communities, such as Chinese, Caribbean and Scandinavian mice, along with African Americans and former slaves.

“An American Tail” was part of a shift in mainstream media toward Jewish representation, said Jennifer Caplan, an assistant professor of Judaic Studies at the University of Cincinnati who has studied this cultural change.

“It came out in 1986, and then ‘Seinfeld’ premiered in 1989,” Caplan told the JTA. “People point to 1989 as this moment when representations of Jews changed. There was this feeling in American Tail continued on next page
By Andrew Erensten
(JTA via J. The Jewish News of Northern California) — When the Sacramento Kings face the Golden State Warriors in the first round of the NBA playoffs starting this weekend, they will be led by their Lithuanian-American — and soon-to-be-Jewish — center, Domantas Sabonis.

The 26-year-old All-Star is in the process of converting to Judaism, according to his wife, Shashana Sabonis (née Rosen). “We really haven’t talked about it [publicly],” she said in an interview this week. “He loves [Judaism] and really wants to be a part of it.”

Sabonis regularly studies on Zoom with Rabbi Erez Sherman of Sinai Temple in Los Angeles. Sherman, a Conservative rabbi who hosts the sports podcast “Rabbi on the Sidelines,” told J. that Sabonis is serious about learning more about Judaism.

“After [he had] a triple-double against the Houston Rockets, I get a text from him, ‘Hey, what do we find time to learn? I’m like, you’re for real,’” Sherman said. “He’s always asking questions. He keeps kosher, and when he’s in Vilnius, said. “He’s always asking questions. He keeps kosher, and when he’s in Vilnius, he’s going to the kosher butchers to get chicken.”

While Sabonis is committed to his studies, his wife said, the demands of his job have made it impossible for him to commit to following all of the mitzvos. “He has to fly and he has to do those things, but he’s continuing his learning,” Shashana said. “We keep Passover, we don’t keep Shabbat. We don’t drive, and we do Shabbat dinner every week.”

The couple were married by a Re- form rabbi in August 2021. They have a year-old son named Tiger, and Shasha- na is pregnant with their second child.

They have a close relationship with Rabbi Mendy Cohen of Chabad of Sac- ramento, Shashana said. He put mezuzahs up at their house and recited the Megillah for them on Purim following the Kings game that night. Sabonis at- tended Chabad of Sacramento’s Purim party this year and signed autographs.

In December, he sponsored a subgazi- yot giveaway at a Kings home game.

Shashana, who grew up in Los An- geles and went to Jewish day schools, said her husband appreciates the sup- port he has received from the Jewish community.

“People that follow me [on social media] see how we do the holidays and Shabbat, and I think it’s really fun for the Jewish community to see that rep- resentation in basketball,” she said.

There are two active Jewish players in the NBA and its developmental G League, Deni Avdija of the Washing- ton Wizards and Rony Toyrell of the Motor City Cruise. Former NBA player Amare Stoudemire stepped down last year as a Nets assistant coach after two seasons, citing conflicts with his religious observance. Stoudemire con- verted to Orthodox Judaism in 2020 for being raised in the Hebrew Isra- eli desert.

Sabonis, who is listed at 7-foot-1 and is the son of NBA Hall of Fam- er Arvydas Sabonis, had a breakout season in his second with the Kings, help- ing propel the team back to the playoffs for the first time in 16 seasons and ending the longest postsea- son drought in NBA history.

He led the league in rebounds with 12.3 per game, while averaging 19.1 points per game, and he made his third All-Star team. He was drafted in 2016 and previously played for the Indiana Pacers and Oklahoma City Thunder.

Shashana said her husband is busy pre- paring for the War- riors series, which begins April 15 at Golden 1 Center in Sacramento, and was unavailable for an in- terview.

How does she think the Kings will fare against the defending champion Warriors?

the late ’80s that people were looking for new, different, possibly even more explicit representations of Jews. Yet despite the movie’s resonance with children like Moses, some film critics complained that it wasn’t Jewish enough. Critics Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert noted, “two thumbs down” on a 1986 episode of their program “At the Movies,” calling it “way too de- pressing” for children and arguing that it “chickened out” of an explicitly Jew- ish story. Ebert noted that while most adults would understand the Mouseke- witzes were Jewish, the word “Jewish” never appears in the film, potentially leaving young audiences in the dark.

“This seems to be a Jewish parable that doesn’t want to declare itself,” he said at the time.

Unlike in Art Spiegelman’s graphic novel “Maus,” where Jews are mice and Nazis are cats, the cat-and-mouse meta- phor of “An American Tail” is expan- sive. The cats represent a universal force of oppression — Cossacks in Russia or capitalists in America — while the mice encompass all persecuted immigrants, regardless of their religion, ethnicity or national origin.

Caplan admitted that some might not see it as a Jewish story at the time.

“In 1986, we’re right at the height of the multicultural push in American schools,” said Caplan. “You’ve got kids who are learning about the melting pot. I think if you are not looking for the coded Jewishness and you’re not familiar with it, then this just seems like a movie about immigrants.”

But Moses, who said the movie held a “mystical place” in his imagination, did not view the story’s broad allegory as a shortcut. Instead, he saw an op- portunity to pull its continuous thread for a message he hopes will feel relevant today: that while immigrants discover inequality and injustice in America, the forces of injustice are changeable, and that people can overcome life’s harsh real- ities through “grit and hard work and coming together.”

“That message is always timely, but definitely coming out of the last few years and the conversations that Amer- ica is having about immigration,” said Moses. “I wanted to tell this story that’s really a fable, so you can get at these ideas indirectly as opposed to in a dry, didactic way.”

Jodi Eichler-Levine, a Jewish stud- ies professor at Lehigh University, ar- gued the tale’s success lies in being a “story of Jewish immigration that ap- peals to non-Jews as well” and called the movie a “fairytale about America.” It premiered 30 years ago and earned $82 million at the box office, while averaging 19.1 points per game, and he made his third All-Star team. He was drafted in 2016 and previously played for the Indiana Pacers and Oklahoma City Thunder.

Shashana said her husband is busy pre- paring for the War- riors series, which begins April 15 at Golden 1 Center in Sacramento, and was unavailable for an in- terview.

How does she think the Kings will fare against the defending champion Warriors?

“The Kings are going to win in six games,” she predicted. “We’re a re- ally great team, and everybody is really determined to win.”

Today, another wave of families has fled Fievel’s hometown: though Shostka was part of the Russian Empire in the 19th century, it is now in the Sumy re- gion of northeastern Ukraine. The Sumy Oblast was among the first regions stormed by Russian forces in February 2022 and continues to suffer daily shell- ing. Eichler-Levine expects that global refugee crises will only continue to broaden the appeal of a migration story.

“Those ideas [in An American Tail] are sadly relevant for most of the planet right now, given that climate change and devastation from war are leading to an- other tremendous wave of global migra- tion,” said Eichler-Levine.

Evan Gershkovich, Judy Blume among 10 Jews on Time’s 2023 ‘Most Influential’ list

By Phillisa Cramer

(JTA) — The journalist who was arrested in Russia last month and the Biden administration’s antisemitism envoy are among the 10 Jewish members of Time magazine’s “100 most influential people of 2023.”

The magazine’s annual list, released Thursday, includes politicians, business titans, artists and innovators from around the world, from President Joe Biden to a YouTube sensation with 145 million subscribers. Each entry is accompanied by a short essay by another prominent figure. Here are the Jews who made the cut.

Sam Altman is the tech entrepreneur who is CEO and co-founder of the OpenAI artificial intelligence laboratory. In 2016, the entrepreneur Peter Thiel told the New Yorker that Altman is “culturally very Jewish — an optimist yet a survivalist, with a sense that things can always go deeply wrong, and that there’s no single place in the world where you’re deeply at home.”

Judy Blume is the children’s author whose books deal frankly with puberty and other challenges of growing up. A handful of other people on the show over the course of six years.

Natasha Lyonne is the writer, director and actress whose popular series “Russian Doll,” used sci-fi conventions to explore identity, trauma and the intergenerational effects of the Holocaust. In his Time essay, actor and director Taika Waititi, who is also Jewish, called Lyonne “the coolest person in the room.”

Janet Yellen is the first woman to hold the role of U.S. treasury secretary. The American child of Jewish refugees from the Soviet Union, Gershkovich was the subject of an awareness campaign urged during this month’s Passover celebrations.

Bob Iger returned to being the CEO of Disney last year. “His return as CEO in 2022 ushered in a new era of transformation and creative excellence” for the entertainment company, General Motors CEO and Disney board member Mary Barra wrote in Time. He received the 2019 Humanitarian Award from the Simon Wiesenthal Center, warning that “Hitler would have loved social media.”

Deborah Lipstadt was confirmed by the U.S. Senate in March 2022 as the State Department’s Special Envoy to Monitor and Combat Antisemitism. A well-known academic specializing in the history of antisemitism and Holocaust denial, she welcomed Time’s recognition by tweeting, “Receiving this award advances my ongoing fight to stamp out antisemitism and all forms of hate.”

Netflix’s ‘Rough Diamonds’ brings viewers into the drama of Antwerp’s Orthodox diamond district

By Gabe Friedman

(JTA) — A new drama on Netflix centered on a haredi Orthodox family that runs a business in Antwerp’s famed diamond district hit the platform on Friday and is drawing comparisons to the hit Israeli series “Shitika.”

“Rough Diamonds,” a joint production from Israel’s Keshet International and Belgium’s De Mensen, follows the Wolfson family as it navigates internal tension and business struggles in the wake of a death in the family. The protagonist, who left the haredi world 15 years earlier, returns to Antwerp to look into his relative’s death and help steer the family company back to prominence.

Until the past decade, Antwerp was home to over 80% of the world’s annual uncut diamond trade, and much of it was dominated by haredi Orthodox Jews. The city was home to a large Jewish population for centuries after welcoming many Jews who left Spain and Portugal in the wake of the Inquisition in the 15th century, including many diamond dealers who were barred from working in many other industries. Although the community was decimated by the Holocaust, by 2018 Antwerp was home to at least 20,000 Jews, many of them haredi Orthodox. In recent years, Indian families have assumed control of as much as three-quarters of Antwerp’s diamond industry.

“Rough Diamonds” is mostly filmed in a mix of Flemish and Yiddish, in addition to some French and English. Co-creators Rotem Shamir and Yuval Yefet, who are both Israeli and worked together on the Israeli military thriller “Fauda,” told the Times of Israel that they had to use a “lot of advisers and translators” while working on the show over the course of six years.

“We’re not from an ultra-Orthodox background, and we’re not from Belgian backgrounds... You have to kind of submerge yourself in this world to learn about it” Yefet said.

The show’s lead, Noah Wolfson, is played by Kevin Jansens, a popular non-Jewish TV actor in his native Belgium. About half of the Wolfson family are played by Jews, producer Pieter Van Huyck told the London Jewish Chronicle.

“We want to portray a normal Hasidic family in the most authentic way possible, but, of course, it is a family which is in trouble so it is not a normal situation they are trying to survive,” he said. “It wasn’t easy finding Jewish actors who knew that specific way of living and so we had a mix of Jewish and local Flemish actors and we had quite a few Jewish coaches.”

Jews in New York City’s Diamond District were given the silver-screen spotlight in “Uncut Gems,” a 2019 drama starring Adam Sandler.

“Iconic New York Jewish Food”: So much more than a bagel an’ a schmear

By Mary Bilyeu

Iconic New York Jewish Food: A History and Guide with Recipes, was “a happy book to write,” said history and cookbook author June Hersh of her latest work, just published in February, as during a recent telephone interview.

After surviving a significant bout with Covid during the early stages of the pandemic and then, feeling better, writing about the history of yogurt as she sheltered in place (she joked, “If you can’t sleep at night, grab my book”), this deep dive into the most memorable Big Apple foods “was fun,” she enthused.

Doing research – including all-important taste testing of her subject matter – enabled June to “sample all the foods [and] explore New York City as it was coming back to life.”

But how did she determine which items to include, parsing out those that qualified for the trifecta of descriptors: “Iconic,” “New York,” and “Jewish?”

Iconic: “Food that can survive almost three years of not being able to go inside and eat,” June began, “and yet it’s the foods [people] crave … [Foods that] survive pandemics, they survive low-carb diets. An item that “survives no matter what is happening around it,” she continued, including neighborhood and demographic changes.

For example, “You’re not gonna be able to get rid of a pastrami sandwich,” she pointed out. Or the babka and black-and-white cookies that were essential elements in some episodes of Seinfeld.

New York: “Hot dogs are a New York food,” June asserted. “They’re also a Chicago food,” she clarified, but “its origin was really New York. New York was the center of this commerce that brought these foods from Eastern Europe, from Southern Europe,” she said.

When she “spoke to people on the line at Russ and Daughters [or] at Yonah Schimmel’s” – legendary food purveyors: an appetizing store and a knishery, respectively – she asked what brought those customers there. “Well, this is New York food,” she was told in response: dishes inherent to the city’s culinary scene. Pizza and pretzels are, too, June added; they’re readily identified with the city even though they weren’t created or invented there.

And then there are bagels, of course. Everyone thinks it’s just a legend that the city’s water is integral to the bagels, “but it’s not a myth,” the author insisted. “The Smithsonian verified that the water that runs from the Catskills Mountains picks up minerals that truly infuse our New York City water with that certain something … to create that chew that everyone really associates with a New York City bagel.”

Jewish: “Jewish foods are foods that we identify with Jewish people for a variety of reasons,” June said. “In her book, she refers to a Lenny Bruce commentary reviewing which foods are Jewish – such as pumpernickel bread – and which are goy-ish, i.e.: Kool-Aid.) And they don’t necessarily have to be kosher or follow the dietary laws, she noted, distinguishing between Jewishness and Judaism.

The dishes may be associated with a holiday, he be ones “that Jewish people have prepared for centuries,” or be items tied to a specific place – like New York City’s Lower East Side – with a strong Jewish identity.

But “Jewish food takes you back,” she said. “It’s a thread that runs through the Jewish culture.”

After defining her terms, June’s book then tempts readers with an array of deliciousness that also includes lox and smoked whitefish; corned beef and Reubens, plus tongue and brisket; kasha varnishkes; halvah; chopped liver; matzah ball soup and krepelach; egg creams; and cheesecake.

Many of these foods have traveled across the country and are easy to find in places as far-flung as Los Angeles, Houston, and Toledo despite their origins in New York. Others, though – like bialys – are nearly impossible to get once you’re outside the city.

“Some of the foods,” the author thinks, “just didn’t catch on in the same way. Not every food can translate.”

The biggest surprise June found when researching this book was not, say, that early Dutch settlers had been pickling cucumbers as far back as the 17th century or that bagels may be related to Italian taralli: crispy rings of baked dough.

Instead, it was how interrelated the various groups of immigrants in New York City were.

“I don’t think I realized how the foods … reached a cross-cultural group of people” even 100 years ago, she said. “Not only did the Jewish people pick up non-Jewish traditions and techniques, but it went both ways: For example, the Irish would buy from kosher butchers,” June explained. “I found that fascinating to learn how much sharing of culture took place.”

And “food was the great equalizer among the different immigrant groups,” she added. “When it came to food, that made everyone a New Yorker.”

She wrote Iconic New York Jewish Food, then, to “give the food[s] a time and a place, [to] give an explanation.”

Because ultimately, June said, “Jewishness and food are intertwined. And the intersection of Jewish food and storytelling’ offers the ‘why to the who’ as she refers to it: the reason behind it all.”

“Otherwise,” she concluded, a recipe or a particular food is “just a dish. It has very little meaning.”

In honor of author June Hersh’s personal philosophy to “Eat Well – Do Good,” a portion of the proceeds from sales of Iconic New York Jewish Food (suggested retail price $23.99) will benefit the Met Council in New York City: America’s largest Jewish charity dedicated to fighting poverty while respecting a variety of faith-based dietary needs. “Food is something that is not a privilege, it’s a right,” Ms. Hersh insists. “Anyone who supports this book supports that mission.”

Everything Bagel Scallion Dip (slightly adapted)

“You can use full-fat or low-fat ingredients,” June Hersh writes – “it’s your waistline and decision.” This dip is great served with toasted bagel chips.

1 cup (8 ounces) cream cheese, room temperature
1 cup (8 ounces) sour cream or plain yogurt
1 tablespoon chopped scallion (about 2 small scallions, white and light green parts only)
2-3 tablespoons everything bagel seasoning

Place the cream cheese, sour cream or yogurt in a small bowl and, using a handheld mixer, beat the two together on low speed until fully incorporated and creamy, about 15 seconds. Spoon in your everything seasoning to taste, adding as much or as little as you like (2-3 tablespoons is about right). Add scallions and chill until ready to use.

Mini Pistachio Chocolate Halvah Bites

“Typically, to enjoy fresh halvah, you’d have to visit an appetizing store,” June Hersh writes, “but it’s so easy to make at home … [These] are a sublime sweet nostalgic bite to have with your morning coffee or evening tea.”

¼ cup confectioner’s sugar
½ cup white whole milk powder
½ cup tahini (well stirred)
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
½ cup shelled pistachios, rough chopped
½ cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
24 mini cupcake cups (1.5-inch each)

In a medium bowl, mix together the sugar and milk powder. Pour in the tahini and stir. Add the vanilla and pistachios and stir to combine. It will resemble clumpy sand.

Turn the mixture out on your counter and knead the dough until it comes together, adding a bit more tahini if the mixture is too dry. The dough should resemble Play-Doh when ready.

Melt the chips in the microwave in 20-second intervals, stirring after each until melted, about 60 seconds.

Line a tray with the mini cups and, using a teaspoon, drop the melted chocolate into the bottom of each cup. Tap the tray on the counter to help evenly distribute the melted chocolate.

Roll the halvah dough into 1-inch balls and lightly press into the cups; if the chocolate comes up the side, no worries – it’s a bonus!

Cover and chill 2 hours for soft halvah or 4 hours or overnight for firm. Keep any extra servings in a sealed bag or container in the fridge.
As the school year for many students starts to wind down this month, why not choose this time to instead do the opposite and dive headfirst into your own, personal (and, yes, tech-based!) learning regimen?

The importance of digital literacy, otherwise known as having the means and skills to live, work, and communicate within an increasingly online and information-rich society, is only becoming greater with each passing year.

I encourage you to explore at least one of the links, listed to the right, during this month. See where your curiosity and these tech courses, some basic and others advanced, lead you!

Toledo BBYO has done it all

Over the last few months, B’nai Shalom BBG #407 and BSN AZA #70 activities have been at an all-time high. From travels to Dallas to Havdalah with the Israeli exchange students and attending a regional convention, Toledo BBYO has done it all.

In February, Toledo BBYO was invited to and attended a Havdalah with Israeli foreign exchange students. Esther Goldstein led the Havdalah with an ice cream service. As the Havdalah ended, the fun didn’t stop, as the group ended the night with laser tag and games at Q-Zar.

At the end of February, girls from B’nai Shalom attended BBYO's 99th International Convention in Dallas, Texas. They interacted with Jewish teens from all around the world and made connections through Judaism. They went sightseeing, listened to amazing speakers, experienced a global Havdalah and Shabbat, and even got to meet some famous people!

In March, six members in Toledo made their way to Cleveland for AIT/MIT, a new member convention. This is the most convention attendance Toledo has had in five years! We’re so proud to represent B’nai Shalom and BSN and continue the legacy of alumni and all who came before us.

B'nai Mitzvah

We Honor Our B’nai Mitzvah

Max Shacter Greenblatt, son of Mark and Denise Greenblatt, grandson of Richard and the late Alex Greenblatt of Toledo and Melvin and Diane Ginsberg of Beachwood, will be called to the Torah on Saturday, May 6, 2023. Max currently attends Timberstone Middle School in Sylvania. Max plays hockey, lacrosse, and baseball competitively. While fierce as an athlete, his personality is also extremely compassionate. He is a great friend, loves to volunteer with Gladling Stars, and has chosen to do multiple fundraisers for the Jackson Weis Youth Athletic Achievement Fund as his Bar Mitzvah project. Jackson, Max’s friend and teammate, tragically died when Max was 10 years old. If you want to learn more about the fund, go to www.jacksonweis.com.

Cobin Seymour Katz will be called to the Torah on Saturday, May 20 at Congregation B’nai Israel. Cobin is the son of Christina and Ian Katz and Rebecca and Rich Fetters. He is “Coco” and undisputed brother-of-the-year to his adoring sister, Elle Katz. Cobin has the unwavering love and support of many grandparents, aunts, uncles, and cousins.

Cobin is a seventh grader at Timberstone Junior High, where in addition to being an excellent student, he really enjoys playing sports with his friends as a two-way starter on the Wolves football team and rebounding specialist on the basketball team, all the while being a top alto saxophone player in the Timberstone band. Cobin is a true mensch and his parents receive many unsolicited compliments relaying stories of Cobin’s maturity, leadership, kindness, and selflessness. He loves travelling to visit his many grandparents and enjoys video games, reading, and being with his friends. Cobin loves stylish sneakers and is looking forward to celebrating his bar mitzvah with friends and family.

As a mitzvah project, Cobin will be donating dozens of sneakers to Jewish Senior, Family and Social Services as well as contributing tzedakah to various agencies.

Safety Tips

Dave Tullis, Jewish Federation Community Asset, Safety and Security Manager helps us stay protected with valuable safety tips.

Instructing your children about “Stranger Danger” tips

No doubt, stranger danger tips are an especially important issue that all parents must address—and one that requires ongoing, open communication with their children. You can start talking to your children about strangers as young as two years old. Just remember to keep the conversation age appropriate. At age two, the conversation might only be you talking to your child about the word stranger, and what it means. As your child gets older you can incorporate more information and utilize the tips above, as they become appropriate. And then you can rest a little easier, knowing your child is prepared in case a stranger does approach.

The single most important thing to remember when instructing your children about stranger danger is to instill confidence, rather than fear.

You want to equip your child with the knowledge and strategies they will need to protect themselves in dangerous situations. Also, keep your child’s age and maturity level in mind and base lessons upon that.

Again, stranger danger lessons should be ongoing—adapt the conversation as your child grows as he/she is likely to encounter several types of situations.

WHO ARE “STRANGERS”?

- First, children need to understand what you mean by stranger. Not all people unknown to them are necessarily dangerous—they need to understand the difference between “good” and “bad” strangers; an overly simplistic dichotomy, but one that puts the issue in terms a child can understand.
- This is important so children understand where and to whom to turn if they are ever lost or feel scared, threatened, or if they think someone may be following them.
- Examples of “good” strangers may include police officers, security guards, teachers, store clerks, etc. These are all examples of people to turn to if when your child needs help.
- On the other hand, in many situations where your child may be approached by a “bad” stranger—the park, residential street, etc.—those easily identifiable people may not be around.
- Your child should know that there really are many more “good” people, than “bad.”
- If they are approached by a “bad” stranger who tries to lure or physically pull them away, the best thing they can do is get the attention of other adults—whether that is by running to the nearest home, or making enough noise to be heard by someone, the vast majority of adults will help a child in danger.
- As a parent, the number one thing you want to do is protect your child. The world can be an uncertain place and you want to give your kids the tools to be safe in any situation. The first step for parents of young children is teaching them about strangers and the dangers they pose.

BEGINNING STEPS: START A CONVERSATION

- The first thing to do is to start a conversation about strangers with your child when you’re both in good moods—this means everyone is well-rested and calm, and not hungry or cranky. Start by asking your child what he or she knows about strangers and listen to your child’s response.
- Then, define stranger for your child, keeping it simple and non-threatening.

Most of the time it’s enough to say “a stranger is someone you don’t know.” If you’re in public, you can point out a few people that are strangers—people that you don’t know.

- Next, remind your kids that strangers can look scary, but they can also be pretty and kind and happy. Not every stranger is friendly though; sometimes strangers will try to hurt little kids. No matter how a stranger looks, it’s important to be cautious when meeting new people.
- There are “safe strangers.” Even though you may not know them, police officers, firefighters and teachers are considered safe strangers.
- When you’re out with your children at the grocery store or the library, use these teachable moments. Point out strangers and talk to them about suspicious behavior. Remind your children that an adult will never ask a child for help.

NEXT STEPS: TEACH YOUR CHILDREN HOW TO REACT

- Once your child understands what strangers are and why they can be dangerous, move on to what your child should do if a stranger approaches. Teach your child how to react if they are uncomfortable with a stranger.
- Walk away and find you or another adult they know.
- Yell “No! Go away!” loudly.
- Rehearse possible stranger situations with your kids. Have fun with role playing, as a family, so your kids know exactly what to say and do in the moment.
- Have a code word or phrase with your kids, so that if someone they do not know well approaches them, the adult can use the code word so your children know it is safe. Make sure the code word is unique, but not too hard for them to remember.
- Lastly, create a “safe list” of trusted people your children can call or turn to in the event you are not available. This can include grandparents, aunts and uncles, older cousins, the parents of your kids’ friends, neighbors, and teachers.

STUDENT SAFETY TIPS:

- Considering suspicious activity in neighboring school districts, please review the following safety tips with your children.

- Do not talk to strangers.
- Do not take anything from strangers.
- Do not go anywhere with someone you do not know.
- Stay more than an arm’s reach from strangers. If you are approached by a stranger, seek help immediately.
- Trust your instincts, if you feel you are being followed or something is not right, seek help immediately.
- Use the buddy system, avoid walking anywhere alone.
- Review contact telephone numbers and home safety practices.
- When seeking help, always go to a trusted adult—teacher, coach, police officer, other parent, or older siblings.
- If a stranger grabs you, do everything you can to stop him or her from pulling you away. Drop to the ground, kick, hit, bite, and scream. Do whatever it takes to attract the attention of others who can help you. If someone is dragging you away, scream, “this is not my dad,” or “this is not my mom.”
- Report any suspicious activity to your local school and police department.

An Israel Journey of a Lifetime
November 6-14, 2023

Join us on the first Jewish Toledo community-wide mission to Israel in 17 years!
Community and Jewish heritage are the background for an Israel opportunity as you’ve never experienced before. Experience the rich history, breathtaking scenery and sacred places where ancient civilizations once thrived and where the Jewish future is being written.

The beginning of the Jewish State and the start of your Israel discovery:
From the most upbeat neighborhood of Florentine to the 4,000 year old city of Jaffa, Tel Aviv thrives with world-class arts and culture.

Your Tel Aviv experience includes:
A special Street Art Night tour of some of Tel Aviv’s most “hip” neighborhoods; walking tour of the fashionable Neve Tzedek; a visit to Rabin Square to learn about Yitzhak Rabin’s life, leadership, and tragic death; a tour of the ANU Museum of the Jewish People at Tel Aviv University.

No other place like it in our world, Jerusalem is a breathtaking focal point for religion, culture and history.

Your Jerusalem experience includes:
The holiest place in Judaism today, the Western Wall – Kotel and a tour of the subterranean spaces under the Western Wall Tunnels; a walk through the Jewish Quarter of Jerusalem’s Old City; a tour through the halls of the new Supreme Court; a stop at the Knesset; a shopping stop at Machane Yehuda Market (Shuk) and a special tasting menu from select stands; a tour of Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial and Museum on the 85th commemoration of Kristallnacht, the Night of Broken Glass; and a Shabbat of a Lifetime experience at the home of a local family where you’ll enjoy a home-cooked Friday night dinner.

When it comes to nature, Israel has it all. The country itself may be small but what it lacks in area it makes up for in diverse, beautiful scenery.

Visit a winery for a tour and wine tasting; ascend up to Masada by cable car and tour the famous ancient fortress built by King Herod; enjoy floating in the therapeutic waters of the mineral rich Dead Sea; buckle in to a Jeep tour in the mountains of the Golan Heights passed abandoned Syrian military bunkers.

Art to science, medicine to geopolitics, Israel’s Western Galilee boasts vital national resources, lifesaving medicine, and cultural treasures.

Beyond our Partnership region, Israel’s northern frontier awaits.
Tour the Galilee Medical Center in Nahariya, including the underground hospital built with the recipients of life-changing programs fueled by our Federation’s Community Campaign dollars; explore the historic alleyways of Akko; celebrate Israel at 75 and our Partnership relationship at 25 with a Partnership2gether Mega Event with local Israelis, including friends who have visited Toledo such as participants of the Women Leading a Dialogue program; visit the mystical city of Tzfat and stroll the narrow, winding alleys; visit some of the beautiful synagogues and browse through the artists’ workshops and galleries; partake in a geopolitical tour at Kunetra Outlook and Mt. Bental to view the Syrian border and learn about the challenges facing Israel with the Syrian Civil War.

Prepare to be awestruck at the old city of Jaffa, the Galilee, Jerusalem and the Old City. You’ll visit the holiest site in Judaism, the Western Wall, and tour the Israel Museum and view the Dead Sea Scrolls. You’ll get an up-close view of the center of Israeli government – the Knesset. Your trip-of-a-lifetime includes swimming in the therapeutic waters of the Dead Sea, exploring Jerusalem’s bustling Machane Yehuda Market, ascending Masada by cable car, and so much more! And when it’s time for you to rest and recharge, you’ll do it at hotels in the heart of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem and at a “kibbutz experience” boutique hotel in the Western Galilee.

To learn more, please visit www.jewishtoledo.org/mission or contact Daniel Pearlman at daniel@jewishtoledo.org

Jewish Federation and Foundation of Greater Toledo is generously subsidizing the cost of this mission.
There were no dissents from Jewish Toledo while enjoying dinner and a show. The experience included a delicious meal at Georgio’s Café International followed by an inspirational and uplifting one-woman play at The Valentine featuring Michelle Azar as the incomparable RBG in All Things Equal - The Life & Trials of Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

A recent senior program was centered on centerpieces with help from downtown Sylvania business, Beautiful Blooms by Jen. Some of our favorite ladies came together in preparation of Passover to create bouquets fit for any type of seder.
From May 1-5, Hillel419 is joining forces with Hillels around the world for the fourth annual #HillelGlobalGivingWeek!

Gifts to Hillel419 this week will be tripled thanks to Joel and Linda Beren and Hillel International!
