The Trial of FDR is a live docudrama stage play dramatizing the controversy surrounding the voyage of the SS St. Louis, a ship carrying 937 Jewish refugees fleeing Nazi Germany motivated by the ever-increasing Nazi campaign against the Jews culminating in the events of Kristallnacht. The ship was turned away first by Cuba and then by the U.S., thus forced to return to Europe where ultimately over 200 of its passengers perished in the Holocaust. This play considers the terrible impact of the decision to deny asylum to these desperate refugees. It is written and directed by Robert M. Krakow, an attorney, playwright, and documentarian.

Kristallnacht – the Night of Broken Glass – commemorates when Nazis rampaged throughout Germany destroying synagogues, murdering over 100 innocent people, vandalizing Jewish businesses, and seizing 30,000 Jewish men who were taken to concentration camps, with little or no response from the world, demonstrating to Hitler that he was free to proceed with his nefarious plans against the Jewish people. The Roosevelt Administration's handling of the Holocaust Jewish refugee issue has been a hotly debated topic for decades. No single event has had more influence on this debate than the ill-fated Voyage of the SS St. Louis. This unique docudrama puts President Roosevelt on trial for the decision to refuse US entry to the asylum-seeking passengers.

A live docudrama presentation about the voyage of the SS St. Louis and FDR's decision to refuse it asylum in the US.

Co-sponsored by Jewish Federation and Foundation of Greater Toledo, Ruth Fajerman Markowicz Holocaust Resource Center, the University of Toledo Roger Ray Institute for the Humanities, and the College of Arts and Letters.

On behalf of the professional team of the Jewish Federation and Foundation of Greater Toledo and our lay leaders, we add our prayers and hope that our entire community is inscribed and sealed in the Book of Life for a year of good health, happiness, prosperity, and peace.

Lenny passed away at home in May 2022 from cancer. Born February 13, 1953, to Sam and Jean Rosenberg, Lenny grew up in Old Orchard and attended Old Orchard Elementary School, DeVilbiss High School, and The University of Toledo. He was preceded in death by his parents and his brother, Murry. A skilled swimmer, Lenny swam competitively from the age of five, excelling in butterfly and freestyle and setting many pool records with over 500 first place wins. He placed third in the butterfly in the State of Ohio for DeVilbiss High School’s swim team in 1970 and ended his career with Glass City Aquatic Club, ranking in the top 20 in the United States in the National YMCA championship meet in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. In 1975, Lenny and Murry purchased Toledo Academy of Beauty Culture on St. Clair Street in downtown Toledo. In 1993, Lenny (with longtime friend and employee “Miss Georgia”) bought out Murry so he could pursue other interests and continued to operate the school until the last one was sold in 2019, culminating a 43-year career.

“Lenny was a charming, gentle, and delightful human being who was obviously charitably inclined,” said his cousin, Mickey Rosenberg. “Healthwise, he had a very difficult life, having suffered from cancer at approximately age 20. He had multiple surgeries as a result of the cancer and his radiation treatments caused damage to his kidneys; he suffered from issues the balance of his life. He never complained about those issues, simply continued to work through those difficulties and built a lovely business with his brother, Murry… Len was a genuine mensch. He had very long-term friendships with people, even from elementary school, who still live in Toledo as well as many professional people and people from all walks of life. He was not someone who you could pigeonhole. He was a kindhearted soul. I think the endowment is a reflection of who he truly was.”

Lenny lovingly prepared much of his own obituary, expressing his affection and gratitude for those who cared for him across many decades. “To my best friend, Jim Anderson: We had a wonderful relationship since fifth grade. Many, many laughs and good times along the way. You are everything a good friend possesses, kind, caring, thoughtful, respectful, honest, and supportive. In Jewish, we call this a “mensch,” a person of the highest integrity and honor. Stay well my friend.”

Anderson shared that his 60-year friendship with Lenny began with their mutual love of swimming and blossomed once they became fifth grade classmates at Old Orchard Elementary School. “I’m a good swimmer. He was a great swimmer,” Anderson said. As adults, “we would go on great vacations every winter. That was our friendship. He was a great friend. He would call on every birthday and I would call him on his.”

Anderson, also Lenny’s lawyer, explained that his best friend’s charitable legacy also includes sizable donations to Toledo Humane Society, Metroparks Toledo, Lucas County Canine Care & Control, The University of Toledo Department of Accounting (in honor of his father, Sam Rosenberg), the City of Toledo swimming services, and more. “If I’m a mensch, he’s a super mensch,” he stated. “He was all about his family, his friends, and his faith, that was Lenny. He was a serious believer, and he wanted to leave a mark.”

Lenny’s cousin, Mitzi Schuller, added, “Whenever I have had difficult times in my life, Lenny has always been there for me. He has talked me off the ledge and made me laugh harder than anyone I’ve ever known since we were kids… It was Lenny that accompanied my daughters to every father/daughter event after their dad died. It was Lenny that came to [Pamela Schuller’s] boarding school parent’s weekend in Burlington Vermont every year, and it was Lenny that walked my daughter Dana down the aisle. [He has] quietly [been] a mensch for our family all these years…”

“He was one of the finest men I have ever known in my life and always so humble and quick to laugh at himself. Our hearts are broken that he is gone, but we are taking solace in knowing that his gifts to the community will continue his legacy for so many years to come…”

Pamela Schuller further noted, “From parents’ weekends at our boarding school in Vermont to our hour-long phone calls every three weeks - where Uncle Lenny always reminded me to get enough sleep, eat a good meal, take some time off, and call him when I got wherever I was going… All our calls included a lot of advice from him. I loved those calls, and I have learned so much from them. Uncle Lenny was funny. Like, had me laughing out loud funny…”

“Lenny always took the time to hear how somebody’s day was going. Not just his family, literally everyone. Lenny gave to a lot to great causes and organizations he cared about, he volunteered with animals and always took in the stray animals he found; after [our cat, Jerry Richard] was found as a stray, Lenny made sure we fell in love with that cat and took him home. He loved his dogs so much and his cat Simcha and honestly, every animal he met. Especially ones who had had a hard beginning; he loved a good underdog story.”

In his final written words, Lenny conveyed his love for many of his furry friends (Whippets, Diamond Jim, Penn Dragon, Shayna Punim, and Simcha).

“Hey kids, get ready, as your dad has crossed the ‘Pet Rainbow Bridge’ with all your favorite toys and treats. Can’t wait to be all together again. And to my beloved cat, Simcha, I’m so sorry to leave you so soon. I loved you dearly.”

Editor’s note: Jim Anderson, Lenny Rosenberg’s best friend and lawyer, has confirmed that a new home has been found for Simcha.

18 Israeli women are coming to Toledo – and we need your help!

Women Leading a Dialogue is a Partnership2Gether-sponsored dialogue group for Arab and Jewish women from Israel’s Western Galilee. With the help of a professional facilitator, these women, ages 30-55, discuss mutual issues pertaining to their lives. They get to know each other, go on field trips, and celebrate special holidays together, like Ramadan, The New Year, and Passover. While strengthening their bonds, they also enhance their leadership and project building skills.

Toledo is fortunate to have been selected as the first stop on their American tour. The women will be in town November 6-9, 2022.

The Jewish Federation is looking for community members who are willing to host groups of two or more Israeli women at their homes and to provide them with breakfast each morning. At least one woman in the group would be Jewish and at least one woman would be Arab. The women can share a room, but they will need their own beds for sleeping.

If you are interested in hosting two or more Israelis, please contact sherry@jewishtoledo.org or call 419-724-0351.

To respect everyone’s customs, we ask that hosts do not provide dairy and meat together, pork, or alcohol.

In late August, the Jewish Community Relations Council (JCRC) hosted individual meetings with Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur and with J.R. Majewski, who are both running for Congress.

The newly redistricted 9th Congressional District includes all of Lucas County, a slice of northern Wood County, as well as several counties to our west and east. As such, it includes all of the Jewish institutions in Greater Toledo: the Jewish Federation, Temple Shomer Emunim, Congregation B’nai Israel, Congregation Etz Chayim, Toledo Hillel, Chabad, and all of the Jewish cemeteries. This district will last for one term (two years), at which point a new map will be drawn.

At the meeting, candidates and attendees discussed rising antisemitism, community safety and security gaps, Toledo-Israel partnerships, the Abraham Accords, Jewish Federations’ support for Ukraine, and more. Over 20 lay and professional Jewish community leaders attended these private meetings.

If you would like to learn more, please contact Daniel Pearlman, JCRC Director, at daniel@jewishtoledo.org.

The sky's no limit for this Jewish 14-year-old who broke a national high jump record

By Tom Tugend

LOS ANGELES (JTA) — JJ Harel, newly 14 years old and standing at 6-foot-2, expects to face some tough competition when the Olympics return to Los Angeles in 2028 and the starting pistol for the track and field events sounds off.

But his first decision will be whether to march into the Olympic stadium under the American, Australian or Israeli flag.

In any other family, such musings would be taken as the fantasies of an over-stimulated adolescent mind. However, to skeptics JJ need only unveil the array of 27 international medals he won over the past year as a 13-year-old, including at the Maccabiah Games in Israel, where he placed first in high jump and second in triple jump in the under-18 category after needing to receive special permission to participate since he was underage.

Then there's the record-breaking high jump that earned him a profile in the Los Angeles Times this week.

Last month, Harel participated in the American Athletic Union (AAU) Junior Olympics, one of the largest youth track and field competitions in the world, where he won three gold medals and cleared 6 feet and 5 inches in the high jump — breaking a record for the 14-and-under age group that had stood for 42 years (he was still 13 at the time). Harel won gold in the triple jump and javelin as well, and he was the only athlete to achieve All American status in five events, a title awarded to only the top eight athletes in the country for each event.

JJ (Joshua Jayden) inherited his triple citizenship through his father, Oren, 47, born in Houston, and his mother Lucy, a native Australian. Oren Harel spent his formative years in Israel and served in the Israel Defense Forces, afterwards attending Cornell, where he met Lucy who was participating in an exchange program from Sydney University. After two years in Manhattan, and following Sept. 11, the couple moved to Sydney for 10 years, where all three of their children were born. They relocated as a family to Israel for two years before moving to Los Angeles in 2013.

JJ is now a freshman at the Catholic Chaminade High School in the Los Angeles suburb of West Hills. When asked why his parents didn’t place their son in a public or Jewish school, Harel replied that Chaminade, noted for its outstanding sports program, offered a high level of track training, while Jewish schools offered none. However, his father consulted with school authorities beforehand to make certain that his son would not be compelled to participate in Catholic morning services.

JJ said that his being Jewish never comes up — even though he occasionally wears a Star of David necklace and does not eat non-kosher types of meat (like his father, he will eat non-kosher beef and other things in certain situations, but never pork).

When he was too young to know the names of non-Jewish faiths, and when he wanted to know whether another kid was Jewish like him, JJ would ask “are you Jewish or are you pork?”

JJ seems to be as focused on his academic studies as he is on his athletic pursuits, as the only freshman in his current school taking pre-calculus mathematics. Oren Harel noted that JJ’s grandfather worked for NASA for about 20 years starting in the early 1970s, contributing research to the Voyager 2 and Galileo space exploration projects.

“Sometimes I say I joke when people ask me about [JJ’s] ability: I tell them his grandfather worked for NASA, maybe that’s how he learned the secret on how to defy gravity,” Oren Harel said.

Pulitzer and Tony Awards winning author, Tony Kushner, interviewed at University of Toledo event.

Tony Kushner - Pulitzer Prize and Tony-winning playwright, author, and Oscar-nominated screenwriter of “Angels in America,” “Lincoln,” and “West Side Story” — appeared at The University of Toledo’s (UT) Annual Edward Shapiro Distinguished Lecture last month. In a moderated conversation, he discussed growing up Jewish in Louisiana, some of his most celebrated works, his views on the future of democracy, and his working relationships with notable figures such as Steven Spielberg, Stephen Sondheim, and Daniel Day Lewis.

Kushner is perhaps best known for “Angels in America: A Gay Fantasia on National Themes,” his two-part epic about the HIV-AIDS epidemic in the late 1980s which received the Pulitzer Prize for Drama and Tony Awards for Best Play in 1993 and 1994. He also received a Spirit of Justice Award from the Gay and Lesbian Advocates and Defenders and a Cultural Achievement Award from the National Foundation for Jewish Culture.

The annual lecture at UT is made possible by the Shapiro endowment left by Dr. Edward Shapiro, professor emeritus of economics who retired in 1989, to provide opportunities for the University to bring world-renowned speakers to Toledo. Past Shapiro Distinguished Lecture speakers include Elie Wiesel, Toni Morrison, Audra McDonald and Robert F. Kennedy Jr.

Partnership2Gether Summit in Budapest Brings Together Americans, Israelis, and Hungarians

Last month, Jewish Toledoans Deborah Orloff, Fagie Benstein, Halle Fried, and Daniel Pearlman attended a Partnership2Gether Summit in Budapest, Hungary with almost 90 participants from 3 countries. Below is a summary written by Daniel.

Partnership2Gether (P2G) is a program of the Jewish Agency for Israel and Jewish Federations of North America that connects American Jewish communities with communities in Israel and Europe. Jewish Toledo is part of a consortium of 17 American communities that are paired with the city of Akko and the regional council of Matte Asher in Israel's Western Galilee region. Together, we are also paired with the Jewish community of Budapest, Hungary.

P2G promotes people-to-people relationships through cultural, educational, social, medical, and economic programs. Our Partnership consortium offers committees, youth leadership programs, school twinning connections, women's empowerment programs, and so much more. In total, there are over 40 pairings between American and Israeli communities.

Art and Associate Chair of the Department of Art at the University of Toledo, presented her photography project, and there was an exhibit opening.

On the fourth day, we had more educational sessions about Partnership, this time focusing on shared society organizations working to bring Jewish-and Arab residents of our Partnership region together. One of the presenters of this program was Mirit Sulema from the Akko Educators' Kibbutz, which I had visited the week prior. We ate lunch at a different Kosher restaurant before touring the Jewish day school and the Jewish hospital – the only Jewish hospital in Europe – which just opened a new wing. Our final dinner together was joined by the Israeli Ambassador to Hungary, H.E. Yacov Hasid, Handelman, and other dignitaries.

Our last day included a visit to the Obuda Synagogue and some bittersweet goodbyes to new and old friends alike.

Reflecting on this Summit, I have a few takeaways. First, the ties of Jewish Peoplehood are stronger than national borders or the oceans separating us. Despite our different passports, we were all passionate about connecting Jews in America, Israel, and Hungary. Second, Budapest is a fascinating city filled with lots of history, culture, and excellent food.

The inside of Budapest's Jewish day school

But what was, to me, perhaps the most meaningful aspect of this Summit was experiencing Jewish life in Hungary today. Jewish life in Europe is not “dead” as I’ve heard people claim before. The Holocaust did unimaginable damage to the continent that once had the largest Jewish community in the world. And rising antisemitism across Europe is leading to more Jewish emigration from Europe. But the claim that Jewish life no longer exists in Europe, or that it is small and weak, cannot be further from the truth. Budapest has over a dozen active synagogues, an Israeli Cultural Institute, two Kosher restaurants, a Jewish day school, and the only Jewish hospital in Europe. Hungary also has its own Jewish denomination called Neolog, which in American terms is perhaps most like the Conservative Movement but is distinct in many ways. Budapest is not necessarily representative of Jewish life in Europe, but it would be disingenuous to conflate the situation of Jews in France with those in Hungary.

Partnership2Gether helps bring people together to highlight our similarities and celebrate our differences. When people meet one another, they learn more about them and dispel any stereotypes or misconceptions about them. This trip was educational for me, as it helped teach me about a thriving Jewish community in Europe and about how Jewish Americans and Israelis in the Western Galilee continue to prioritize building relationships with one another and with other Jewish communities around the world.

You can visit our Partnership region of Akko and Matte Asher in Israel's Western Galilee by participating in the Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo's November 2023 Community Mission to Israel! On this nine-day mission, we will visit Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, the south, and the north of Israel. To learn more, please complete a short interest form at form.jotform.com/jewishtoledo/mission. A renovated synagogue in Budapest

On the first day of the Summit, we visited the Budapest Jewish University and met with professors for an introduction to Jewish life in Hungary. We then went on an interesting walking tour of some major historical sites including the "Shoes on the Danube" memorial honoring the Jews who were massacred by Fascist Hungarian militia belonging to the Arrow Cross Party in Budapest during World War II. We ended the day with a concert at the Israel Cultural Institute (ICI).

On the second day, we had a walking tour of the Jewish District of Budapest led by fantastic tour guides who taught us about the rich and long Jewish history of the city. We visited a few synagogues including the Dobháry Street Synagogue, the largest synagogue in Europe and the third-largest in the world. We ate at the Mazal Tow Restaurant and had educational sessions about Partnership2Gether with a group of nine American, Israeli, and Hungarian artists who collaborate in a Partnership program called Create2Gether. Recent visit highlights Jewish Toledo’s impact on underprivileged in Israel

On September 5, I visited Kfar Silver, a youth village and school run by ORT in Israel’s south. Kfar Silver is spread out over significant land and looks almost like an American liberal arts college campus combined with a farm. There are over 1,000 students enrolled in junior high and high school; 260 students live in dorms and the rest attend for the day. Of the other youth villages in Israel, most of the students at Kfar Silver are considered “at-risk.” Some have behavioral or psychological issues, and many are from low socioeconomic backgrounds. This school provides necessary services and a quality education to these students who would otherwise struggle in a conventional school environment.

I met with Amos, the CEO of the village, who came to this position in 2019 after 25 years serving in the Israel Defense Forces (IDF), and Monique, who works in international donor relations. They presented me with an introduction to the village before taking me in a golf cart on a personal tour of campus. We spoke with some students, saw the academic buildings and sports fields that were funded by donors, and more. Despite coming from an important position in the IDF, Amos explained that running a village kept him busier and can often be more stressful. But he is doing a phenomenal job. Upon ORT’s takeover of the school from the Zionist Organization of America (ZOA) in 2016 and Amos’ creative vision, the school has almost doubled its enrollment while graduation rates increased from 74% to 95%.

Kfar Silver is a public school, so students follow the normal Ministry of Education curriculum. But Kfar Silver also offers more courses and opportunities than a normal school can provide, thanks in part to receiving allocations from the schools. The school encourages students to choose two or three “tracks” to follow throughout their high school career, to learn how to specialize in what they are passionate about. There are 12 chosen majors, ranging from various languages (in addition to English, which is required for all), to sports, to chemistry, and more. Being in a rural setting, they also have a working farm with animals and greenhouses, all for educational purposes. They are becoming solar-powered and plastic-free. They have a pool, a sports center, a soccer team, and more. But perhaps the most unique part of the village is their therapeutic animal center. They have turtles, rabbits, small horses, a camel, an emu, donkeys, various birds, snakes, lizards, and more to help students improve their mental health. In the future, they want to build bee and ant shelters and a greenhouse for birds to use for educational purposes.

There is a strong sense of community at this school and the students are in great care. Students represent the diversity of Israeli society – Jews, Christians, Muslims, and more – and all religious holidays are celebrated. They also have 23 students from Ukraine who have enrolled since the war began. I left feeling amazed by the quality of this OST school and touched by the power of our campaign contributions.

Amos, Daniel, and Monique Kfar Silver

On September 6, I visited JDC-Israel (the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, sometimes called “the Joint”) in Jerusalem, where I met Avigail Benstein, the granddaughter-in-law of Fagie Benstein. Avigail planned an incredible day highlighting the amazing work of JDC-Israel. Outside of Israel, JDC provides essential humanitarian assistance for Jewish communities in 70 countries around the world, and they have existed for over 100 years, well before Israel was established in 1948. JDC, along with the Jewish Agency for Israel, are two of the Jewish Federations’ major international partner organizations. But inside of Israel, JDC operates very differently.

JDC-Israel works as an innovation hub to test out creative pilot programs that can help ensure that Israel’s most vulnerable residents are cared for and supported. If these programs are successful, they are integrated into services provided by the government of Israel and implemented on a national scale. JDC-Israel works with all sectors of Israeli society: the elderly, youth at risk, people with all types of disabilities, and more. They even operate a leadership development program for public sector employees to solve systemic challenges. The department that Avigail works in, organizational development, or “JFGT support,” which helps to solve the challenges incorporating certain populations into the Israeli workforce.

Our first meeting of the day was with three rabbis who lead the largest Haredi (ultra-Orthodox) Jewish charity and social services organization, called a Kupah, in a neighborhood of Jerusalem that has 40,000 people. Roughly half of all Haredi families in Israel live below the poverty line, and many more are just above the poverty line but are still struggling financially. JDC-Israel partners with this organization and many others in a pilot program funded in part by JFGT campaign contributions called Durek Eretz, which seeks to add a new model to the traditional way that tzedakah (charity) is given in the Haredi community. We first discussed what welfare generally looks like at these types of organizations. When a family comes to a Kupah and asks for money, they are first given sensory items that they otherwise cannot afford (for food, utility payments, rent, etc.). The Kupah will give each family 1,000 to 1,500 shekels (roughly $300-$500). At this specific Kupah, there are 200 families that receive this non-governmental welfare every week, and even more before Jewish holidays. Some of these recipients also receive government assistance, depending on their needs. When you consider that the average Haredi family in Israel has six to seven children, these 200 families mean that around 2,000 people are supported by this Kupah each week, and there are 250 of these types of Kupat nationwide doing similar work.

The problem with this typical structure is that it “gives a man a fish” rather than “teaches a man to fish.” There is a waiting list to receive this welfare assistance, demonstrating the need for finding creative solutions. So JDC-Israel’s Durek Eretz pilot program partners with select Kupat organizations to add a coordinator position embedded into the Kupah. This coordinator is responsible for assessing the needs of every new client to determine what, if anything, they can do to improve their financial situation. They help people learn time management, budgeting, and more. They also help them market what they can offer to others. Often, they both “give” and “teach” fishing at the same time. One woman needed 2,000 shekels to enroll in a course to help her improve her trade. As a result of the woman receiving 2,000 shekels from this program, she most recently made a profit of 9,325 shekels in one day. Now, she no longer needs welfare support and is so happy to be able to support herself.

Of course, not everyone who requests assistance will be able to improve their financial situation due to their health, mental health, or other factors, so this pilot program is not meant to replace traditional tzedakah. Instead, it is meant to complement it. This partnership hopes to help everyone who comes through their door in a way that works best for them, regardless of their needs or personal situation. On top of “giving” and “teaching,” a man to fish, they also work on preventing people from needing assistance in the first place, by proactively offering financial literacy support classes and other resources to Haredi families.

Next, I went to the JDC-Israel office to discuss some of the chronic issues in Israel that affect employment in general, but especially in certain populations: Arab-Israelis, Haredim, people with disabilities, Ethiopian-Israelis, people who live in the periphery regions (north and south, including our Western Galilee Partnership region), and those with low income. My last meeting was with Saxe, an Arab-Israeli who specializes in programs that seek to raise levels of Arab employment. Arab-Israelis make up 21% of Israel’s population, but many are struggling to obtain quality employment for various reasons. After high school, Jewish-Israelis go to the army or do national service, which gives them connections, skills, and references to help them get better jobs after attending university. Arab-Israelis, meanwhile, do not do any of those activities and thus are often unemployed, under-employed (working fewer hours than they want to), or have menial jobs. Combined with the unfamiliarity of the dominant Jewish-Israeli culture and a lack of suitable Hebrew, it creates a cycle that is hard to break.
I left with a greater understanding of the challenges facing Israel’s most vulnerable populations but with a renewed sense of appreciation for organizations like JDC-Israel that are working hard to create lasting positive change.

On September 7, I visited our Partnership region. I started the day meeting with Heidi Benish and Tanja Rosen from Partnership at the Ghetto Fight- ers’ Museum. Created in 1949, it was the first Holocaust museum in the world and was founded by fighters of the War-saw Ghetto Uprising.

I then met with Mirit Sulema from Dror Israel’s Akko Educators’ Kibbutz. The Akko Educators’ Kibbutz, part of a national movement called Dror Israel, is a group of young educators living in Israel’s most mixed city trying to instill leadership skills to people of all backgrounds, turning Akko from a mixed city to a shared city where people choose to live near one another. Unlike a traditional kibbutz, this cultural community, the Akko Educators’ Kibbutz is an urban kibbutz. Members of the kibbutz live in a building in one of Akko’s poorer neighborhoods and work in educational and cultural programming for the community. The first floor of the kibbutz building has classrooms for activities for youth and elderly populations they work with, while the upper floors are shared apart- ments for kibbutz members.

We started with a tour of Akko with Tamir, another member of Dror Israel and Mirit’s son. We walked to the top of the Old City walls for a view of most of the city (new and old) and discussed the fascinating past and present of Akko. Then, we went to the newer part of the city to walk along the coastal promenade and visit two extremely diverse, poorer neighborhoods. We discussed the issues from the past that continue to impact the issues of the present, and we walked along a much-loved pedestrian and bicycle path that connects these two neighborhoods. Along this path, which connects Haredi Jews, Arabs, and secular Jews who all call these neighborhoods home, the Akko Educators’ Kibbutz runs a bike repair stand that brings these groups together to work together to find solutions to mutual problems.

Next to this path is a beautiful com- munity garden that another kibbutz member, Noam, helps to run. They are growing over a dozen types of organic vegetables in this community garden. We met with community volunteers who want to be con- tributing members of society. Most do not speak Hebrew fluently, even though many immigrated 20-30 years ago from the former Soviet Union. Igor, an immigrant from Russia who, along with other FSU Olim (immigrants) are also active in the program that JGFT helps fund, Chofesh Bitui (“Free Will Expression”), which edu- cates Hebrew instruction and meaning- ful social opportunities for these lonely and elderly community members who otherwise do not feel a part of greater society.

I learned about a Hanukkah program that these elderly Russian and Ukraini- an Olim ran for a local kindergarten, complete with foods that they made for the children and a skit they performed in Hebrew. Seeing the smiles on the faces of these children did so much to instill confidence, joy, and meaning in these elderly immigrants. Also, the Chofesh Bitui program participants created self-portraits using materials significant to each of them and then discussed with the other participants, in Hebrew, their personal life stories and the stories of their families and the places that they are from. These stories were then translated into Arabic and hung up (in Hebrew and Arabic) in public places around the city, such as outside of the community garden, so that all residents (Jews and Arabs, religious and secular, young and old) can learn more about their neighbors. The Chofesh Bitui participants also go on educational trips together outside of the city where they can see how immigration from Ukraine and Russia, but at this school specifically, the populations of immigrants are Olim from these countries. Between the Olim and Arab students in the city, 70% of students in Akko speak a lan- guage at home that is not Hebrew. As such, Hebrew instruction is also part of the Youth Futures program. The principal explained that there is a growing need for Youth Futures at her school.

I then met with a parent of a child in the program. Shiran explained that her son, Neharai, who is in sixth grade, has been in the program for three years and has had tremendous growth thanks to Youth Futures. In third grade, he wanted to join Youth Futures. She also dis- cussed more about the population of the school. The Weizman School, which serves grades one to six, is in the center of the new city, close to the Old City walls, in a working-class neighborhood. It is a Jewish public school in what is now a predominantly Arab neighbor- hood, so students attend this school from across the city rather than just from that specific neighborhood. Akko has a lot of new Olim (immigrants) from Ukraine and Russia, but at this school specifically, the populations of immigrants are Olim from these countries. Between the Olim and Arab students in the city, 70% of students in Akko speak a lan- guage at home that is not Hebrew. As such, Hebrew instruction is also part of the Youth Futures program. The principal explained that there is a growing need for Youth Futures at her school.

I then met with a parent of a child in the program. Shiran explained that her son, Neharai, who is in sixth grade, has been in the program for three years and has had tremendous growth thanks to Youth Futures. In third grade, he wanted to join Youth Futures. Surprisingly, the program does not have a negative stigma; on the contrary, many students want to participate because of the spe- cial Youth Futures room – each school has one – and the opportunity to have a mentor. Because of this, there is always a waiting list. Neharai was able to join the program during Hanukkah that year, which he called his own Hanukkah in more ways than one. The pandemic began a few months later, but he continued to receive support from his Youth Futures mentor. Shiran explained that the program has greatly improved Elada’s self-confidence. She said that Elada, his mentor, also has brought other adults involved in his life, such as his tennis coach, into the Youth Futures picture to help him achieve his personal goals. Elada led a workshop series with a social worker about controlling emo- tions, and it was so impactful that Ne- harai refused to miss a single meeting, even after breaking his arm. She said that Neharai is more mature, more so- cial, and more confident, and that Elada is always there to advocate for him. Shi- ran has another son, who is in second grade, and he wants to join Youth Fu- tures when he is eligible next year.

Then, I met with Neharai. He spoke so eloquently, well beyond how the aver- age child his age would speak, and I was very moved by what he said and how he said it. He expressed that before this program, nobody attended his tennis matches, but now he has Elada to sup- port him and help him grow. He was so happy to be a part of the program, and he appeared so confident and well- mannered. He also presented us with a gift that he made, a piece of art that says “love, health,” and “success.” I returned the favor by giving him some Jewish To- ledo items, as I gave the other allocation recipients. He was really surprised and grateful to receive a gift.

Moving forward, Youth Futures wants to continue to grow their impact in Akko. There is clearly a need for their important work. I left feeling grateful for this opportunity to meet with Ne- harai and witness the positive impact of this program.

The Youth Futures classroom at the Weizman School in Akko

The community garden with Noam, Mirit, and Tamir

On September 8, I met with staff and re- cipients of Youth Futures, a program of the Jewish Agency for Israel that JGFT helps to fund, at the Weizman School in Akko. Youth Futures works to empower disadvantaged children between 8 and 12 years old. Each child in the program gets individualized support tailored to them, and this plan is discussed with the child and parents, and then rather than just with the parents. Students commit to this process, which can include home visits from the mentor, workshops, meetings, and more. By sixth grade, the child is learning to set goals and can ex- plain their own growth goals.

I first met with Donar, Shoval, Meital, and Elada who gave a background of Youth Futures at this school and at the other schools in Akko. Youth Futures works at five schools in Akko: two Ar- ab-speaking elementary schools and three mixed Jewish- Arab schools. At each of these schools, they pair Jewish- ish students with an Arab mentor and Arab students with a Jewish mentor. Elada, an Arab-Israeli woman, is the mentor at the Weizman School. I visited the Youth Futures room – each school that partners with Youth Futures de- votes a classroom exclusively for Youth Futures – and learned that because of their status as a school for students with COVID-19, the number of mentors in the program decreased from ten to five across Akko. This means that each school used to have two mentors but now only has one, so fewer kids can be impacted since each mentor works with 16 students. Youth Futures is unique because it is holis- tic – the mentors are in touch with the students in school, after school, during the summer, all the time. “To them, the mentor is their ‘eyes at home.’ And to parents, the mentor is their ‘eyes at school.’” During the worst days of the pandemic, the mentors were designated essential workers and were able to continue their mission to visit the students at home even during strict national lockdowns.

Soon, the school’s principal, Yuta, joined us and explained how thrilled she is to work with Youth Futures. She also dis- cussed more about the population of the school. The Weizman School, which serves grades one to six, is in the center of the new city, close to the Old City walls, in a working-class neighborhood. It is a Jewish public school in what is now a predominantly Arab neighbor- hood, so students attend this school from across the city rather than just from that specific neighborhood. Akko has a lot of new Olim (immigrants) from Ukraine and Russia, but at this school specifically, the populations of immigrants are Olim from these countries. Between the Olim and Arab students in the city, 70% of students in Akko speak a lan- guage at home that is not Hebrew. As such, Hebrew instruction is also part of the Youth Futures program. The principal explained that there is a growing need for Youth Futures at her school. At each of these site visits, I was thanked for the Toledo Jewish support for these life-changing programs and services. Collectively, we can create such a posi- tive and lasting impact for the future and the generosity of our Jewish Federation’s campaign contributors.

Dear Mr. Dickens

In Dear Mr. Dickens, Nancy Churnin and Bethany Stancliffe tell the story of one Jewish reader, Eliza Davis, who was a fan of novelist Charles Dickens but not of his antisemitic caricature in Oliver Twist. Davis felt that the character of Fagin represented a dangerously misleading portrayal of her people, so she wrote to Dickens in hopes of a response. The small drama of this interaction between a famous author and a woman seeking change makes for an inspiring story.

Nancy Churnin is an award-winning children’s book author who writes books about people who have made the world a better place and inspire children to be heroes and heroines. She won the 2021 National Jewish Book Award and 2022 Sydney Taylor Honor for Dear Mr. Dickens, a true story that is the subject of an educational program offered by The Charles Dickens Museum in London.

At a pushcart stall in East New York, Brooklyn, in the spring of 1934, eighteen-year-old Sarah Schwartz bought her mother, Shenka, a green, wooden-handled bottle opener. How could that unremarkable item, and others like it, reveal the untold history of a Jewish immigrant family, their chances and their choices over the course of an eventful century? By unearthing the personal meaning and historical significance of simple everyday objects, Richard Rabinowitz offers an intimate portrait connecting Sarah, Shenka, and the rest of his family to the twentieth-century transformations of American life.

Richard Rabinowitz, a noted historian and museum curator, is the president of American History Workshop. For decades, he has been instrumental in developing new museums and creating lively exhibitions across the nation, including the Lower East Side Tenement Museum, the Birmingham Civil Rights Institute, the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center, and the New-York Historical Society.

Interviewer – Justin Feldkamp

When Lily and Alex entered a packed gymnasium in Queens, New York in 1972, they barely recognized their son. The boy who escaped to America with them, who was bullied as he struggled to learn English and cope with family tragedy, was now a young man who had discovered and secretly honed his basketball talent on the outdoor courts of New York City. That young man was Ernie Grunfeld, who would go on to win an Olympic gold medal and reach previously unimaginable heights as an NBA player and executive. In By the Grace of the Game, Dan Grunfeld, once a basketball standout himself at Stanford University, shares the remarkable story of his family, a delicately interwoven narrative that doesn’t lack in heartbreak yet remains as deeply nourishing as his grandmother’s Hungarian cooking, so lovingly described.

Dan Grunfeld is a former professional basketball player, an accomplished writer, and a proud graduate of Stanford University. An Academic All-American and All-Conference basketball selection at Stanford, Dan played professionally for eight seasons in top leagues around the world, including in Germany, Spain, and Israel.

Justin Feldkamp (interviewer) joined Buckeye Broadband’s BCSN and BCAN in November 2020. He is the host of Inside Out with Justin Feldkamp, a 30-minute interview-style show seen monthly on BCSN. He also helps to select the high school games and the special programming that is aired on BCSN.

All the Jewish NFL players to watch this season

By Jacob Gurvis

The 103rd season of the National Football League kicks off on Thursday, and there are a number of Jewish players to keep an eye on this year.

These are all of the Jewish players on NFL rosters entering Week 1 (listed in alphabetical order) and a few free agents who hope to return to the action soon.

Did we miss anyone? Give us a shout at sports@jta.org. And to keep up with our coverage of these players, be sure to subscribe to our weekly Jewish Sport Report newsletter here.

Michael Dunn, Cleveland Browns offensive lineman

Dunn begins his third season with the Browns as a backup lineman after playing at the University of Maryland — which has one of the largest Jewish student bodies in the country. Prior to his time in Cleveland, Dunn bounced around with other NFL teams, the now-defunct Alliance of American Football and even the XFL. Dunn has appeared in 20 NFL games, including two starts.

Anthony Firkser, Atlanta Falcons tight end

Atlanta Falcons tight end Anthony Firkser runs with the ball during a game between the New York Jets and the Atlanta Falcons in East Rutherford, N.J., Aug. 22, 2022. (Rich Graessle/Icon Sportswire via Getty Images)

After four years with the Tennessee Titans, Firkser heads to Atlanta this season, where he slates in as the second-string tight end. The Harvard alum — who had a bar mitzvah growing up in New Jersey and loves latkes — has started one game in each of the last three seasons and has scored five career touchdowns. Firkser is close with Greg Joseph (see below), a fellow Maccabiah Games alum, from their time together on the Tennessee Titans in 2019.

Josh Rosen, Cleveland Browns quarterback

The former UCLA star and 10th overall pick in the 2018 draft — the first great Jewish quarterback star hope in decades — has spent most of his young career behind high-profile QBs on the depth chart. This season, Rosen begins the season on the Browns practice squad, after failing to earn a roster spot during the preseason despite an opening on the team after its starting quarterback Deshaun Watson was suspended for 11 games over sexual misconduct allegations. In 24 career games, the 25-year-old Rosen has not shined when given his chances: he has a measly 54% completion percentage and more interceptions (21) than touchdowns (12).

Free agents — and one wild card

Two additional players — veteran Nate Ebner and Sam Sloman — are currently unsigned free agents.

Ebner, a safety and special teams player, is a three-time Super Bowl champion who spent eight years with the New England Patriots before joining the New York Giants in 2020. He wrote an essay about his experience visiting Israel for the first time in 2019.

Sloman, a placekicker who was drafted by the Rams in 2020 and has also played for the Titans, was waived from the Pittsburgh Steelers practice squad in May. While at Miami University in Ohio, Sloman’s teammates called him the “Kosher Cannon.”

There’s also Julian Edelman, the retired Patriots star wide receiver who continues to drop hints about a possible comeback. The Super Bowl LIII MVP recently said he feels “extremely better than I did the last year-and-a-half of my career.”

Finally, two Jewish Super Bowl champions fans will not see this season: Mitchell Schwartz and Ali Marpet, who both retired this offseason.

WANTED

BBYO Boys BSN- AZA and Girls B’not Shalom

BBG Chapter Advisors Needed

Were you a part of BBYO? Did you go to Jewish summer camp? Are you looking to influence Jewish teens today?

Then this opportunity of mentorship might be for you!

Job Responsibilities

Advisors work with teens on the ground level to help them plan high quality programs, get involved with the community, and help their chapters to reach their full potential. With advisor oversight, chapter programming is the responsibility of chapter members, allowing the teens to make some mistakes while helping them to learn and grow.

APPLICATIONS NOW OPEN FOR SUMMER 2023!

The EMOJI (“Experience a Memorable Overnight Jewish Initiative”) program was developed summer 2017 to help develop Jewish identity for our children, one camper at a time. EMOJI is designed to make camp affordable, accessible, and meaningful to families in our community through scholarships.

This past summer, 34 campers attended Jewish summer overnight because of the EMOJI program. The Toledo Jewish Community Foundation invested over $71,000 in ensuring future generations’ connections to their Judaism, our Toledo Jewish community, Israel, and beyond.

Dave Tullis, Jewish Federation Community Asset, Safety and Security Manager helps us stay protected with some valuable safety tips.

Increase Level of Vigilance During the High Holidays

Many Jewish communities are seeing an alarming rise in antisemitism across the U.S., including here in Ohio. Both law enforcement and the ADL are reporting that antisemitic activity targeting individuals and Jewish facilities are increasing at a very alarming rate. Experts attribute this spike in violent attacks targeting Jews to the national news cycle reporting on the May 2021 conflict between Israel and Hamas, and the lifting of COVID-19 restrictions. Even prior to these recent events, the FBI’s Annual Hate Crime reporting indicates threats and violent attacks had already been on the rise in the past several years.

While there are no specific threats to U.S. Jewish institutions or individuals — out of an abundance of caution the Jewish Federation of Greater Toledo recommends that the Jewish community increase its levels of vigilance. This is especially true during the High Holidays when people know that Jews congregate. The Jewish Federation of Greater has a positive partnership with our local and federal law enforcement agencies and we appreciate all that they do for our community.

We have sent out correspondences to our local law enforcement leaders reminding them of the high holidays and have asked, for increased patrols and visibility in and around our synagogues, Jewish institutions, and school. This just helps them with their awareness and vigilance.

Security is not just all up to law enforcement, security is everyone’s responsibility. If you are a member of the community, you need to be alert. Do your part in helping to keep our Toledo Jewish community safe by reporting abnormal or threatening behavior to law enforcement and our Community Asset Safety & Security Manager -Dave Tullis, immediately for appropriate action. In doing so you will help to keep our community protected and safe from those who might seek to cause us harm.

Here are recommendations from Secure Community Network, (SCN), Ohio Regional Intelligence Center (ORIC) and your Community Asset Safety & Security Manager (CASSM) our Federation's security providers – on how you can help keep our community safe:

Safety Recommendations

- For all emergencies, call 911 immediately. Do not hesitate or delay. Emphasize the severity of the problem and be sure to report if it is happening near a Jewish facility.
- Remain on the telephone and report as many details as possible to the dispatcher. Tell the call taker what happened and the exact location, time, vehicle license, description of individual(s) of where it occurred. If you can do so safely, take a photograph and/or record the incident and provide to law enforcement upon arrival.
- If you see something or someone that is of concern, ensure you act as quickly as possible. In doing so, your quick action may help in keeping potential problems away from the community.
- Always be on heightened alert and maintain situational awareness to identify potential danger.
- If possible, always walk in pairs, especially after dark.
- Know how you should react to problems and emergencies.
- Be alert to unknown individuals acting outside the norm and vehicles that seem out of place driving or parking near Jewish facilities.
- Talk to your children and teens about safety. It is important to encourage children and teens to trust their own instincts. Teach them that if someone or something makes them feel uncomfortable or if they feel like something is just not right – even if they cannot explain why – they need to walk away immediately and alert an adult.
- SEE SOMETHING SAY SOMETHING!

We Honor Our B’nai Mitzvah

Owen Michael Rapino Kruse will be called to the Torah on Saturday, October 29, 2022 at Temple Shomer Emunim. Owen is the youngest son of Stacey Rapino and the younger brother of Cooper Kruse. He is the beloved grandson of Norman & Eloise Rapino of Sylvania, Ohio.

Owen is an eighth grader at Toledo School for the Arts, where he completes preparatory studies and explores his many artistic talents. Owen has found that Martial Arts is a class he really loves and where he can perform to his potential. Owen has been part of the Boy Scouts of America since first grade, starting as a Cub and working steadily to achieve the rank of Second Class. Since joining Swan Creek Troop 210, he has earned many merit badges and made many new friends. In Scouts, Owen has grown and matured while having a great time. He loves going on campouts and participating in Scouting activities. He frequently performs service projects and volunteers for activities like Scouting for Food. Owen always seems to walk a little taller and have a bigger smile when he is finished with these types of events.

Over the course of his life Owen has had many names. This started with his Hebrew name, Dov, which means bear. Since then he has been called many names: Owie, Monkey, Omen, O-Man, Snacks, Monkey Snacks, Sir Chats-A-Lot, Sleep Ninja, Short Stack (one he is quickly outgrowing!), and Mini Me. And while we still call him these names from time to time, his family is most excited to add his new name of Bar Mitzvah to his repertoire.

Among his other talents are drawing, learning to play multiple instruments, and making new friends. He does not play for any teams but loves many sports, particularly swimming, tennis and bike riding. With his leisure time he enjoys, video games, animals, rollercoasters, making movies, science, history, city explorations, museums, and listening to music.

Owen always has a smile and lends a hand when he sees a need. He is conscientious but loves to be comical to bring joy to others.

Owen’s Bar Mitzvah is given by his family with love. We are eager to see what the next chapter in his book of life will bring. Please join us in congratulating this remarkable young man.
